Friday was No. 2 singles between Le and Chau. Chau rallied from down 6-2, 5-0 to force a thrilling third set. She was two games away from defeat. She hadn't won a game in the set. Yet, North's human backboard kept firing back shots, won seven straight games, and pushed Le to a third set. Le was also tireless and poised in winning the third and decisive set.

"I was so proud of Cindy. Any time you come back from down 5-0 on any level, it is huge feat," said Quintero. "Cindy would not give in. She ran down every ball. Tien served very well for Quincy and she was aggressive throughout the match."

Bukenya and Ban have been steady performers at singles for the Presidents.

"Kalima has a good backhand, and she can also get to the net," said Matthews. "She is a consistent player and she always stays positive. Daisy is just devoted to the team and to tennis. She practices a great deal in the off season. She has a very good forehand."

Le moved up to singles for the North match. She has worked with Maci at first doubles for Quincy. Vivian Tran and Sylvene Tran have been paired at second doubles.

"Tien and Megi are a good combination. They communicate and complement each others' game," said Matthews. "Vivian and Sylvene learned a lot as the season went on. They grew more and more comfortable at net.

The margin between the two teams on Friday was slender and it made for a fine day of tennis.

"You could not have asked for more," said Quintero. "Both teams played great and they made it fun for everyone who watched them."

playing everyone's favorite patriotic songs as impressive floats carrying very special guests follow the sound of music.

The Quincy Flag Day Parade has devoted itself to instilling patriotism and pride in our youth. Each year, more than 1,500 flag-waving youngsters highlight the event as they march down Hancock Street side by side with their youth organization.

The 1.5 mile parade steps-off at 7 p.m. at the intersection of Coddington and Hancock Streets and proceeds north on Hancock Street to Merrymount Parkway, disbanding at Pageant Field.

The celebration portion of the evening held at Pageant Field following the parade consists of the flag raising of an impressive 30-foot by 60-foot version of Old Glory, a patriotic medley, and presentation of awards to the parade grand marshal and the recipient of the Richard J. Koch Youth Service award. The evening is capped off by a 30-minute fireworks display over Black's Creek.

For more information regarding the Flag Day Parade, contact Christopher Rooney at 617-376-1251 or by email at crooney@quincyma.gov.

Council On Aging Tour Of Boston's North End June 6

The Quincy Council on Aging is coordinating a tour of the North End June 6.

Participants will enjoy prosciutto and cheese samplings at Salumeria, visit the Paul Revere House, and have a pizza lunch with choice of salad, three pizza choices and dessert at an Italian restaurant.

There will be a guided tour of the Old North Church, a visit to the Colonial Chocolate Shop (including a taste), and a visit to the colonial printing office to learn from a historian about the important role of printers during the American Revolution.

The trip involves a lot of walking. Cost is $69 per person. Visit the Kennedy Center, 440 East Squantum St., Quincy, to reserve a spot. Payment is due upon registration.

For more information, call (617) 376-1506.

LEGAL NOTICE

CITATION GIVING NOTICE OF PETITION FOR APPOINTMENT OF CONSERVATOR OR OTHER PROTECTIVE ORDER PURSUANT TO G.L. c. 190B, §5-304 & §5-405

Docket No. NO15P1244PM
Commonwealth of Massachusetts
The Trial Court
Probate and Family Court
Norfolk Probate
35 Shawmut Road
Canton, MA 02021
In the matter of:
George Roche
Of: Dorchester, MA
RESPONDENT
(Person to be Protected/Minor)

To the named Respondent and all other interested persons, a petition has been filed by Carney Hospital of Dorchester, MA in the above captioned matter alleging that George Roche is in need of a Conservator or other protective order and requesting that Paul Roche of Long Beach, CA (or some other suitable person) be appointed as Conservator to serve Without Surety on the bond.

The petition asks the court to determine that the Respondent is disabled, that a protective order or appointment of a Conservator is necessary, and that the proposed conservator is appropriate. The petition is on file with this court.

You have the right to object to this proceeding. If you wish to do so, you or your attorney must file a written appearance at this court on or before 10:00 A.M. on the return date of 06/10/2015. This day is NOT a hearing date, but a deadline date by which you have to file the written appearance if you object to the petition. If you fail to file the written appearance by the return date, action may be taken in this matter without further notice to you. In addition to filing the written appearance, you or your attorney must file a written affidavit stating the specific facts and grounds of your objection within 30 days after the return date.

IMPORTANT NOTICE

The outcome of this proceeding may limit or completely take away the above-named person's right to make decisions about personal affairs or financial affairs or both. The above-named person has the right to ask for a lawyer. Anyone may make this request on behalf of the above-named person. If the above-named person cannot afford a lawyer, one may be appointed at State expense.

WITNESS, Hon. John D. Casey, First Justice of this Court.

Oh Glorious St. Theresa
Whom almighty God has raised up to aid and counsel mankind. I invite your miraculous intercession. So powerful are you obtaining every need of body and soul, our Holy Mother Church proclaims you a "Prodigy of Miracles." Now fervently I beseech you to answer my petition (mention here) and carry out your promise of doing good upon earth of letting fall from heaven a shower of roses. Henceforth, Dear little flower, I will fulfill your plea to be made known everywhere and I will never cease to lead others to Jesus through you. Amen
(Say prayer everyday for 9 days. By 4th day, ask for a sign. If prayers are to be answered between 4th and 9th day, you will see a rose in a Magazine, TV picture or receive Roses. You can also get strong scent of roses in home even if no roses are present. Must promise publication. Thank you.) E.S. 6/4

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Still operating under a full head of self-esteem makes you want to tackle a matter you had shied away from. OK. But be sure to arm yourself with facts before you make a move.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) That smart move you recently made caught the attention of a lot of people, including some with financial deals to offer. Use your Taurean wariness to check them out thoroughly.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Shyness might keep you from asking for more information on a potentially important matter. But your curiosity grows stronger by midweek and gives you the impetus for data-gathering.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Taking on too many tasks may not be the wise thing to do at this time. You might overspend both your physical and emotional energy reserves, and have to miss out on some upcoming events.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Try to keep your spending at an affordable level. Splurging now -- especially on credit -- could create a problem if your finances are too low for you to take advantage of a possible opportunity.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) You might not approve of a colleague's behavior during much of the week. But don't play the judgmental Virgo card here. As always, check the facts before you assume the worst.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Coping with an old issue that has suddenly reemerged could take a big toll on your emotional energies. Decide whether you really want to pursue the possibilities here.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) For all your skill in keeping your secrets safe, you could be unwittingly letting one slip out by the way you're behaving in that new relationship. Are congratulations soon to be in order?

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Good old-fashioned horse sense could help you get around those who unknowingly or deliberately put obstacles in your way. Ignore the confusion and follow your own lead.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A puzzling attitude change in a colleague from friendly to chilly might stem from a long-hidden resentment suddenly bubbling up. An open and honest talk should resolve the problem.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) This week, many ever-generous Aquarians might find themselves feeling an acquisitive urge. If so, indulge it. You've earned the right to treat yourself to wonderful things.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Expect to get a lot of advice on how to go about implementing your plans. But once you've sorted it all out, you'll probably find that, once again, your way will be the best way.

BORN THIS WEEK: You enjoy the quiet times of your life, but when you're in the mood, you can throw a party everyone will want to go to.

Hauling Half Of $13.5M Snow Costs

$2.2M For Plowing, Salting Streets

By SCOTT JACKSON

Quincy spent $13.5 million on snow and ice removal during a record-breaking winter, with more than half the total cost going to the hauling of snow to several sites in the city.

Mayor Thomas Koch met with city councillors for more than an hour Monday night to discuss Quincy's efforts to remove the 114 inches of snow that fell in the city this winter; three-quarters of that

Council Rejects $91,000 Cut To DPW Budget

By SCOTT JACKSON

The City Council voted down a proposed cut of more than $91,000 to the Department of Public Works budget introduced by Councillor Doug Gutro, who suggested the cut be made up for with funds from a revolving account to reduce the burden of this winter's snow removal on taxpayers.

The council's finance committee on May 26 approved the Department of Public Works' $5.7 million budget for fiscal year 2016 and several related ones – the Engineering Department's $707,000 budget, $2.01 million for snow and ice removal, $1 million for street-lighting and $6.07 million for trash collection and disposal – in a series of voice votes. The budgets for the Drain Department and the Sewer/Water enterprise fund

Additional $37,000 For Repairs, Maintenance

By SCOTT JACKSON

The City Council's finance committee approved the proposed $21.7 million Fire Department budget for the upcoming fiscal year.

The finance committee approved the budget, which Mayor Thomas Koch proposed at the beginning of May, by voice vote on May 26 during a series of budget hearings. The full municipal budget needs to be approved by the end of June.

The Fire Department's $21.7 million budget for fiscal year 2016, which begins July 1, is an increase of $245,000 over the department's current budget of $21.47 million. The increase covers existing salary obligations and also provides an additional $37,000 for repairs and maintenance. The fiscal 2016 budget does not include money for hiring new firefighters and the overtime line item is level funded.

Hauling Half Of $13.5 Million In Snow Costs

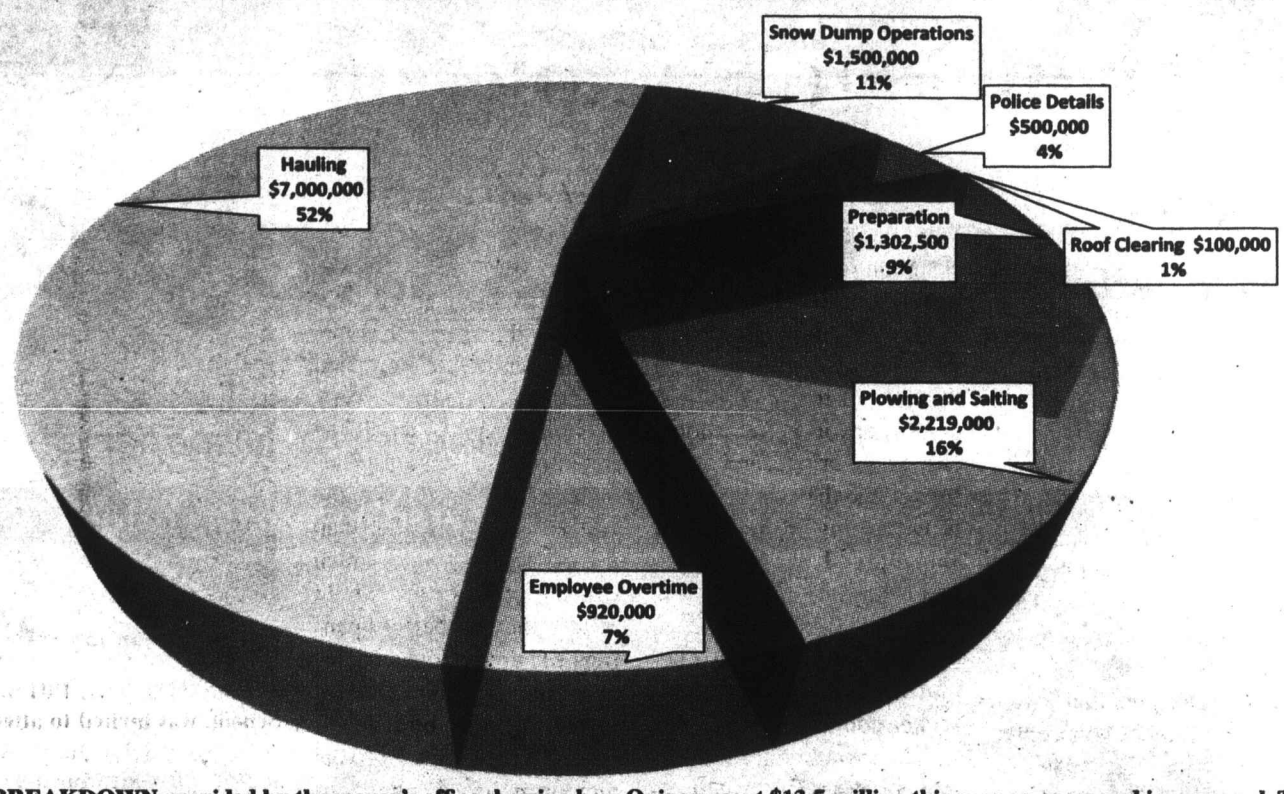
total – 85 inches (more than seven feet) – fell during the three-week period between Jan. 26 and Feb. 15.

The city set up several snow dumps, also known as snow farms, to hold the snow removed from city streets. Those included three major snow dumps at the Fore River Shipyard, Squantum Point Park and Crown Colony, as well as several smaller ones. In total, the mayor said it cost $7 million to move snow to those sites and another $1.5 million on operations inside the snow dumps, such as stacking and pushing the snow. The owners of those sites did not charge the city for the dumping of snow.

"It had never been done before, the kind of operation we attempted," Koch said. "If you take the numbers down and break them out – you take the snow hauling operation out – I'd suggest our plowing, preparation, the normal stuff we do, would suggest it was a very easy winter money-wise... the hauling operation cost all the money."

Plowing and salting city streets cost $2.2 million; preparation for snow removal, including the purchase of 13,000 tons of salt and 8,000 tons of sand as well as fuel costs and vehicle maintenance totaled $1.3 million; employee overtime $920,000; police details, many of which Koch said were related to the hauling of snow, $500,000; and clearing municipal roofs $100,000.



BREAKDOWN provided by the mayor's office showing how Quincy spent $13.5 million this year on snow and ice removal. The lion's share, $7 million, went to hauling snow to dump sites in the city; $1.5 million went to operations inside those snow dumps. Mayor Thomas Koch met with city councillors for more than an hour Monday to discuss the city's snow removal efforts this past winter, when a record-breaking 114 inches of snow fell.

Koch said the city hauled away an estimated 1.7 million tons of snow from streets and sidewalks over the course of the winter, an estimated 85,000 truckloads. Pay to contractors for the hauling effort was determined by the size of the vehicle: 10-wheel trucks were paid $100 an hour, tri-axle trucks $105 and trailers $110, according to documents presented to the council. For the use of loaders, the city paid contractors $75 per hour for a skid loader with trailer; backhoe loaders $105; two-yard loaders $115; three-yard loaders $135; and four-yard loaders $160.

The mayor also noted the city no longer uses a pay-per inch model to pay contractors for plowing city streets. The city used that model for three winters but has used the hourly pay model the last two winters because contractors bid up the price for the per inch cost. This winter contractors were paid $75 per hour for a small plow, $83 an hour for a medium plow and $120 for a large plow. Trucks with a sander could have received an extra $20 an hour.

Cracked Counterweights Delay Bridge Completion

Were Damaged When They Were Delivered

By SCOTT JACKSON

Cracked counterweights will delay the completion of the new Fore River Bridge connecting Quincy to Weymouth.

Work on the new, $244 million vertical lift bridge began in the fall of 2012 and was originally scheduled for completion next year. That timeline has now been delayed because the sheaves – counterweights that lower and raise the bridge's center span – were cracked when they were delivered. Officials don't know how long the project has been delayed.

"We are still reviewing the impacts to the schedule caused by the issue with the sheaves, which are essentially giant gears that serve as counterweights for the raising and lowering of the moveable span of the bridge," Michael Verseckes, the spokesman for the Massachusetts Department of Transportation, said Monday. "When they arrived, there were signs of cracking in them."

New sheaves are expected to arrive on site later this year.

Other work is still ongoing, according to Verseckes. Underway currently is construction of the bridge's two towers and its fender system along the shipping channel. Work is also underway on the control room, the drainage system on the Weymouth side of the bridge, and painting of the lift span, which is happening in the nearby shipyard. The fabrication and testing of electrical and mechanical components for the new bridge has also begun and is on schedule, Verseckes added.

The installation of a permanent drainage system in the rotary on the Quincy side will take place over the next two months, Verseckes said, while approach span work, drainage installation, landscaping and traffic control system installation will happen over the next calendar year.

The new bridge will replace a temporary span that first opened to traffic in 2002. The temporary bridge's appearance has been derided by residents on both side of the Fore River, who have likened it to an erecter set.

The temporary bridge was built after the 1936 bascule bridge over the river was found to be badly deteriorated. That bridge was demolished in 2004.

The new bridge is designed to carry the 32,000 vehicles that travel on Route 3A daily and has an estimated life span of at least 75 years, according to MassDOT. The new bridge's vertical clearance of 60 feet over the water is 10 feet higher than the temporary bridge, which officials have said would reduce the number of openings. The horizontal clearance of the main channel under the new bridge will be 250 feet, compared to the temporary bridge's horizontal clearance of 175 feet.

The new bridge will have four 12-foot lanes – two in each direction – and five-foot bike lanes on both sides. The sidewalks of the bridge – one in each direction – will be six-and-a-half feet wide on the movable section and nine feet wide on the remainder of the bridge.

ROSES FOR THE PRESIDENTS – Hannah Murphy, who is in Grade 8 at Central Middle School, was invited to attend the Memorial Day Observation at the tombs of Presidents John Adams and John Quincy Adams May 25. She was honored to place a bouquet of roses on their tombs, following Mayor Thomas Koch's laying of the wreaths just after the Memorial Parade's commencement. Here Hannah places a bouquet of red roses on the tomb of Second U.S. President John Adams. She placed a similar bouquet on the tomb of his son, Sixth U.S. President John Quincy Adams. Hannah – who was born on Sept. 11, 2001 - was honored to participate.

WOMEN'S FASHION WRISTWATCHES

Women no longer have a compelling reason to wear wristwatches when they can simply scan the screens of their mobile phones to see what time it is. In spite of this, wristwatches have emerged as important fashion accessories that women use as much as bracelets to make jewelry statements. With this in mind, watch manufacturers are designing their watches primarily as fashion accessories for women's wrists. The most compelling of those offerings this year include those that combine leather straps with gold (or other metal) chains. Watches of this type so artfully intertwine the strap with metal that it is difficult to tell whether a woman is wearing a watch and a bracelet or simply a sophisticated timepiece.

If you don't see it here it does not mean we do not carry it! Rogers Jewelry carries a full line of watches like Seiko, Cartier, Pulsar and more... We also have a full line of sports-themed watches like Red Sox, Boston Celtics, Boston Bruins and the Patriots. Contested Races For Every Seat?

If nomination papers are any indication, this fall's city election could feature contested races for every seat on the ballot – from mayor to Ward 6 councillor and every position in between.

As of May 29, 28 residents have pulled papers setting up potential primaries in some races Sept. 22 and showdowns up and down the ballot in the final election Nov. 3.

Of course, just because someone pulls papers doesn't necessarily mean they will actually file them.

However, four weeks after nomination papers became available, Municipal Election 2015 is shaping up to be much more exciting than two years ago. In 2013, there were only two contested races on the ballot. The highlight was Noel DiBona, a political newcomer, who unseated Emily Lebo for one of the three school committee seats and topped the ballot in doing so. Also re-elected were School Committee incumbents Anne Mahoney and Barbara Isola.

The other contested race was in Ward 4 where incumbent Brian Palmucci defeated challenger Michael Healey.

Mayor Thomas Koch two years ago was unopposed for his fourth two-year term. And the other eight incumbent city councillors also got free rides at the ballot box.

That was then.

This is now.

As it currently stands, there would be primaries for mayor, Ward 3 councillor, Ward 5 councillor and maybe Ward 6 councillor. We say maybe because one potential candidate has pulled papers and did not designate whether she's running for Ward 6 or councillor at-large.

Here's a list of who's taken papers out and for what office:

MAYOR: Incumbent Thomas Koch, City Councillor Doug Gutro, School Committeewoman Anne Mahoney, former Mayor William Phelan, Charles Dennehy, Jr. of 610 Willard St. and Richard Turpin, 118 Martensen St. If three or more file, there would be a mayoral preliminary. Two top vote-getters advance to final.

COUNCILLOR AT-LARGE: Incumbents Joseph Finn and Michael McFarland, School Committeeman David McCarthy and Nina Liang, 2 Williams St. Gutro is vacating his council at-large seat to run for mayor. Voters will elect three councillors at-large this fall.

WARD 1 COUNCILLOR: Incumbent Margaret Laforst and John McCone, 111 Darrow St.

WARD 2 COUNCILLOR: Incumbent Brad Croall and James M. Connors, 124 Martensen St.

WARD 3 COUNCILLOR: Ian Cain, 192 South Central Ave., Karl Roos, 8 Park St. and Sandy Verhault, 183 Highland Ave. Councillor Kevin Coughlin is not running for re-election. If three or more candidates file, there would be a preliminary election Sept. 22 and the top two vote-getters would square off Nov. 3.

WARD 4 COUNCILLOR: Incumbent Brian Palmucci and Kevin J. Worley, 2 Douglas St.

WARD 5 COUNCILLOR: Incumbent Kirsten Hughes, Gordon G. DeCambra, 64 Dickens St., and Gina Ostis, 57 Estabrook Rd. If three or more candidates file, there would be a preliminary election Sept. 22 and the top two vote-getters would square off Nov. 3.

WARD 6 COUNCILLOR: Incumbent Brian McNamee, William P. Harris, 74 Ashworth Rd. and Nina Liang, 2 Williams St. Liang has not indicated whether she will run for Ward 6 or at-large.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE: Incumbent Paul Bregoli, incumbent Kathryn Hubley, James V. DeAmicis, 66 Campbell St. and Frank Santoro, 80 Havilend St. Top three vote-getters will win school seats.

The obvious question is:

Why so many potential contested races this year?

A couple things are probably at play here.

In terms of the mayor's race, the winner will receive the first four-year term in the city's history. Voters doubled the term from two to four years as a referendum in the 2013 city election.

Two of the six challengers have run for mayor before. Mahoney challenged but lost in her bid to unseat Koch in 2011. She does not have to risk her school seat by running again for mayor this year. Phelan served six years as mayor before Koch unseated him in 2007. He challenged and lost to Koch in a mayoral rematch two years later.

Gutro had been rumored a mayoral contender for years and jumped in the race in January.

One thing to watch for is whether Dennehey and/or Turpin file their papers. Most would consider them political long shots to win one of the two nominations on Sept. 22. However, if they are on the ballot, they could take precious votes away from the other candidates and could impact the final result on Preliminary Election Day.

The city has had very close elections – including mayor. Turnout is expected to be rather low for the preliminary if history is any indication.

So, if Koch tops the preliminary and the real race is for that second nomination – Mahoney, Gutro and Phelan could be bunched in a very tight race. A few votes here or there could be the difference.

As for what's driving the interest in the council races, there's an open seat in Ward 3. Open seats don't occur very often. Perhaps issues like the downtown revitalization and flood maps are also generating interest elsewhere.

The ballot won't take shape officially until after Tuesday, Aug. 4. That's the last day to submit nominations papers to the city's Board of Registrars.

Fundraising.

This week we're concentrating on the four major candidates for mayor and the open seat in Ward 3.

To date, incumbent Tom Koch has a substantial lead for campaign dollars over Anne Mahoney, Doug Gutro and William Phelan.

The latest reports filed as of May 15th show Koch with a 3-1 lead over his nearest rival – Doug Gutro. Koch has a balance of $192,973 while Gutro reported a balance of $62,779. Mahoney reported a balance of $25,427 while Phelan has $4,100. Gutro and Mahoney entered the race for mayor in January; Phelan announced in May.

Here are some of the numbers for the latest reports for the period May 1 to May 15:

Koch: Starting balance $172,404; raised $45,225; spent $24,660; ending balance $192,973. During those two weeks in May, Koch received donations from 111 donors, including $1,000 each from 23 different donors. (The maximum donation is now $1,000 per donor per candidate per year.) Of those 111 donors, 39 are Quincy residents.

Gutro: Starting balance $53,067; raised $10,432; spent $720; ending balance $62,779. During the first two weeks in May, Gutro received donations from 51 donors, of which 37 are Quincy residents. Gutro also loaned his campaign $20,000 in March.

Mahoney: Starting balance $23,290; raised $2,500; spent $363; ending balance $25,427. From May 1 to 15, Mahoney listed 18 donors, including 15 from Quincy.

Phelan: Starting balance $1,502; raised $2,600; spent $2.50; ending balance $4,100. Phelan listed three donors, including himself ($2,000 loan.) The other two donors are from outside the city.

In Ward 3 where three candidates are running to succeed Kevin Coughlin, Sandy Verhault has the lead in campaign cash.

Here's a look at their campaign finance reports for the May 1-15 reporting period.

Sandy Verhault: Beginning balance $8,970; raised $1,635; spent $1,203; balance 9,402. Verhault listed donations for six different donors; four are from Quincy. Her prior report listed another 55 donors including 40 from Quincy.

Ian Cain: Beginning balance $1,812; receipts $6,344; expenditures $269; balance $8,425. The report did not itemize the breakdown of receipts.

Karl Roos: $1,000 in receipts (loan to campaign); $9.99 in expenditures; balance $990.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS OLD POSTCARD shows Wollaston Beach from near Sachem Street when the beach and roadway were first built along Quincy's tidal coastline in 1908. In the 19th century, the marshes along here were home to windmills that pumped sea water at Josiah Quincy's salt works - the only profitable part of his large farm. He sold the salt to Cape Ann fishermen. The Strand, which is out of view on the right, and Chick Street, further south, were the waterfront roads along here when the marshes were first laid out for house lots, which was just after the Quincy family sold the land in the late 1800's. The state then built this roadway and sandy beach by using fill from Rufe's Hummock and Half Moon Island that was just off the coast of Adams Shore. The ramps on the right went up to bathhouses that were built on pilings along here. Remnants of the old post and rail fence that stretched the length of the roadway still exist. Thank You For Supporting Memorial Day Parade

We would like to thank you for the show of support during our Memorial Day parade in Quincy.

The parade route was filled with people waving the beautiful flag of our nation and they were very energized and proud. When we approached Mount Wollaston Cemetery and saw the crowd it was truly a wonderful site. The residents of Quincy proved that this is the best city in the Commonwealth when it comes to supporting their veterans and they should feel so proud because the veterans of the city are proud of them.

The city of Quincy never forgets what this day means. To have you put aside a few hours to honor the men and women of our military, to remember them and to never forget means more then you'll ever know. Thanks also goes out to Mayor Thomas Koch and his office for all of their support and helping to make everything possible. Thanks also to the city council and school committee members and to all of the city departments that were part of this day and the veterans of this great city for making this day possible. It was a joint effort by all involved.

The residents and government of Quincy are a symbol of team work for the rest of the Commonwealth and beyond. Thank you all and God bless each and every one of you and God bless our veterans and the United States of America.

City Should Retain Fallon As Ambulance Provider

I hear that the City may be losing Fallon Ambulance Service at the end of their current contract period.

It's my understanding that it's up to the Mayor, the Police Chief, and the Fire Chief to decide who gets the contract. As a resident and taxpayer of the City of Quincy, I hope that the City continues it's long relationship with Fallon. Fallon Ambulance, as reported in The Quincy Sun, has given much back to this community over the years.

As someone who can speak with firsthand knowledge, as my Mother needed their services frequently in the last part of her life, Fallon was 100 percent professional and caring.

I hope that the decision-makers, whether it is the Mayor, the Police Chief, the Fire Chief, or the City Council, will allow Fallon to continue to serve the City of Quincy.

More To Memorial Day Than The Start Of Summer

This year's Memorial Day parade and cemetery exercises at Mt. Wollaston was just great. The weather was super and the larger than expected crowds both lined the parade route and gathered up at the cemetery grounds to listen to speakers.

Memorial Day to many is just opening day of summer but to those who served their country in both peace and too often war, Memorial Day is a special day to remember those who sacrificed their all so that each year all of us have our liberties and so that we can remember how we received such a gift.

Much has changed in America over the years and especially in my lifetime. We observe changes that are not always pleasant. I remember when our streets were flooded for these annual rituals of honor to those that came before us. So much of what I took for granted growing up are disappearing.

This year we still know that many are still fighting for us in distant lands in harm's way are unfortunately too often forgotten. We need to remember those who sacrificed their lives and remember also those still doing such sacrificing.

D-Day Invasion Marked Quietly

Allied (British, Canadian and American) invasion armies landed in Normandy and drove nine and a half miles into the vaunted Nazi West Wall early June 6.

There was no organized recognition of D-Day in Quincy, save for some prayer services in churches of all faiths.

"This is no time for celebration," said Mayor Charles A. Ross called out of his bed at 3 a.m. when the news flash of the invasion came.

"This is a time for prayer and hard work," Ross said.

At the great shipyards at Fore River and Hingham it was just another day of toil and sweat. Fathers working at the shipyards, who had sons and daughters in the service, went about their tasks with lumps in their throats and prayers in their hearts.

Open House Saturday At Quincy Homestead

The Quincy Homestead, a National Historic Landmark, will be open for public tours Saturday, June 6, between noon and 4 p.m.

Tours will start approximately on the hour and the half hour beginning at noon. The last tour begins at 3:30 p.m.

All tours are free of charge, but a voluntary contribution would be appreciated. The Homestead is located on Butler Road at the corner of Hancock Street in Quincy.

Dating from 1686, the house is 329 years old. During the 17th and 18th century, this mansion was considered the grandest estate in Quincy. During the pre-Revolutionary War era, it was a meeting place for such patriots as Josiah Quincy, John Hancock and John Adams. It was the childhood home of Dorothy Quincy Hancock, the wife of John Hancock.

Quincy Homestead is operated by The Colonial Dames of Massachusetts in conjunction with The Massachusetts Department of Conservation and Recreation (DCR).

Groups may request a private tour on a date of their choice by phoning 617 742 3190 or emailing dames@nscdama.org.

The remaining public tours this season will be held June 20, July 18, Aug. 1, Aug. 15, Sept. 12 and Oct. 3.

Josiah Quincy House Free Tours Saturday

Historic New England's Josiah Quincy House in Wollaston will open for the season with free tours on Saturday, June 6, from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Built as a country estate in 1770, the Quincy House was surrounded by fields and pastures overlooking Quincy Bay. Its elegant architectural details befit the status of the man who built it, the Revolutionary War leader Colonel Josiah Quincy.

Among the house's unusual features is its "monitor" roof. From this prospect Col. Quincy had a clear view of Boston Harbor, where he watched troop movements during the Revolution. In 1775, he scratched "Governor Gage sail'd for England with a fair wind" into one of the windows of the monitor roof. That pane of glass was carefully preserved by the family, and is on display in the house today.

For generations, the Quincys, like the Adamses, to whom they were related, played important roles in the social and political life of Massachusetts. The family produced three mayors of Boston and a president of Harvard. Much of the historical information pertaining to the house and family was documented in the early 1880s by Eliza Susan Quincy. She kept journals, inventoried the contents of the house, commissioned photographs of the interior, and persuaded relatives to return heirlooms so that the house could become a repository of Quincy family history.

The Quincy House recently underwent a three-year focus that included the repainting of several rooms based on the scientific analysis of the original paint colors. In addition, curators reinstalled rooms based on Eliza Susan Quincy's journal and photographs taken in the 1880s. Curators recently welcomed a fascinating artifact as part of the restoration project. In early May, a rare early nineteenth-century Chinese ivory pagoda arrived to act as a stand-in for the Quincy family's pagoda, which is now in the collection of the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York City. According to Miss Quincy, the pagoda came into the family in 1792 and moved along with them to several of their Boston homes before finally arriving at their home in Quincy in 1876.

The Quincy House will be open from June to October on the first and third Saturdays of the month. The house, located at 20 Muirhead St in Wollaston, also offers school programs, and tours by appointment.

Josephine Hajjar Donates 150 Books To Library

Josephine Hajjar, is 92, a lifelong Quincy resident, and a former employee of the Thomas Crane Public Library, has donated about 150 books to the library.

Hajjar worked as a librarian for more than 30 years, starting when she was in high school, and worked at every branch in the city at one time or another. She is still is an avid reader, and recently decided to start donating her book collection to the Thomas Crane, so that others can also enjoy her collection.

To date, Josephine has donated about 150 books to the library – both fiction and non-fiction. She loves to read just about anything written by James Patterson, Jody Picoult, Janet Evanovich, Danielle Steele, and Nicolas Sparks. Many of the books were works by those particular authors.

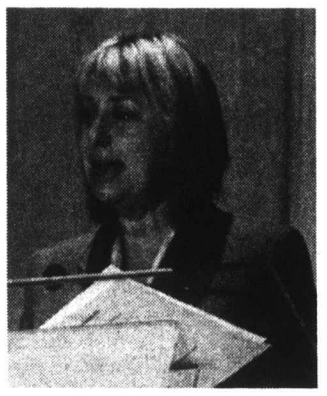
Kathy Keough Receives National Award For Outstanding Public Policy

The Visiting Nurse Associations of America (VNAA) recently recognized Quincy resident Kathy Keough, Government Relations Director for Atrius Health, as Outstanding Public Policy Advocate of the Year during its annual meeting in New Orleans.

VNA Care Network Foundation, a member organization of Atrius Health, nominated Keough for her strong and innovative outreach to policymakers.

"We are incredibly fortunate to have Kathy at the head of our government relations efforts," said Atrius Health Chief External Affairs Officer Marci Sindell. "After VNA Care Network joined Atrius Health, Kathy went above and beyond to bring home health and hospice care issues to the attention of many elected officials."

Keough began working on behalf of VNA Care Network Foundation in 2014, not long after they joined Atrius Health in 2013. In less than a year, Keough has already accrued an impressive list of accomplishments, which include gaining support for Medicaid reimbursement for telehealth, successfully advocating for passage of legislation to establish a statewide palliative care council within the Massachusetts Department of Public Health, and significantly raising the visibility of home health and hospice agencies among legislators and public officials.



KATHY KEOUGH

"Over the past year, I've realized the importance of educating state and federal policy makers about the important role home care and hospice plays in keeping patients at home, where they are best cared for," said Keough. "I am very grateful to the VNA Care Network for their recognition, and I look forward to further advocating on behalf of the 200-plus communities they serve in the Commonwealth."

Keough accepted her award during the National Awards Session at the VNAA 33rd Annual Meeting in New Orleans, Louisiana.

Merrymount Association Kick-Off Party, Flea Market

Ricotta Pie Enjoyed Anytime

By MARIE

During the holiday season, my family usually enjoys a ricotta pie as part of the dessert menu. And I must say that my mother made a wonderful one.

But they're such a delicious dessert that we have enjoy them sporadically.

I found this one for today's recipe which got raves.

RICOTTA PIE

For the cookie crust

1 cup flour
2 tablespoons sugar
1 egg (beaten)
1 stick of unsalted butter
1 teaspoon baking powder

Mix the butter, sugar, egg, flour and baking powder. On a floured board or surface, roll out the crust onto a large pie plate and flute the edges.

For the filling

3 egg yolks (beaten)
1 tablespoon flour
1 cup milk (I used whole milk)
3 egg whites
1 teaspoon baking powder
1/4 cup melted butter
3/4 cup sugar
1 pound ricotta (I used whole milk ricotta)
1 teaspoon vanilla

Beat the egg whites, and set aside. Mix egg yolks, sugar, flour, baking powder, butter, vanilla, ricotta and milk. Fold in the egg whites and pour into the crust.

Bake for 10 minutes in a 375-degree oven, and then reduce oven to 325 and bake for another hour. Refrigerate until it's time to serve and enjoy!

Lentil Chili

By SUZIE

Here is a lighter version of traditional chili that will keep for a few days in the refrigerator. It freezes well also.

It is really worth the money to invest in good freezable (I like Pyrex glass) containers in a variety of sizes so you always have a place to put your leftovers. This is a great meal to come home to after a hard days work, heat it up, and top with some diced avocado and Greek Yogurt for a complete meal.

Fresh cilantro really makes this dish, so make sure you have it handy. After you purchase it, simply roll up in paper towels and place in a Ziploc baggie. It will stay fresher longer.

LENTIL CHILI

2 Tbsp. olive oil
1 medium onion, chopped
1 large red bell pepper, chopped
1 zucchini, chopped
5 cloves garlic, minced
1 tablespoon chili powder
2 teaspoons cumin
1 (16 oz.) bag of brown lentils RINSED well
2 (14.5 oz.) cans diced tomatoes
1 bay leaf
2 (32 oz.) cartons organic vegetable stock or chicken stock
1/3 cup fresh chopped cilantro sea salt and fresh ground black pepper

Instructions

1. In a large soup pot, heat olive oil over medium heat. Add onion, zucchini and red bell pepper; saute the vegetables for 8 minutes or until onion is soft and lightly browned.

2. Stir in garlic, cumin and chili powder; cook for 1 minute.

3. Add lentils, tomatoes, bay leaf and stock. Bring to a boil, lower the heat to medium-low and simmer partially covered for 30 minutes or until lentils are tender. Remove from the heat and discard the bay leaf. Check for seasonings and add sea salt and pepper to taste.

4. Stir in cilantro and serve.

Turkey, Spaghetti Bolognese

By MARIE

Today's recipe is for turkey, spaghetti bolognese sent to me from my niece, Anita who lives in Arizona.

When I made it, I used half of this recipe, because she made it for a group of six.

TURKEY, SPAGHETTI BOLOGNESE

2 stalks celery (diced)
1 large carrot (sliced)
1 small onion (sliced)
1 pound ground turkey
1 pound wheat spaghetti
salt and pepper
28 ounce can fire roasted tomatoes
2 tablespoons Parmesan cheese

In the hot oil, sauté the onion, celery, carrots, salt and pepper. Add the ground turkey and cook until done. Add the tomatoes and cook for 20 minutes.

Cook the pasta according to directions, and add to the sauce and sprinkle with Parmesan cheese.

'Life, Words Of Esther Earl' Book Signing Saturday

Wayne and Lori Earl, parents of the late Esther Earl and founders of the nonprofit organization "This Star Won't Go Out" (tswgo.org), will be making an in-store appearance at Barnes & Noble, Braintree, Saturday, June 6 at 6 p.m.,

The Earls will sign copies of "This Star Won't Go Out: The Life and Words of Esther Grace Earl," a collection of Esther's letters, journals, fiction, and sketches.

Sixteen-year-old Esther Grace Earl succumbed to cancer in 2010, but her star continues to shine. Her story has inspired a charity organization, numerous events and online communities, and several books.

This New York Times bestseller is an uplifting testimony to the power of life.

Essays by family and friends help to tell Esther's story along with an introduction by award-winning author John Green who dedicated his #1 bestselling novel The Fault in Our Stars to her.

This event is free and open to the public.

Barnes & Noble, Braintree is located at 150 Granite St., Braintree.

Council OKs New Compliance Officer, Roofer Positions

By SCOTT JACKSON

The City Council's finance committee approved the creation of two new positions – a compliance officer in the Inspectional Services Department and a roofer in the Public Buildings Department – as part of its ongoing review of departmental budgets.

Those departmental budgets were among several approved by the committee on May 26.

The compliance officer in the Inspectional Services Department has a budgeted salary of $68,000. Jay Duca, the department's director, said that person would be tasked with ensuring all public projects are following federal and state prevailing wage laws. The compliance officer will also ensure that safety standards are being followed and workers are being paid for the job they are doing.

Councillor Doug Gutro asked Duca if the compliance officer would need to be certified as a building inspector. Duca said the person would need to become certified within 18 months, which he said is typical for building inspectors.

"I haven't finished writing the job description yet – that will be done in another week – but I intend on putting down on that description that that person become certified within 18 months," Duca said. "That is typical for any building inspector."

Duca later said the job description would include other duties within the Inspectional Services Department in the event there aren't enough public projects to keep the compliance officer occupied.

Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin asked if the new compliance officer would be able to refer claims to the Attorney General's Office if needed. Duca responded that the person would be able to take any appropriate action.

"The compliance officer will take any appropriate action that is necessary to ensure full compliance in every way," Duca said.

The budget for the Inspectional Services Department was approved with a $25,000 cut that was passed by voice vote. Duca recommended the cut to the assistant wire inspector line item. The position will be made full time with a salary of $61,000; the proposed budget had included an extra $25,000 on top of that, which was the salary for the part time position.

With that change, ISD's budget for the new fiscal year will be $1.35 million, up from $1.21 in the current fiscal year ending June 30.

The proposed budget $5.19 million for the Public Buildings Department was approved with no changes. The department's budget for next fiscal year is up approximately $69,000 over the current fiscal. Included in that increase is the salary of the new roofer and funds to cover existing salary increases.

Also approved at the May 26 were the Purchasing Department's $265,000 budget and the Emergency Management Department's $60,000 budget; those two are level-funded with some increases to cover existing salary obligations.

The last of three budget sessions was scheduled for yesterday (Wednesday) at 7 p.m. in City Hall. The finance committee will review the budgets for the Police Department, Animal Control Department, City Clerk's Office, Mayor's Office and the council that night.

The committee will also review the budget for Quincy Public Schools; the council sets the bottom line for school spending while the School Committee determines how those funds are allocated.

54 Women Take Part In Police Self-Defense Program

The Quincy Police Department, in conjunction with Eastern Nazarene College, recently held a three-night self defense program for women.

The class of 54 students, ranging in age from 16 to 70, learned about awareness, the various methods of escape and the use of physical force. Each student was afforded the opportunity to test their own skills against the "Red Suit mugger."

The next planned program will be in September or October and will be advertised in the Quincy Sun Police page. For more information, contact Quincy Police Lt. Dan Minton at 617-745-5719.

In Sync Dancers Hold Fundraisers For Local Charities

The Elite Dance Company from In Sync Center of the Arts, located at 550 Adams St. in Quincy, had an especially busy season this year. In addition to their yearly competitions and workshops, the dancers on the team organized three separate fundraisers to benefit local charities: The Andrea Rizzo Foundation, D.O.V.E., and Ben Speaks.

Ben Speaks is an organization looking to empower youth and reduce self-destructive behavior that leads to depression, bullying and teen suicide. The organization promotes positive, healthy behavior and coping mechanisms through expressive and healing arts. In Sync's Dance Company held a "Finding Nemo" themed drop-and-shop fundraiser in December, which returned $125.

The Andrea Rizzo Foundation was established in order to raise funds to help children suffering from cancer and special education needs. The main focus of this program is the utilization of dance therapy and expressive movement in hospitals, special education classrooms, and other various medical settings. In Sync's Dance Company raised a total of $305 for this organization.

D.O.V.E., or Domestic Violence Ended, is a Quincy-based organization dedicated to the support of victims of domestic violence. Crisis intervention, danger assessment, safety planning, legal consult and counseling, as well as supportive counseling are all services offered by D.O.V.E. The In Sync Dance Company held a fun "Glamour Girls" drop-and-shop day, which brought in a total of $225.

"It is about so much more than teaching dance," said owner and artistic director Teri Mangiaratti. "It's about being able to use your talent to give back to those who are less fortunate. The Dance Company was more than happy to put in the extra time to run these fundraisers in the name of supporting those who really need it."

In Sync participates in many local community events throughout the year. For more information on future events and their summer and fall programs, visit at www.insyncarts.com or call (617) 328-5678.

QCAP Brain Building In Progress Week

Quincy Braintree Family Network-CFCE, a program of Quincy Community Action Programs (QCAP), celebrated Brain Building in Progress Week with special events for parents and children.

The Brain Building in Progress Campaign was developed by the Massachusetts Department of Early Education and Care and United Way of Massachusetts Bay and Merrimack Valley. The campaign raises awareness of the importance of positive interactions and experiences in children's early years to their cognitive, social, and physical development.

Throughout the week, the Quincy Braintree Family Network-CFCE hosted fun activities designed to promote healthy brain development, such as "Literacy Comes to Life" and Jeff Jam's "Celebration of Music". The highlight of week was "Building Bodies Building Brains" at the Fore River Clubhouse in Quincy. Children and parents ran, skipped, hopped, and jumped through a special obstacle course, encouraging physical activity and healthy bodies as a pathway to children's healthy brain development. Community agencies, such Women Infants and Children (WIC), Quincy's Commission on the Family's Parent-to-Parent Newborn Home Visiting Program and Parent-Child Home Visiting Program, and QCAP's Head Start and Financial REACH Center, joined the celebration and provided information and resources for families.

budgets were not voted on at the request of Council President Joseph Finn, who said officials need to reconcile several line items that may have been over budgeted.

Before voting on the DPW budget, Gutro, who is challenging Mayor Thomas Koch in this year's election, suggested cutting $91,691 from the budget. By doing so, he intended to have the administration make up for the cut by transferring the $91,691 in unencumbered funds from a DPW revolving account to the department's general fund budget.

The revolving account, established by a council vote in February 2012, has been funded primarily by corporate donations and has been used to pay for events related to the annual National Public Works Week, the installation of solar powered trash receptacles in Quincy Center and periodic mailings from the DPW to city residents among other expenditures. Public Works Commissioner Daniel Raymondi is responsible for allocating funds in the account.

Gutro acknowledged there was value to those items, but said he wanted to provide relief to residents after the city spent $13 million on snow removal this winter, about $11.3 million more than the $1.76 million in the current fiscal year's snow removal budget.

"There is value to many of these things but $13 million or a portion thereof will fall on the tax rate, whether it's this year or successive years. As meager as the $91,000 is, it's something. Let us begin to buffer that impact," Gutro said. "We need to do something and that's why I'm doing it."

The suggested cut failed in a 6-2 vote, with only Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci joining Gutro in supporting it. (Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall was absent from the May 26 meeting.)

Finn, who joined Gutro in opposing the creation of the revolving account in 2012, voted against the $91,000 cut. He did so because the ordinance that established the revolving account prohibits those funds from being used for employee salaries or compensation to contractors, except those who offer safety training.

"I'm going to oppose the cut recommended because the premise that it's based on can't work," Finn said. "If there are issues with this [revolving fund] those should probably be proposed in an amendment in relation to the ordinance itself. That would be the best way to target it since there is just no way of replacing what would be cut from this particular fund."

Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin said the revolving fund has been used to pay for expenses that otherwise would have been charged to the general fund budget.

"Quite honestly I'm not going to support the cut because the fund was created with a particular purpose in mind for the donations to be used, which is essentially offsetting costs that would otherwise be foisted upon the taxpayer," he said. "I believe there is a good utilization of this fund that has been demonstrated over the years it has been in place."

Palmucci said he would have opposed the cut but decided to support it after hearing the department would not hold any events for National Public Works Week this year. He added that Sunshine Scavenger, the city's trash contractor, would still provide annual payments of $30,000, which would replenish the fund and could be used to pay some costs associated with the periodic mailings.

"I'm concerned [National Public Works Week] is not happening and we would have this money sitting in the fund," Palmucci said. "I don't see how I can support leaving this money in the fund when we have a $13 million snow and ice deficit and leaving it up to the taxpayers to foot that bill. Even if it's over three years or we borrow it or bond it – whatever it is – it's going to fall to the taxpayers."

$95.5 Million School Budget Before Council

By MIRIAM JOSEPH

The Quincy School Committee held a hearing Monday at the Coddington Building to hear open forum comments and concerns from the public regarding the proposed $95.5 million budget for the school department's fiscal year ending June 30, 2016.

As there were no questions or discussion presented by the public, the proposed budget was brought before the Quincy City Council at Council Chambers last night (Wednesday).

And on June 10, a Budget Approval Meeting of the School Committee will be held at the Coddington Building at 7 p.m. where Quincy Public Schools Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro indicated that opportunities still exist to speak to the proposed budget, but "That's almost a formality, based on all the work that has previously been done in sub-committees."

DeCristofaro said new spending initiatives include the technology and engineering program at the middle school level.

"The committee had put that in as a grade 8 initiative and through this budget we will be able to extend that technology and engineering program to grade 6, 7 and 8. And it will be throughout the five middle schools, grades 6, 7 and 8."

Housing Authority Landlord Seminar June 19

Sheriff Bellotti Donates $2,500 To 'Teen Success' Program

Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti recently stopped by to visit with teens at the Germantown Neighborhood Center and presented a donation check for $2,500 for the Center's "Teen Success" program.

"The students who participate in 'Teen Success' get coaching on a lot of fronts," said Executive Director Kathy Quigley. "They get guidance in applying to college and with navigating the financial aid process. The program also helps them get ready for entering the work force. They learn about resume writing and we do mock interviews with them.

"There's also one-on-one mentoring with local business professionals. Sherriff Bellotti's generous contribution will go a long way to help support the students of 'Teen Success.' We thank him and the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office for their generosity and concern."

"The Germantown Neighborhood Center does such fantastic work day in and day out, and we see this donation as an investment in the future of these kids," Bellotti said.

One rising star of 'Teen Success' is William Young who is graduating from Quincy High School this year. A participant in programs at the Germantown Neighborhood Center since third grade, William moved up the ranks at the Center from camper to peer leader to volunteer and now to staff. A gifted football player, he has been accepted to several colleges and is currently weighing his options. William intends to major in criminal justice.

"We're really excited about William's future," Quigley said. "The support of Sheriff Bellotti and his office is greatly appreciated and will help 'Teen Success' produce even more positive outcomes for students."

Union: Quincy Mutual's Situation 'Disheartening'

OP ED

By PAUL MCGRATH

It certainly was disheartening to read a commentary written by K. Douglas Briggs of Quincy Mutual on recent union protests in downtown Quincy.

Quincy Mutual and Mayor Koch seem to have forgotten that we in local labor supported the development of Quincy Center throughout its approval process. The agreement that Mayor Koch signed, and in which Quincy Mutual was a party to the Project Labor Agreement as a partner in the StreetWorks project, promised to have union labor on the project. Our trades always keep their promise of doing projects on-time and on budget. Why can't Quincy Mutual and Mayor Koch keep their original promise as well?

Briggs thinks that his company is the only one that has done good work in the community. Labor has built the largest new buildings in downtown Quincy using their own pension funds and using, obviously, union labor. But Briggs doesn't know that local labor also donates large sums of money to non-profits. We frequently donate our labor at no charge to nonprofits that are in need of help. The Southwest Community Center, Germantown Senior Center food pantry, McKay Playground and Veterans park are just a few of the projects where local labor donated their time and hard work. Our local labor has always been committed to growing Quincy and making it stronger.

We also provide training, careers and benefits for thousands of local men and women, 5,000 of which live right here with their families in Quincy and are giving back to their community. How many of Brigg's employees are actually living and working in Quincy? How many actually work in their headquarters on Washington Street?

To date, Quincy Mutual has hidden behind their general contractor Dellbrook, who hires workers below the standard wage. We provide our members standard wages, healthcare benefits and all the protections afforded to them under the state's labor law. Any of our contractors or subcontractors that bid on a project always makes sure that their workers are protected. Quincy Mutual claims that their bidding process is open and fair. And yet, they have failed to provide the list of who else has bid on their project to the South Shore Building Trades president. Normally we would use that time to vet the contractors on the list and make sure there are not any bad or "repeat offender" contractors on the list. Why are they hiding their bid lists?

The Quincy building trades are eager to work on this project and continue our proud tradition of building Quincy's future. We can't understand why a local company such as Quincy Mutual would be anything but supportive of that and working to make sure it is possible.

Paul McGrath is a member of the Pipe Fitters Local 537.

Early 20th Century Medicine Topic June 10

History enactor Janet Parnes will offer a dramatic and comic view of the curious, quaint, and remarkable aspects of early 20th century medicine at a Quincy Historical Society program, Wedneday, June 10, at 7 p.m. at the Adams Academy, 8 Adams St.

Parnes' character, Miss Myrtle Mills, a fictional woman who has gracefully endured a raft of illnesses, will delve into topics that include medical theories of the time, doctor's prescriptions that were worse than the disease, kitchen-cupboard remedies, new contraptions, and the joys of "modern" dentistry. Parnes' character will also detail the astonishing advances that were starting to be made, from new understanding of diseases to the first true wonder drugs. And she will relate the achievements of Dr. Elizabeth Blackwell and the first generations of women physicians.

The evening will also be Quincy Historical Society's Annual Meeting. Officers and trustees for the coming year will be elected.

Everyone is welcome to attend. There is no admission charge.

QHS 'Spring Showcase' Friday, Saturday

Quincy High School will presents its "Spring Showcase" featuring talent from students in all of the arts, performing comedy; singing; dancing, monologues and more.

The performances, under the direction of Thomas Doucette, Fine Arts Teacher, will be held at the Lloyd Hill Performing Arts Center, Quincy High School, 100 Coddington St., Friday, June 5 and Saturday, June 6 at 7:30 p.m. Admission is free although a $5 donation is appreciated.

Going into this winter, the city had budgeted $1.76 million for snow and ice removal. State law allows communities to deficit spend on those costs and the city has a deficit of $11.74 million to pay off from this winter, which could be amortized, or spread out, over three years.

Koch said the determination on how the deficit would be paid off would likely be made this fall. By that time the city will know how much it has available in free cash – Koch said that figure would be about $2.3 million – and how much the Federal Emergency Management Agency will provide to communities. FEMA has said it would cover some costs associated with the Jan. 26 blizzard, but state officials are appealing for reimbursements for other snowstorms from this past winter.

Councillors had their chance to comment of the city's snow removal effort this winter, and most credited municipal workers for the jobs they did dealing with this winter's snowstorms. Some councillors also brought specific issues to the mayor's attention.

Councillor Doug Gutro, who has questioned the city's spending on snow and ice removal in recent weeks, asked Koch to explain how the decision to haul away snow was made.

"Can you kind of walk through the evolution on the decision making on hauling and all of that – when we said we're going to haul and where we're going to haul from. How were those decisions made?" Gutro asked.

Koch responded that the city hauls from certain areas on a regular basis and decided to expand that operation this year because there was not enough room on city streets for all the snow that fell in January and February.

"On an annual basis in regular snowstorms we do hauling. We will haul from some of the business districts, around the T stations, around the schools, some of the snow routes to and from the schools. We do a pretty good job with those walking routes for kids going to school. That happens on a regular basis," Koch said.

"What happened during this [winter] was there was nowhere to push the snow. If you decided to push the snow further on some of these streets, we were pushing the snow up onto people's lawns and probably their porches and front stairs...think of a 25-foot wide street and seven feet of snow you've got to push from that street how tall those rows would be going up and down those streets.

"The decision to do the hauling was an easy one. There was nowhere to put the snow."

The first priority, Koch added, was getting main roads cleared from curb-to-curb before working on side streets in neighborhoods.

Gutro also asked Koch if the city had a total monetary amount for the claims submitted by private property owners for damages caused during snow removal.

Koch said more than 100 such claims had been submitted, but there is no estimate on how much they would cost the city. Those claims will be paid out of the city's judgments account, which communities can deficit spend on but can't be amortized over three years like snow and ice removal costs.

Councillor Michael McFarland, chairman of the council's finance committee, said the decision to haul snow away was the correct one.

"The decision to make public safety come first was the right decision," he said. "If we had decided not to haul [from] the streets and spend $5 or $6 million less at the end of the day people wouldn't have been able to get out of their yard. They wouldn't have been able to get to work. After a couple weeks, that gets old real fast."

in the parade to share the honors.

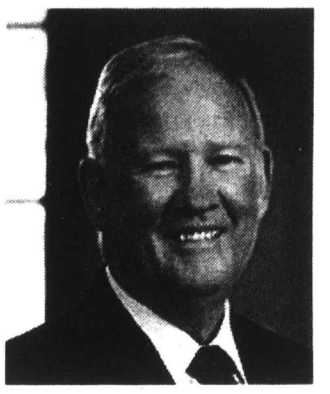
"The men and women of Mrs. Glavin's generation quite literally saved the world, and I'm thrilled that this year we'll be honoring the service of those who selflessly fought the battle on the home front during those years," said Mayor Thomas Koch, who is Flag Day Chairman.

Glavin expressed tremendous pride and gratitude to be honored as the Grand Marshal and is elated that her sister will be part of the parade. In addition to celebrating Flag Day, Glavin added, "This is the 70th anniversary of the victory of World War II – something we should all celebrate."

The American Rosie the Riveter Association was founded by Dr. Frances Carter in 1998 to honor the working women of World War II. The iconic "We Can Do It" poster, created by J. Howard Miller, captured the spirit and devotion of so many women who answered the call to serve on the home front. Today, the Association has a membership of 4,400 spread across 20 states.

The Youth Service Award is named for the late Richard J. Koch, founder of the Koch Club and originator of the Flag Day Parade and

BERTHA GLAVIN



EDWARD KEOHANE

Celebration when it was first held in Quincy more than six decades ago.

Ed Keohane, son of company founder Cornelius Keohane, has worked at Keohane since 1964. He has supported the Flag Day Parade & Celebration for decades, never hesitating to answer the call to support an event that provides the opportunity to instill patriotism in our youth while giving them the chance to participate in a beloved community tradition.

"Ed is the personification of community – his commitment to our City, his passion for its future and his dedication over the years to our young people are all nothing short of extraordinary," said Mayor Koch. "He's done so much without ever seeking recognition, but it is richly deserved."

Added Keohane:

"The Flag Day Parade and Celebration has become a signature event for our city and reminds us of what a special place Quincy is to live, work and play," said Keohane. "I am truly honored to receive an award that celebrates the legacy of Dick Koch: someone who did so much for our city without fanfare."

The Flag Day Parade steps-off at 7 p.m. from Coddington Street in front of Quincy High School, making its way down Hancock Street to Merrymount Parkway, disbanding at Pageant Field. Honor guards, marching bands, elected officials and specialty units join the line of march as well as thousands of flag-waving youngsters.

The events honoring Old Glory are capped off by a dazzling fireworks display over Black's Creek at approximately 9 p.m.

Ask Barbara Graceffa: Secretary Of The Interior

After sewing a new duvet cover and pillows for my bed, I have less than two yards of fabric left and would like to use it toward custom window treatments for two 36 x 60" double hung windows. What do you suggest with such small yardage? Merit

You have a few options. When it comes to valances, you can sew simple straight ones or go with something fancier and use the yardage toward layered scalloped valances as either the front or back-layer fabric. You could sew or add ready-mades under the valances, too – like lace curtains or panels.

If you like balloon shades, try using your leftover fabric as the main fabric. Or use a secondary fabric on the reverse so you'll see it when it is tied up; also use it for the ties, if you go this route.

Finally, you could make or buy panels for the windows and use your decorator fabric as an added bottom border, vertical edge on the two insides of the panels per window, or vertical stripe a few inches in from the panel inside edges.

What ideas do you have for ceiling options to install in my new large family room addition? Ron Decorators consider the ceiling the "fifth wall" and often share the feeling that the ubiquitous white paint is overdone! First, you can paint the ceiling the same color or one tint lighter than the wall color. Second, since you describe it as a large room, add real or faux beams. Lastly, head to the home improvement store and look at decorative ceilings. For example, options from Armstrong include laminate wood-look ceiling planks in many finishes, tin look squares (at a fraction of the cost of replicas or real tin), and paintable, metallic, or drop ceiling panels in many textures.

Some of these options are ideal for cracked, pealing, or otherwise damaged ceilings, too.

Do you have a decorating problem needing a professional solution? Send your questions to Secretary of the Interior at barbara@sec-interior.com.

At the May 26 meeting, Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci asked Fire Chief Joseph Barron about capital needs the department may need that wouldn't be included in the budget. Barron said the top item on his wish list is two new engine trucks, one for fire headquarters and another for the West Quincy station. Those would cost about $600,000 each and would allow the department to move the 2007 models at those stations to less busy ones.

"Those vehicles I speak of are 2007 vehicles. I would take those and put one in Squantum and one in Houghs Neck so they would remain serviceable. [There is] a little less activity in those firehouses," Barron said.

The fire chief also said it's important to have a second set of turnout gear available for firefighters to wear and the department is on track to be able to do so.

"The terrible winter we went through, you go out on the trucks. You get out and the gear gets wet. You have to have another set of gear to wear. Not just for comfort, but if you've ever picked up a wet potholder and tried to grab a pan with it, you'll feel that heat is conducted right through that wet material," Barron explained.

"So you can't have firefighters with wet gear. It's very important we have that second set of gear. We're on track to do that. I think we're in a good spot."

Palmucci also asked about the impact new growth in the city would have on the Fire Department moving forward, noting it is a concern his constituents have expressed when new developments are discussed.

"The building permits that are being issued, the housing stock we're building is denser than it was previously and we're allowing the face of the city to be changed in a significant way, I think," Palmucci said. "I'd just like your thoughts on what you think that means for the Fire Department moving forward when we build denser units and we continue to build and build and build."

In response, Barron said the department covers the city well with its current firehouses. The new buildings being constructed are safer than those they replace, he added, but the department may need to purchase a tower ladder truck.

"We're very fortunate with where our firehouses are spaced right now. We cover the city quite well," Barron said. "The buildings that you speak of are much safer than the property, perhaps, they are replacing. We rely on [Inspectional Services Director Jay] Duca and his team to do the proper inspections to make sure fire suppression systems are installed properly. We follow up with the Fire Department's inspections. The buildings themselves are very safe properties.

"If I had something on my wish list, I would look for a tower ladder, which would give us an exterior elevator up to these buildings. Unfortunately, the age of the [firehouses] we have right now – we couldn't fit one in the building."

A planned study of the city's public safety buildings could include potential sites for new firehouses that would be able to accommodate larger apparatus such as tower ladders, Barron added. The mayor has also said he would introduce a capital improvement plan this spring to upgrade municipal buildings, including firehouses.

Palmucci additionally asked about the department's ability to put Rescue 1 in service full time.

"The more we can get Rescue 1 in service, the better it is," Palmucci said.

Barron said the rescue truck was in service about one-third of the time this current fiscal year. Putting it in service full time would cost approximately $500,000 annually, he estimated.

Finance Committee Chairman Michael McFarland asked how many firefighters would be needed to staff the rescue truck full-time. Barron said it would take 12 firefighters to do so – four shifts with three firefighters each.

McFarland also asked if the department would be able to accommodate that with the firefighters currently on staff. Barron said he would rather bring on new firefighters for that role, but that would be the more expensive option so it would end up being a mix of new hires and additional overtime.

"Personally I would rather hire more than to rely on overtime. I'd rather create jobs and bring more young people into the fire service," Barron said. "That's probably a more expensive alternative."

Food Truck Festival Sept. 26 Planned For Merrymount Park

By SCOTT JACKSON

Twenty food trucks offering a variety of dishes are expected to take part in a food truck festival planned for Merrymount Park on Sept. 26.

The event, known as the Quincy Food Truck Festival, will take place at the park from noon to 5 p.m. that day with a VIP hour beginning at 11 a.m. The festival is being organized by Food Truck Festivals of America in coordination with the Quincy Park Department.

"It will be a great event," Chris Cassani, the director of the city's Park Department, said. "The company that is running this has done these all over the country, including the Boston area, but not on the South Shore."

The event will also feature a beer tent, but Cassani said the festival would primarily be about food and not drinking.

"It's not a beer event where you have some food on the side," Cassani said. "The food is the star."

The city's Board of License Commissioners will have to approve a one-day license to allow the serving of alcohol during the festival. Cassani said the board will likely consider the request on June 23. The company hosting the event will also work with the Health Department to ensure the food trucks are in compliance with the health code.

Tickets to the event can be purchased online at foodtruckfestivalsofamerica.com.

Quincy Symphony Orchestra To Perform At Quincy ArtsFest

The Quincy Symphony Orchestra will perform a free show at this year's 18th annual Quincy ArtsFest.

For the first time ever, the Quincy Symphony Orchestra will perform outside under the lights at Adams Field in the evening of Saturday, Sept. 19th.

"We are excited about participating in the ArtsFest and look forward to it very much," said symphony conductor Yoichi Udagawa. "We've put together a program of gorgeous classical music as well as much beloved selections from Broadway and the movies, and coupled with the setting, we think this will be a spectacular night for the arts."

For the past 17 years, Merrymount Park has transformed into a center for the arts every third weekend of September. This year, Adams Field will host the two-day event for the first time. Artists from Quincy and the South Shore display their artwork, and their will be family friendly events throughout the weekend.

"The Quincy Symphony is one of the most talented orchestras in Massachusetts," said Mayor Thomas Koch. "Their passion and dedication to the arts is displayed in every performance. We are proud to have them as part of our community and excited for them to join the ArtsFest."

The 18th annual Quincy ArtsFest is scheduled for the weekend of Sept. 19th and 20th. For more information, contact the Quincy Park Department at 617-376-1251.

Social Security Supports Cancer Survivors Day

By KRISTEN ALBERINO
Social Security Public Affairs Specialist

In 2015, more than a million people will be diagnosed with cancer. This alarming statistic affects people and families all over the world. On June 7, we observe National Cancer Survivors Day in the United States. In support of this day, Social Security encourages checkups, early detection, and awareness, while honoring the survivors who have gone through this battle and defeated the disease.

Social Security stands strong in our support of the fight against cancer. We offer services to patients suffering from this disease through our disability program and our Compassionate Allowances program. Compassionate Allowances are cases with medical conditions so severe they obviously meet Social Security's disability standards, allowing us to quickly process the cases with minimal medical information.

There is no special application or form you need to submit for Compassionate Allowances. Simply apply for disability benefits using the standard Social Security or Supplemental Security Income (SSI) application. Once we identify you as having a Compassionate Allowances condition, we'll expedite your disability application.

Social Security establishes Compassionate Allowances conditions using information received at public outreach hearings, from the Social Security and disability Determination services communities, from medical and scientific experts, and based on our research. For more information about Compassionate Allowances, or to view the conditions currently listed, visit www.socialsecurity.gov/compassionateallowances.

If you think you qualify for disability benefits based on a Compassionate Allowances condition, visit www.socialsecurity.gov to apply for benefits.

Flood Maps 'A Work In Progress'

By SCOTT JACKSON

The Federal Emergency Management Agency is still working on new flood maps for the city and will continue to do so over the next six weeks, according to the engineer who oversaw Quincy's appeal of those maps last year, and residents are being asked to provide comments to the agency during as part of the process.

FEMA's June 2014 flood maps added some 1,400 properties to flood plains and another 2,700 already in flood plains were placed into higher risk zones. Property owners with federally backed mortgages are required to purchase flood insurance if their building is in a flood plain. The day after those maps were implemented the city filed a letter of map revision challenging them. In January, FEMA released new maps that would remove 550-650 properties from flood plains and put 1,200 to 1,300 in lower risk zones.

Residents had a chance to learn more about the new maps and the process going forward at a workshop held May 27 at Quincy High School, with engineers and insurance agents on hand to answer questions.

Joseph D. Shea, a senior vice president at Woodard & Curran, gave a presentation on the city's appeal and the next steps residents should take between now and when the new maps are finalized in August or September, and fielded more than a dozen questions from those in attendance.

Shea said his firm has continued collecting data since the letter of map revision was filed last June. It will be submitted to FEMA before a July 22 deadline to do so. Residents, he added, should submit comments as well to bring issues to the city's attention.

"The city is definitely submitting all of the city's comments right before July 22. We did a lot of work up to June 10, 2014, and we submitted all that. We continued doing elevation certificates. We continued to investigate neighborhoods, streets and parcels. We have accumulated more information we're submitting as a polishing step to make sure all of the information the city has accumulated through this process gets on those maps," Shea said.

"We didn't stop on June 10, 2014. We continued, which is why public comments are also important because we've learned a lot since June 10. We looked at almost 18,000 parcels. You probably spent an hour thinking about your very own parcel. If you submit a public comment and share that information that may trigger something for us that we can make sure we include in the city's final version."

"It is a work in progress," Shea added later.

A sample comment letter for residents, including the address to mail them to, is available on the city's website at quincyma.gov. The city is asking that residents submit copies of those letters to the mayor's office, the Department of Inspectional Services and the Engineering Department. All correspondence to FEMA should reference "FEMA Case 15-01-0874P, Quincy MA."

The new maps can be viewed online on the city's GIS property viewer by going to mapgeo.com/quincyma and selecting "2015 Quincy's Proposed Flood Zones" in the "Thematic Overlay" dropdown menu. The flood maps that went into effect in June 2014 can be viewed on the site also, as can the ones from 2006 and 2012. The maps are also viewable at the city's Engineering Department, 55 Sea St., during business hours. It's recommended that residents use the online map to determine if their property is in or out of a flood plain, because the online map provides greater detail.

"You could be out of the flood plain by two feet," Shea said.

Shea was asked if the city appealed flood maps for neighborhoods around the Town Brook. He said his firm did not appeal those areas in the letter of map revision, but FEMA is looking into those areas. The agency's maps, he explained, did not account for the brook's new culvert in Quincy Center.

"The city looked at Furnace Brook and Town Brook but didn't submit any appeals on that. It's a different modeling package for the riverine section... we've asked FEMA to look into certain areas – not as a LOMR but FEMA is doing their own investigation," Shea said.

"There are areas around Town Brook, in my opinion as an engineer, that don't reflect the changes the city has made in relocating Town Brook. There have been some flood benefits with the relocation of Town Brook but they're not reflected in the way FEMA does their modeling. We brought that to their attention."

Another resident asked Shea if the flood maps accounted for other flood control measures installed on the brook more than a decade ago. Shea replied that he brought those measures – an overflow structure that carries water along Burgin Parkway from the entrance of Crown Colony to behind the Star Market on Granite Street and a deep rock channel that carries excess water from that location to Town River –to FEMA's attention during a meeting on April 14.

Fundraiser June 13 To Benefit Disabled Veterans Fishing Trip

Harvey's Salt Water Fishing Club will hold a fundraiser Saturday, June 13 to benefit the annual Disabled Veterans Day Salt Water Fishing Trip.

The fundraiser will take place at the Town River Yacht Club, 60 Mound St., Quincy, Saturday, June 13 from 7 to 11 p.m.

The event includes music by Mike Murphy, local DJ, a hot and cold buffet, raffle prizes and a cash bar.

All proceeds will go toward hosting a benefit to support the 59th Annual Disabled Veterans Fishing Outing. The outing will be held in mid-July.

"We need your help and support to provide our disabled veterans with one day of outdoor fishing," said Mike Cheney, a fishing trip organizer and former city councillor.

This year marks the 59th Harvey's Salt Water Fishing Club has provided disabled veterans with a fishing outing. "For some disabled veterans this is the only day trip out of the hospital. They have given so much for our country; the least we can do is provide one day on the water fishing," Cheney said.

Members of the Harvey's Salt Water Fishing Club and friends of disabled veterans have hosted this event for 58 years. Volunteers from all walks of life including local lobster men take the day off from work to help make this a special day for disabled veterans.

"It would be impossible to recognize everyone involved in making this event possible; however, on behalf of all the disabled veterans from area hospitals I would like to thank everyone involved whether you donate a dollar or assist on Vets' Day," Cheney said. "I would like to thank you for your past help and support.

"Your involvement has made a difference. This year, we need your help more than ever," he added.

Tickets are $15 at the door. Proceeds will go to offsetting the cost of running the Vets Day event. There are sponsor forms available as well for anyone who wishes to sponsor the event.

"We have been proud to be a part of this exciting event and we would like to thank everyone for keeping this tradition alive," Cheney said.

Merrymount Students Win 5th Grade Robotics Title

Quincy Hyper Robotics invited the 5th graders throughout the school system to join the Quincy Public Schools Robotic Challenge this year. It involved many hours of creative preparation and research. The culminating event was fantastic, and the students loved every minute of it. Merrymount Elementary School received the Championship trophy. Part of their project was to raise money for Heifer International's Read to Feed program. The team is hoping to purchase a llama, some ducks and chicks for families in third world countries. If you would like to donate go to fundraise.heifer.org/fundraise?fcid=454918.

The school held a "championship parade" for the students - the trophy was carried through the halls as the rest of the school cheered for their school robotics champions the "Merrymount Mechs."

It was an amazing school spirit experience. The fourth grade students are so excited to be in line for this very special opportunity next year.

16 Seasons: The Kittens Are Coming (Again) To Quincy Animal Shelter

By SANDRA SINES

It happens every year, same time, as soon as the snow begins to melt and the days get longer, you know it will only be a matter of time before the phone starts ringing at The Quincy Animal Shelter. "Do you have any Kittens?"

Not yet, but give it a few weeks and we will have plenty.

"It is like Christmas," says QAS Shelter Director Kit Burke. "You know it will be here and you do your best to prepare for it, but you are never totally ready."

Each year the shelter accepts, cares for and finds home for nearly 100 kittens. "That is in addition to the adult cats and dogs we care for all year long," Burke says.

Kitten season occurs each spring after the winter is over mating season begins. Unwanted kittens are a huge problem in Quincy. QAS and other shelters and rescue groups have certainly made an impact on controlling the unwanted pet population, but the need still exists for shelters to care of unwanted kittens.

Why is kitten season still a problem? Studies suggest that a female cat can produce 100 kittens in its lifetime and each offspring can produce the same. There is no way to give exact numbers but it is still far too many kittens to put into the shelter system each year.

Kitten season is usually April to October. Depending on the winter weather it can go on even longer. A milder winter may mean an early spring and an early season. It starts slow; a litter here and there. A pregnant stray or two and then bam! One after another! Before you know it, dozens of kittens need homes.

Although most times, the moms can handle childbirth on their own, there are times that things go bad and both the mom and the kittens' lives are in danger. When kittens are born outside they are very vulnerable. They may not thrive and need expensive vet care. This cause a tremendous drain on shelter budgets and the outcome is not always ideal. There is no question that spaying and neutering cats is the best defense against unwanted kittens.

The kittens at QAS are kept in foster homes for up to eight weeks and ready to be adopted. If you adopt from any local shelter you will likely pay anywhere from $100 to $200. For $150, QAS kittens go home with their first vaccinations; they are spayed or neutered and micro chipped. Having the kittens spayed and neutered at the time of adoption is helps reduce the number of unwanted kittens born each year.

KITTENS AT THE Quincy Animal Shelter are kept in foster homes for up to eight weeks and are then ready to be adopted. For more information, call 617-376-1349.

QAS believes in "Adopt, Don't Shop! You can certainly find "free kittens" but you will most likely pay a much higher price for all of the veterinary care that a kitten requires. These kittens are less likely to be spayed and neutered because of the high veterinary costs and we all end up with more kittens.

The Quincy Animal Shelter has survived 16 kitten seasons.

"We have learned a lot over the years and we continue to improve our processes and try to make the adoption process as enjoyable as possible," Burke says. "We have excellent foster care and adoption programs in place that ensure that each kitten is provided with the best medical care and lots of love and attention so they will happily adapt to their new home.

"Our number one goal is finding great homes for our animals. We would not be here without our dedicated volunteers," she adds.

Kitten season is challenging, but there is a whole lot of cute at QAS right now. If you are interested in adopting a pet, you can visit the shelter during adoption hours every Tuesday and Thursday evening from 6 to 8 p.m. and Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

For more adoption information call 617-376-1349 or visit quincyanimalshelter.org. and see how you can help QAS.

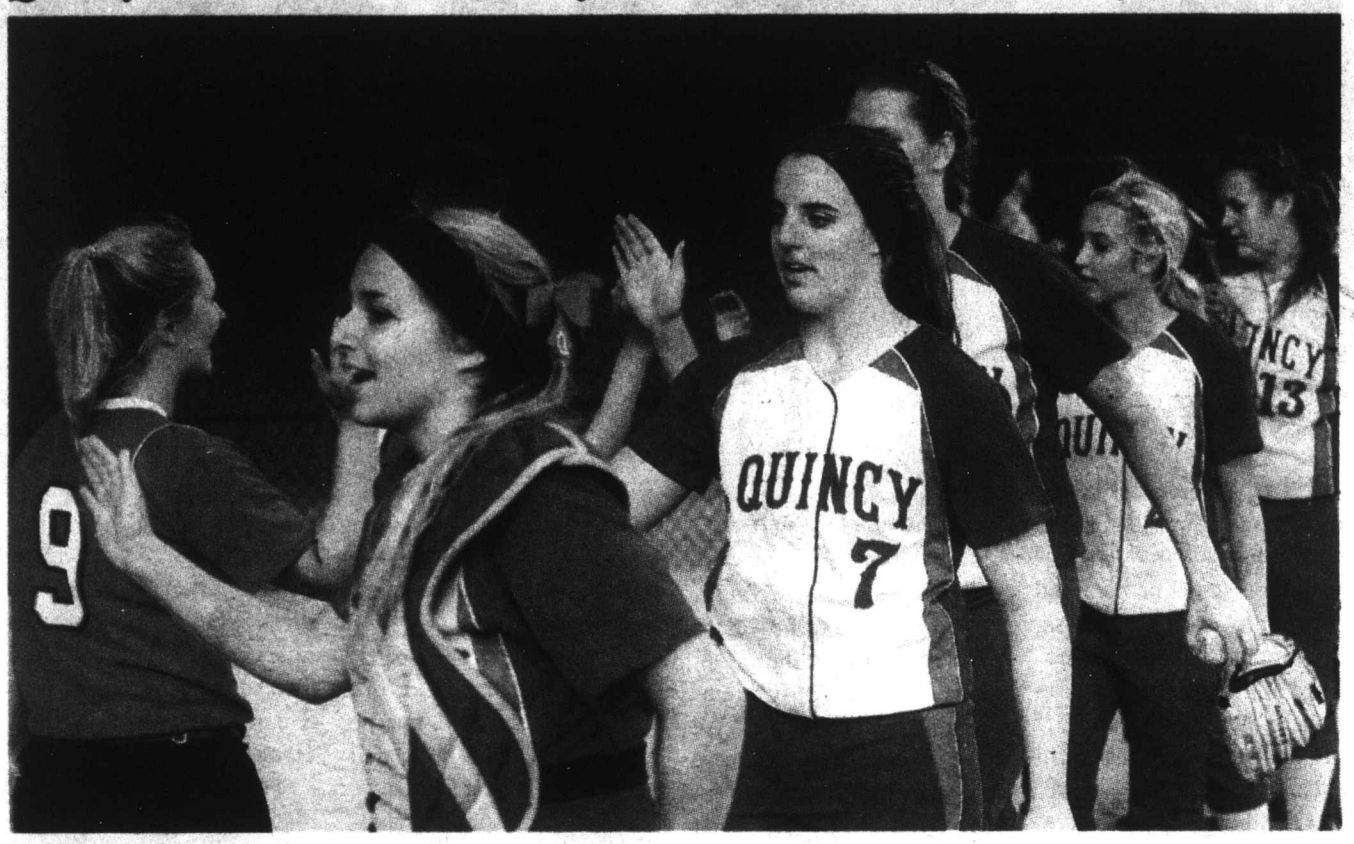
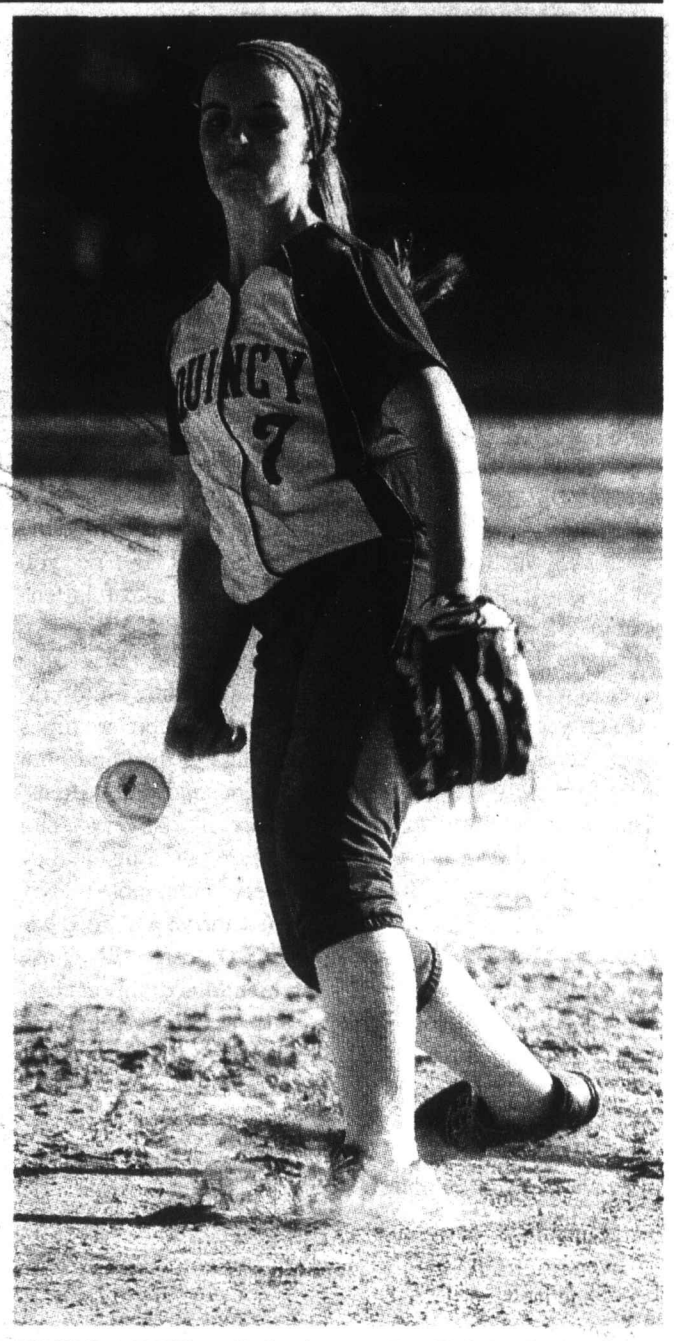
Sensational Saxon Perfect Again

Quincy Senior Hurls 2nd Perfect Game, 4th No-Hitter Of Season



QUINCY SOFTBALL PLAYERS Angelina Avitabile (left) and Saxon Bresnahan lead their teammates in high-fiving Scituate players after Bresnahan pitched a perfect game against the Sailors for a 3-0 win May 27th on Senior Night at Mitchell-McCoy Field. For Bresnahan it was the Quincy senior's second perfect game and fourth no-hitter of the regular season. She also threw a no-hitter last season. Quincy Sun Photos/Robert Bosworth

ALICIA WALKER scores on a wild pitch in the third inning for the Presidents - the only run Quincy would need as Saxon Bresnahan tossed her second perfect game of the season against Scituate.



HOW DO YOU spell dominant - S-A-X-O-N. Senior Saxon Bresnahan struck out 17 Scituate batters and retired all 21 Sailors in order for her second perfect game of the season May 27 before a host of fans and families on Senior Night.

Saxon Shines Again On Senior Night

By BILL GRIFFIN

It was just another typical Senior Night for Quincy's softball team. Nothing special. Nothing out of the ordinary.

Senior Emma Kelly had a walk, a single, a stolen base, scored a run and managed to stay awake in center field. Senior catcher Angelina Avitable celebrated a victory and two terrific plays on popups by doing three cartwheels across the outfield after the game.

COURTNEY MURRAY

Courtney Murray To Attend C-S

Courtney Murray of Quincy, a 2015 graduate of Norfolk Agricultural High School, will attend Colby-Sawyer College and play volleyball for the Chargers.

Murray is a 6-foot middle/outside who enjoyed a successful career at Norfolk Aggie. She helped NA to the 2014 Massachusetts Central Division finals and was named MAC Volleyball Player of the Year and MAC All-Star.

She is the daughter of MaryEllen and Steve Murray of Quincy.

had a single and an RBI. Senior Dana Varmahmoodi had a single and a run scored. Senior Sam McMahon had an RBI. Senior Emily Van Tassell made a brilliant back-to-the plate catch on a popup at first base in the seventh inning. The seniors played and played well in Quincy's 3-0 Patriot League victory over Scituate at Mitchell-McCoy Field Wednesday night.

It was a senior night and a senior story. Wait. There was something else. What was it? Got it.

Senior Saxon Bresnahan added another chapter to a season in which she has walked the same street with perfection and history. She pitched her second perfect game and her fourth no-hitter in a span of 24 days to firmly establish herself as one of the best pitchers in the history of a school with a rich tradition of softball pitching.

Perfection means no mistakes. She's done it Twice. History means nobody else has ever done it before. She'd done it twice. Twice.

"Awesome. Dominant. Mature. It's hard to put her season into words. We have had some great pitching at Quincy High, but we've never had anything like this," said coach Greg Sommers whose team finished the season at 16-4 and opens tournament action this week.

Let's review. In her first perfect game against Duxbury, she struck out all 21 batters. An umpire with 35 years experience said he had never seen anything like it. In her second no-hitter against Duxbury, she carried a perfect game into the seventh inning when she walked a batter. She is one walk away from three perfect games in just over three weeks.

Presidents At Milford Today

No. 10 seeded Quincy (16-4) will face No. 7 seeded Milford (17-3) at Milford in the first round of the Division 1 South Sectional Softball Tournament today (Thursday) at 4 p.m.

EMMA KELLY crosses the plate on a hit by Madison Davis in the fourth inning. Quincy Sun Photos/Robert Bosworth

Her coach said he had never seen anything like it. Her works are two slices of perfection and history from one player in just over three weeks. Things like this just do not happen.

"If you had told me in April that I would pitch four no-hitters in a season, I would have told you that you were crazy," smiled Bresnahan who has five career no-hitters. She no-hit Plymouth North this season and Pembroke in her junior year.

She struck out 17 against Scituate. Only one ball was put in play in fair territory and Bresnahan caught it. She featured the low, whistling fastball and her riser. She controlled the game. She could have pitched a perfect game until Christmas. The two words which come to mind are maturity and movement.

As the innings flew by and the strikeouts piled up, there were no nerves, no worries, no talk of jinxes. She was calm and she was poised. In first perfect game against Duxbury, she said she was so nervous in the seventh inning that she thought she might be sick. There was none of that against Scituate. She had walked this road before.

"I think the biggest way I've developed this year is my maturity," said Bresnahan. "In the past I'd be afraid to set a goal because I might jinx myself. I was afraid to pitch inside because I didn't want to hit anybody. I'm much more confident now."

A center fielder has a perfect view and angle on a pitcher's movement. Kelly has played center behind Bresnahan for three years. When Kelly saw the movement on Bresnahan's riser, she knew it would be a memorable night.

"You have a great view from center field, and the way her ball moves is unbelievable. I saw that movement tonight and I knew right away. I was confident. I knew she was going to do it," said Kelly.

Kelly had one problem. Remaining conscious. She is a fast, gifted outfielder. The problem is nobody hits her the softball in perfect games with 17 and 21 strikeouts. There are no flyballs or line drives. She needs to be careful. Lack of batted balls can result in a trance.

"I did feel like I was just chilling out there," she smiled. "I had to be careful not to zone out. There were a couple of times when two outs went by, and I wasn't sure how they happened. You have to work hard to stay in the game when Saxon pitches. I'm happy for her. She's been great."

Avitabile caught another flawless game. She framed strikes with soft hands. She hit the dirt for two wonderful grabs of shallow pop-ups. She is a priceless partner in all of this. She knows her pitcher and the game. She calls every pitch. Bresnahan doesn't have to think or worry. Avitabile calls the pitch. Bresnahan throws it. They are pitcher and catcher and they are best friends. There is strong trust here.

"I couldn't have done any of this without Angelina," said Bresnahan.

And there was one more thing. Unlike the Pembroke and Duxbury no-hitters, Avitabile was aware of what her pitcher had accomplished.

"I knew. I knew. I'm am making progress. I also did a half round-off to go with the three cartwheels after the game. That's important," said Avitabile.

Quincy scored one in the third and two in the fourth. In the third Alicia Walker (single, run scored) walked and came around on two wild pitches and a ground ball. Davis and McMahon had RBI in the fourth.

In other action last week, Nicole Jorgensen hit a three-run homer to lift the Presidents past Stoughton, 3-1. Bresnahan fired a two-hitter and struck out 11. Quincy fell to Whitman-Hanson, 3-1 on Thursday.

Quincy's seniors and their families were introduced and honored before the game. The seniors are: Bresnahan, Avitabile, Kelly, Varmahmoodi, Davis, McMahon, Van Tassel, Angela McDonald, Bella Falco, Meghan Caggiano, Annie Waterman, and Emma Kimmell.

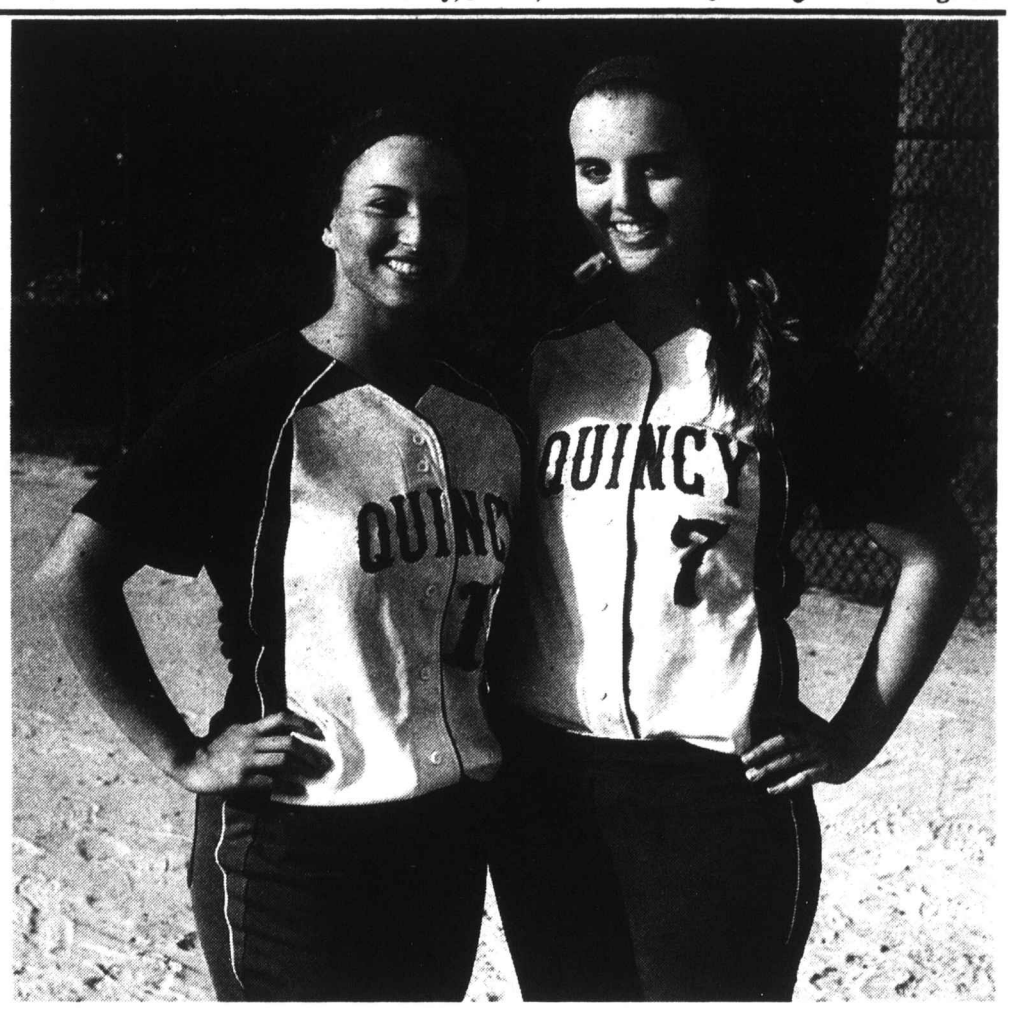
Senior Night meant a great deal to Bresnahan. She was delighted with the play of her senior teammates, especially Van Tassel's catch in the seventh and Davis' RBI single.

"I almost jumped up and down for Emily when she made that catch and Madison had a big hit for us," she said. "To have this happen on senior night means a lot. I grew up with all my teammates and we've been playing together for a long time. This night is special."

Bresnahan is aware of her place in the history of her school and it is important to her.

"I'm proud to represent Quincy High like this. I know we've had a lot of great pitchers in the past. I'm sure someone will surpass what I've done," she said.

Maybe yes. Maybe no.



ANGELINA AVITABILE (left) has caught the two perfect games and two other no-hitters thrown by Saxon Bresnahan (right) this season. She also played flawless defense behind the plate catching two shallow pop-ups in the Presidents' 3-0 win over Scituate.

North Quincy Volleyball Bows To Braintree In Tournament

By JOE REARDON

On the surface, it was puzzling that North Quincy coach Jason Cai wasn't shocked that the Red Raiders fell to Braintree in the first round of the Div. 1 South tourney in a home game last Thursday.

Seventh-seeded North Quincy (13-7) after all put the 10th seed Wamps (11-10) in a deep hole by racing out and capturing the first two sets to go up 2-0 against a Braintree team that swept the Red Raiders last year 3-0. This time around it appeared that North Quincy would get a taste of retribution in its sweltering gym.

Braintree, though, clawed its way back and stunned North Quincy and Red Raider Nation by reeling off three consecutive wins to claim the 3-2 victory.

Jason Cai, who has steered the Red Raiders into the tournament all seven seasons as head coach, believed Braintree's best volleyball was in front of them despite trailing 2-0.

"I knew it was going to be a close game going forward," he said. "The only way we were going to win was if we had the lead. We had some tough serving, but towards the end our serving let up a lot. That was one of the things that really cost us the game at the end."

It didn't help the Red Raiders' cause that star center Eric Huang was relegated to the sidelines for the game, weakening North Quincy at the net.

"That hurt us a lot," said Cai. "I put in a freshman center who's only set two months in his life in a tough situation. You could tell he wasn't ready for it."

North Quincy dominated the first set, led by Co-Captain Jackie Chen who was trouble all evening up front. The talented senior mixed hard shots with easy taps over the net to keep Braintree off balance. The Wamps trailed by as few as three points (17-14) on a block by Greg Zacharakis (19 kills). Anxhelo Taho (20 kills, three aces) took over and led North Quincy on a 7-1 run for a decisive 25-14 win.

"At one point in the first set I had three freshmen in and three seniors," said Cai. "Three kids going in who had never played volleyball with a lot at stake on the line. And three seniors who really want to win it. Their mindsets are completely different. The seniors were ready for it. They've been through this situation before. The freshmen, maybe the most they've ever played was a game three going to twenty seven points in a regular season game."

The Red Raiders showed plenty of poise in the second set after falling behind early after a 6-0 surge put them up 8-4. Some sloppy play at the net resulted in seven consecutive service points from the Wamps to give them a 22-19 advantage. The Red Raiders regrouped and got big points from Alex Pham (43 assists, 11 digs) and Chen to close out the second set win, 26-24.

A 13-3 Braintree surge in the third set prevented the Red Raiders from putting the Wamps away as Roberta Stannard's crew felt the momentum swing in the 25-16 victory. Killian Yu continued setting up scores on the way to a mammoth evening that saw him finish with a whopping 53 assists, a Braintree school record.

Emily Bryson Defends 2-Mile Title At Div. 2 Championship

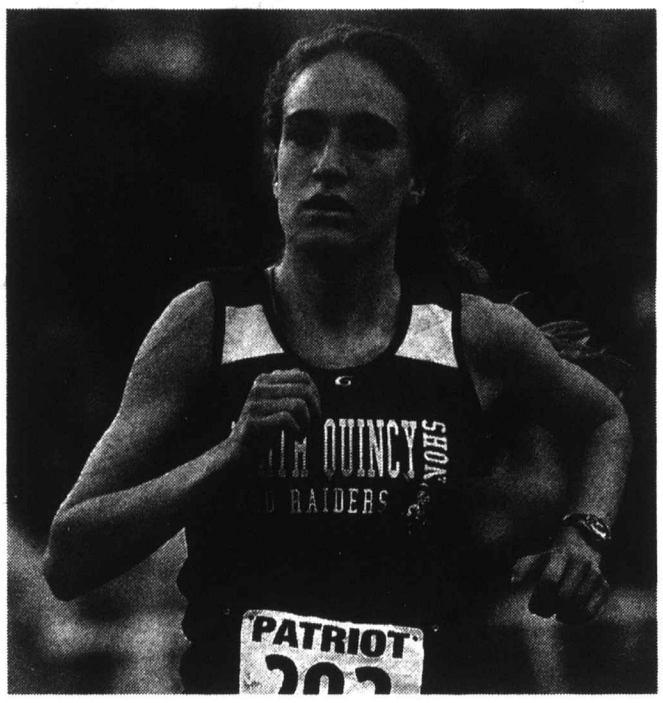
By JOE REARDON

When Walpole's ace distance runner Allie Morris gathered herself and threw in a surge to build a 15-yard lead on North Quincy's Emily Bryson with just over a 1000 meters to go in Saturday's Div. 2 EMass Track Championships, the most accomplished distance runner in Red Raider history didn't flinch.

Instead, Bryson put in her most decisive move of the race to break Morris once and for all and defend her 2 mile title with a stellar time of 11 minutes, 4.74 seconds. Morris crossed the finish line more than 11 seconds back in 11:15.98 in warm conditions at Greater New Bedford Vocational.

Bryson's victory earned her another trip to the All-State meet where she'll be part of a deep, talented field. Last year, Bryson ran one of the signature races of her high school career when she kicked hard over the final 400 meters to move from fifth up to second place.

Bryson's victory was especially sweet after what has been somewhat of a trying spring. She contracted a serious sinus infection that disrupted her training in for three weeks and went into the class meet not knowing how fast she'd be able to run.



NORTH QUINCY'S Emily Bryson defended her 2-Mile title at the Div. 2 EMass Track Championships Saturday with a time of 11 minutes, 4.74 seconds.

"There was definitely some pressure to come back and win it again," said Bryson. "I just try to forget about that before the race and try to do my best. It's been really tough training so when I came here I wasn't really sure of what I was capable of. It's good to know I can do that."

Bryson wasn't at all surprised that it was Morris running off her shoulder and the lone competitor to challenge her for the lead. "I definitely believed she'd give me the biggest challenge, but there were some other really good girls running too," said Bryson. "When she passed me it was a mental thing. I just told myself to stay with her. With 800 or so I made the move and tried to push as hard as I could the last couple of laps. That's (kick) something we've been working on, finishing fast the last quarter. I definitely don't want to get passed at the end."

North Quincy had several impressive performances in the meet.

Julia Bryson, who was also in the seeded 2 mile with her sister, pushed hard the final 200 meters to take 10th in 12:04. The Red Raiders' terrific shot putter, Melody Umoren, put herself in perfect position to earn a medal at Saturday's All-State meet at Fitchburgh State University with a sterling 36-3-1/2 effort.

Isabelle Flaherty pulled off an impressive double for North Quincy, her best performance coming in the high jump where she cracked into the top 10 with a 5-0 leap. She also had a strong effort in the 100 hurdles, grabbing 18th place in 17.82.

Like Flaherty, Cora Cluett showed her versatility in a pair of events. Cluett sprinted to a quick 28.50 finish for 21st in the 200 and stretched out her leap from the takeoff board to finish 19th in the long jump at 15-5-1/2. Allison Wong sprinted her way to a 14.00 finish in the 100 and Mia Healy checked in with a solid 13.58. Devin Hiltunen ran well to finish 19th in the 400 with a time of 1:04.25 and the 4x100 team, made up of Cluett, Mia Healy, Umoren and Mandy Hazelton, bolted to a time of 53.25 for 25th place.

Quincy High's Curtis Calley stamped his ticket to the All-State meet with a great performance in the shot put. Competing in the Div. 1 meet at Lowell, Calley followed through well for a heave of 52-5-1/2 to take third place. He also drew notice in the discus as his 135-1 toss earned him 12th. Hashim Hamdi made his mark on the track as his 1:00.57 was good for 11th in the 400 hurdles.

There was plenty of young talent on the track for both of the city's teams at their annual showdown last Thursday at Faxon Field. Freshman Alex Case looks like the prototypical distance runner with her thin frame, but the Quincy High talent prefers the shorter distances. Case was an easy winner in the 100 at 13.1.

"I've had a pretty good season," she said. "I kind of wanted to make states. I just want to keep getting better with my times.

North Quincy's Julia Klincewicz got a great start at the gun and was an easy winner in the 200 with his 28.7. Klincewicz is one of the more talented multi-events athletes in the city evident by her time of 1:0[illegible] in the 400 and 1:15 in the tough 400 hurdles event.

"Honestly, I just wanted to enjoy the season," said Klincewicz. "I wanted to run 65 and I didn't get there but there's always next season."

Other High School Track Highlights/Results

Three meets in five days. That was the gauntlet endured by the North Quincy boys and girls this past week.

Tuesday's league meet was nothing short of a comedy of errors as the bus was delayed due to an accident and the ensuing quick schedule had athletes shuffling to meet time lines and hasted warmups. The good news was that NQ girls qualified another relay team to go to the D2 championships as the team of Molly Donahue, Devin Hiltunen, Julia Bryson and Emily Bryson broke the 4:30 time standard required by the MIAA to advance.

Lots of athletes did earn medals. Mia Healy in the 100, Mandy Hazelton in the 200, Devin Hiltunen in the 400, Donahue in the 800, Isabelle Flaherty in the high jump and hurdles, Julia Klincewicz in the triple jump, and Melody Umoren in the shot-put. On the boys side, Jimmy Cannon won the two-mile, Brian Jackson was 2nd in the freshman 100, Devin Ganno medaled in the freshman 400.

In an event abbreviated Quincy vs North Quincy meet, the highlight was freshmen performing above and beyond the call of duty. The young boys team lost 71-18 to a veteran Quincy squad but North's girls eked out a slim 29-26 win. North spring girls were Julia Klincewicz and Mandy Hazelton 1-2 in the 200, Jessie Zheng and Ivy Tang 1-2 in the 800, Klincewicz 1st in the triple jump, Naika Louis 1st in the discus and 2nd in the shot. On the boys side Brian Jackson 3rd in 100, Devin Ganno 3rd in 200, Jimmy Cannon 1st in 400 and 800 and Kevin White 2nd in 800 scored for North. Ganno was 3rd in shot and discus as we'll and Steve Bui was 3rd in javelin.

At the D2 states held at Greater New Bedford Voke, Emily Bryson made it two in a row winning the 2mile run for the 2nd straight year. Melody Umoren was 2nd in the shot. Others participating in the meet were Mia Healy and Allison Wong (100m), Cora Cluett (200 and Longjump), Devin Hiltunen (400), Julia Bryson (2mile) and Isabelle Flaherty (highjump and 100 hurdles). Flaherty cleared 5'00" for the first time but could place no higher than 10th such was the depth in that event. The 4x100 relay of Mia Healy, Allison Wong, Mandy Hazelton and Cora Cluett ran their best time of the year (53.22) and the 4 x 400 relay of Julia Klincewicz, Devin Hiltunen, Julia Bryson and Emily Bryson clocked a 4:26.37 their best time of the year. Emily Bryson and Melody Umoren are the only ones who will advance to All-States, which will be held at Fitchburg State University.

In other recent track action: A meet seemingly in control until the jumps portion vs. Scituate the girls lost by 2 in the final event, the triple jump as a Scituate girl PR'd by 2 feet on her final jump turning what looked like a sweep into a 4-5 decision to the Sailors and a 66-68 loss. Winners included Isabel Flaherty in hurdles and high jump, Mandy Hazelton in the 200, Devin Hiltunen in the 400, Molly Donahue in the 800 and a 1-2 by the Bryson twins in the two mile. Melody Umoren won the shot and Naika Louis won the discus. Losses by a mere lean in the 100, 200 and 4 x 100 also added up against the Raiders. On the boys side, their most points scored on the season 38 included many personal bests for the nearly all freshman team. The 4 x 100 relay of Brian Jackson, Steve Bui, Devin Gannon and Dimitri LeGaspi won for the first time. Other good performances were turned in by Jackson in the 100, Kevin White in the 800 and Jimmy Cannon in the mile and two mile. The Middleboro meet again was an almost surreal match as the visiting Sachems came up with great performances in the throws and jumps to score 37 points too keep the Raiders at bay in a 70-66 loss. Isabelle Flaherty again was a top performer with a 4'10 clear in the high jump and a 17.0 time in the 100 hurdles the #4 time in NQ school history. Molly Donahue again won the 800 to remain undefeated in that event. Other winners included Devin Hiltunen in the 400, Emily Bryson in the mile, Julia Bryson in the two mile, Mia Healy in the triple jump and Melody Umoren in the shot. The 4 x 100 relay of Healy, Umoren, Hazelton and Cora Cluett won as did the 4 x 400 relay of Hiltunen, Julia Klincewicz, Donahue and Emily Bryson. For the boys Mike Mullaney won the mile while Jimmy Cannon won the 2mile. Devin Ganno threw his best of 65'9" in discus. At the State Relays held at Whitman-Hanson, the Distance Medley Relay placed 6th in 13:34. Both Bryson are performing under the weather will illness and a night at the Senior Prom. At Saturday's Last Chance Invitational held at NDA-Hingham, Quincy's Boys placed 2nd over all with Curtis Calley winning the shot-put and discus. His shot-put distance of 51'9" was his best ever. Shorr Hawthorne was 2nd in the 100 and Nya Domkam was 2nd in the high jump Frankie Nunziato was 6th in long-jump. For North, Izzy Flaherty won the high jump Jimmy Cannon was 4th in mile.

VOICE FOR HEALTH

by Dr. Gabrielle Freedman

CRACKING WISE

As chiropractic patients know, when the chiropractor performs spinal manipulation, the joints often emit a popping sound. This sound, which is similar to the sound of cracking knuckles, brings a sense of relief. Although some people think that cracking one's knuckles (and other joints) can lead to arthritis, that notion is false. The fact is that there is space within joints that is filled with "synovial fluid," which acts as a lubricating agent to reduce friction in moving joints. As the joint is stretched and the expanding space creates negative pressure, gases within the fluid (oxygen, nitrogen, and carbon dioxide) form into bubbles. As the bubbles collapse, they emit the popping sound that chiropractic patients and knuckle-crackers hear.

Doctors of Chiropractic are trained in problems dealing with the spine, but are formally educated in clinical examination and diagnosis of the entire human body. At FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we provide chiropractic treatment from acute symptomatic relief to wellness care. Call 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment. You have nothing to lose – and vibrant health to gain. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy. We offer computerized spinal scans. If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

P.S. Joint cracking is not the same as the snapping sound that tendons make when they slide over bones. These sounds are heard in the knees and ankles when an individual moves from a sitting to a standing position, and vice versa.

NQ Girls Lacrosse Leaves Special Mark

By BILL GRIFFIN

It is a team better judged by the wonderful ride it took rather than by its final stop.

No. 4 seeded Wellesley raced out to an early lead and defeated No. 13 seeded North Quincy, 18-4 despite excellent efforts from seniors Ciara Forde and Molly Minton in the first round of the Division 1 South Sectional Girls Lacrosse Tourney Monday afternoon at Wellesley

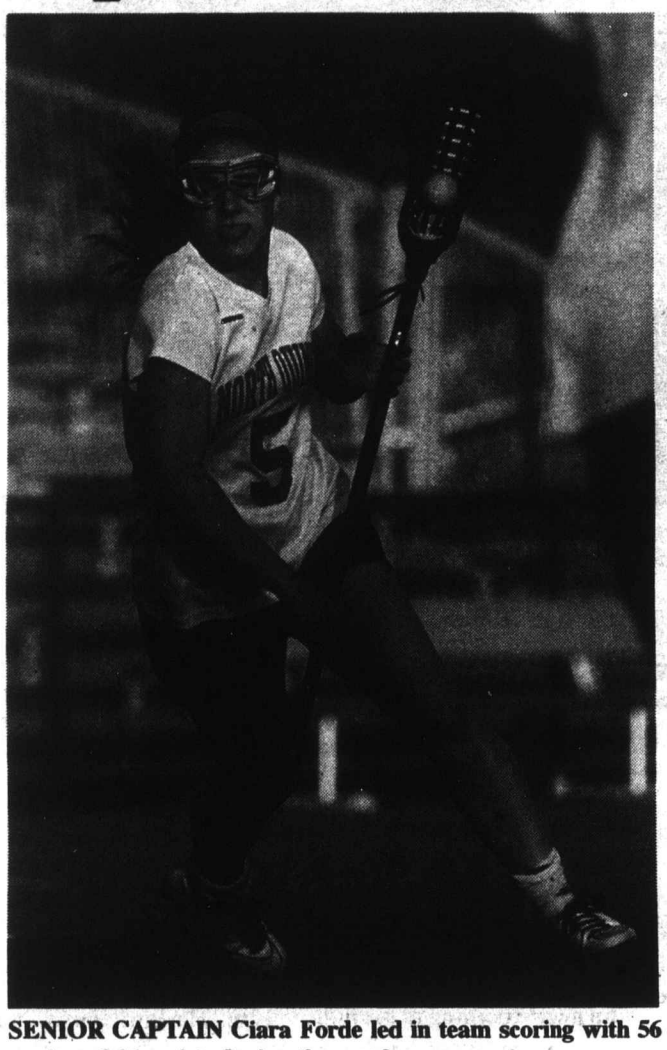
Forde scored three goals, including a gem of a play when she switched the ball and clicked from her non-dominant side. Minton had a fine day on defense against Wellesley's constant attack.

"Our defense was under a lot of pressure, and they played well. Molly was excellent. She won a lot of 50-50 balls and also transitioned the ball for us," said coach Meg Therrien. "Ciara played an outstanding game, and she scored a beautiful goal with the switch play."

Junior Marissa McGue also scored for North. Junior Molly Kate Cannon was excellent in midfield, moving the ball crisply from offense to defense.

"We scored three goals in the second half, and I thought our play improved as the day went on. Despite the rainy conditions, we were able to show our speed. The girls fought and played hard. That's all you can ask," said Therrien."

The Red Raiders finished the season at 10-10-1, but their journey began not in April of 2015, but in 2012 when Therrien took over as coach. The first year, the Red Raiders were winless.



SENIOR CAPTAIN Ciara Forde led in team scoring with 56 goals and 14 assists during the regular season.

Quincy Sun Photos/Larry Carchedi

The second year, they won one match. The third year, they won six. This year, they made the tournament. All coaches talk about building programs and breathing life and enthusiasm into their sport. Therrien did it.

"It took a lot of hard work, and it was the kids who made it happen," said Therrien. "We were able to show that lacrosse doesn't have to be your only sport, that skills from other sports translate to lacrosse. In three years, we came of age. The numbers are up. The girls have a passion for lacrosse and it shows in their play."

All the seniors knew about the winless season. Many began their careers as sophomores. They played on a team that won one match. They battled through the long, hard afternoons with the Hinghams and Duxburys, and Scituates. They grew to love the game and to love playing it together. They got better and started to win.

Two of the seniors are Minton and Evlyn Scuzzarella. The played on defense. They are fine players. Those who play defense never get enough notice. They stop goals rather than score them. They don't make flashy saves. But they play good position, they stay with their checks and they anchor their team. Without these two on defense, North goes nowhere.

"I remember that sophomore year," said Minton. "Having gone through it makes this more special. The important thing is that even when we were learning the game, we stayed close. We grew together and that makes the winning this year mean a lot more."

"I think it made us stronger," said Scuzzarella after North defeated Abington 17-7 on Senior Night last Thursday to qualify for the tourney. "We saw if we worked hard, we would get better every year. We are so close. It's great to win tonight, but, in a way, it's sad. This is our last game together on our home field. We will miss it."

They will not likely forget the stretch run which brought them to the tournament. They had four games left. They had to win them all. They ran off four straight against Fontbonne, Silver Lake and Abington (twice), finishing on Senior Night, one of the best nights of all, with an explosion of joy which rocked their locker room after the victory. They spilled out, all of them, raced down the ramp, and danced on the turf of the stadium.

"It was nerve-wracking playing those last four games," said Minton. "We knew we could trust and depend on each other. We believed in each other. I think that made the difference. Tonight, it feels great."

It was fitting that Forde (four goals, two assists) and McGue (four goals, one assist) led the scoring in the win over Abington. As the team matured over the past three years, these two grew into great players.

Forde (59 goals, 14 assists for the season) rules the middle of the field with her speed. She has a high lacrosse IQ, an uncanny sense of when to shoot, when to rush, and when to pass. Her best on Senior Night? She picked off an outlet pass from the Abington defense in midair, turned and fired it into the net in one motion.

McGue (40 goals, 10 assists) is a dominant player. She is a rare athlete with a creative touch that surprises even her teammates. Her best on Senior Night? Early in the second half, she beat a defender, sailed past the goalie, rolled on by the corner of the net, reached back and flicked a shot into the top corner while moving at full speed.

"Marissa has so many moves that you don't really know what she is going to do. I think she surprises herself," said Minton. "Playing with Ciara is special. She has such a great feel for the game. She's aware of everything around her and she always makes the right play."

The passing against Abington was brilliant. Eleven of the 17 goals were assisted. Teams that are learning the game rely on long runs and crashing the net. Good lacrosse teams throw and catch, advance the ball with accurate passing which finds the receiver in full stride, and finish scoring plays by setting up the open cutter in front of the goal. Good teams pass. North is a good lacrosse team.

Against Abington, a passing play from Cannon to McGue to Karyn McEvoy started behind the North

Quincy Mite B Travel Team Wins Conference Title

By SCOTT JACKSON

The City Council recently honored Quincy Youth Hockey's Mite B Travel Team for winning the conference title earlier this spring.

The Mite B Travel Team, comprised of seven- and eight-year olds, won the South Shore Conference Mite B Championship on April 4.

The team finished fourth during the regular season in the 12-team conference, qualifying for the final spot in the playoffs.

During the team's first playoff game against the Coastal Stars on March 28, the conference's number one seed, Quincy trailed 5-4 late in regulation. The team pulled its goalie and tied the game, 5-5, with 16 seconds left in regulation. The team pulled off the upset by scoring the winning goal just 40 seconds into overtime.

In the title game on April 4, Quincy downed Pembroke, 4-2.

"The Quincy City Council recognizes the Quincy Youth Hockey Mite B Hockey Team for their outstanding 2014-2015 season and winning the South Shore Conference Mite B Championship," Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee said.

"This great victory was a result of the team's hard work, dedication and commitment throughout the season. Your contributions as a member of this championship team has made the city of Quincy, Quincy Proud. We're really proud of you. Great job."

Sean Callaghan, the team's coach, credited the parents, his fellow coaches and most of all the players for the team's success.

"I'd like to thank the City Council for recognizing this great group of kids," Callaghan said. "This team is what it is for three good reasons. One being the parents – there is no way I would have gotten through this season without the support they game me. The second reason is the other coaches, Bobby Harding and Doug Nolan. The number one reason is I had such great kids the whole year. They listened the whole time. So thank you guys."

There were eight lead changes in the fourth set, led by some booming kills from Wamp junior Francis Kokoros, who continued to score big points at the net. A 7-1 Wamp rally late in the game them a 20-16 lead on the way to a 25-21 win where Braintree scored the final three points.

Kokoros was even tougher in the fifth set, while Chen and Taho tried to will the Red Raiders to the next round. North Quincy had the 12-11 lead before Zacharakis scored Braintree's final three points to settle things, 15-13.

Despite the disappointing collapse, Cai was extremely pleased with the Red Raiders' spring campaign and the poise the team showed all season. He also hinted he'd like to see North Quincy possibly play Braintree during the regular season next spring.

"They're a good team," said Cai. "I'd like to play them in the regular season. They're next door, literally.

"The season went great. It went a lot better than I expected. It was a rollercoaster ride, literally. We had about six or seven five game sets all going to extra points. Some were tough losses and some were very good wins. We played in a bunch of tournaments that made us ten times better than we were at the beginning of the season. Our goal was to serve up and not make any mistakes. We wanted to minimize our errors like missed serves and getting net calls. We wanted to play a really good game. We missed three or four serves in all five sets. I'm happy with that. I'll take it any day.

"Being up two sets and giving up three is pretty tough. I'll get over it."

CAPTAIN JACKIE CHEN lines up a kill shot in the second set. The two teams fought a tight match with Braintree prevailing winning 3 sets to 2 over North.

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Wednesday, May 27, 2015, at approximately 3:19 a.m. Officers Jay Grazioso and Daniel Church were dispatched to a Winter Street apartment to meet the caller about a problem she was having with her boyfriend.

Upon arrival, the Officers intercepted the boyfriend as he was exiting the front of the building carrying clothes and other belongings. He stated that he was leaving and relayed that the incident "was not as big of a deal as she was making it." He said that he had argued with his girlfriend and just wanted to leave for the evening. "Minimizing" of an incident by a person involved in a domestic incident is often a sign to responding Officers that this person wants to get away. As the Officers questioned the boyfriend, he said that his girlfriend struck him in the mouth but that he didn't want to press charges. The boyfriend reluctantly agreed to accompany the Officers back to the apartment so they could determine what had occurred. The Officers noted that the boyfriend did have a slightly swollen lip.

Officer Grazioso interviewed the girlfriend, who was visibly upset as well as admittedly under the influence of an alcoholic beverage. She said that she had argued with her boyfriend after he had accused her of being unfaithful. She said that the argument escalated when he grabbed her phone from her hand to check her messages. At this point, she demanded that he leave her apartment which led to the incident becoming physical. She said that, "He picked me up and threw me into the hallway." She said that when she got back into the apartment, he pushed her onto the bed. She showed the Officers a small laceration on the top of her foot. The girlfriend was adamant that she wanted to press charges against her boyfriend. When asked about his allegations that she hit him, she replied, "I'm not going to lie. I hit him when he picked me up. I threw things at him too." The Officers observed a broken hand soap dispenser against the wall with soap all over the floor, consistent with someone having thrown it. The Officers informed the boyfriend about his girlfriend's allegations. He responded by saying he would cooperate, commenting, "Do whatever you have to do. If I have to leave tonight I will. If I have to spend the night in jail, I'll do that as well."

LT. DAN MINTON

The boyfriend was offered the opportunity to give his side of the incident and he said that he would not make any statements that would incriminate his girlfriend because he did not want her to get in trouble. He referred to "Street code" and stated that all he would say is that she hit him in the mouth. This left the Officers wondering about the boyfriend's ethics in his street code – that he would assault her and then claim that he was struck by her!

Based on the evidence on scene and the statements of both individuals, Officers determined that the boyfriend was the dominant aggressor in the altercation. The suspect, a Quincy resident, was placed under arrest and charged with "Assault and Battery on A Family or Household Member." The girlfriend/victim was advised of her rights to obtain protection under the domestic violence abuse laws but she declined further assistance. Nice Work!

USE DIRECTIONALS BEFORE APPLYING BRAKES: As a driver, by using your directional well before braking, you are letting drivers behind you know that you plan to make a turn. This provides other drivers the time to react to your actions. If you brake first, essentially, you are making a change and the drivers behind you are trying to figure out what you are doing and why you are braking. In addition, you may not be giving the other drivers enough time to react to your movement. Remember, although you know what your plan is, the driver behind you does not and this may result in an accident.

WORK AT HOME AND DOOR TO DOOR SCAMS: Every year around this time, there is an abundance of mailings to students offering them an opportunity to make "big money" for the summer. The letter instructs the reader to contact the company and usually involves a sales pitch about how you can make huge amounts of money weekly.

For the "Work at Home" sales pitch, the company salesperson will require that you make a payment for one or more of the following; training materials, certification and purchase of databases. If the company is instructing you, the employee to pay the employer first, it is most likely a scam.

For the "Door to Door" offer, this usually involves purchasing the products yourself so that you can show them to potential buyers. Your purchase price of the items will be very high and your sales commission will be very low. The sales pitch is that you can make "incredible" money but it would require "incredible" hours to do this. Breaking down how much you made by the amount of hours you worked would show that it most likely would be well below minimum wage and that is assuming you actually get paid. There is also the concern that the customer may never receive their order and you will not be compensated. These companies can be fraudulent and you may be held responsible. Remember, with intense competition from online companies and big box stores, the door to door salesperson was basically eliminated decades ago due to lack of profits.

an of the council's public works committee, said she was concerned that one contractor continued to miss Germantown's Gull Point neighborhood.

"The entire Gull Point neighborhood got missed. How did they not learn the routes after the first big storm? How do you continue to miss the Gull Point neighborhood? I had some frustration with the contractors and their familiarity with the routes," Laforest said.

"I get as frustrated as anyone else when something isn't going perfectly," Koch replied. "Sometimes you have different drivers when you have that kind of duration of a storm. Somebody else comes in and takes over and maybe he thought something was done. There are going to be some systems we're adjusting going forward on that."

Laforest also suggested the city establish parking lots for residents during snowstorms. During snow emergencies, the city restricts parking to either the even or odd part of the street, depending on the year, but Laforest noted not all residents have off-street parking available to them.

"Another area we can really be working is designating some snow parking lots. A lot of communities do that. There are people who don't have off-street parking and aren't necessarily following the parking rules," she said. "It's great that we posted the even/odd parking rules and a lot of people complied. There are some areas that weren't."

Laforest also said the city made the right call by choosing not to dump major amounts of snow into the water despite having permission from state environmental regulators to do so.

"People thought that was a no brainer – 'why, with all the coastline Quincy has, are you not dumping into the water?'" Laforest said. "I appreciate your recognition of the pollution it would have contributed because I think you made the right call there."

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci said one of the biggest concerns he heard from residents this winter and in years past is the use of smaller plow trucks on hilly streets.

"Probably the most frequent concern I hear – and maybe this is a West Quincy thing with the hills – is folks who observe the most frequent piece of equipment on their street is a small truck with a plow that doesn't seem to be able to really do the trick," he explained. "That's not just a this winter issue; every winter it's something that's raised to me."

Koch replied that smaller vehicles have better maneuverability on narrower streets. The hills, he added, get early attention during snowstorms.

"The hills get a lot of attention first. We do the [main streets] and hills go out pretty quickly when we get an event, particularly with the preparation with the brining and the salt," the mayor said.

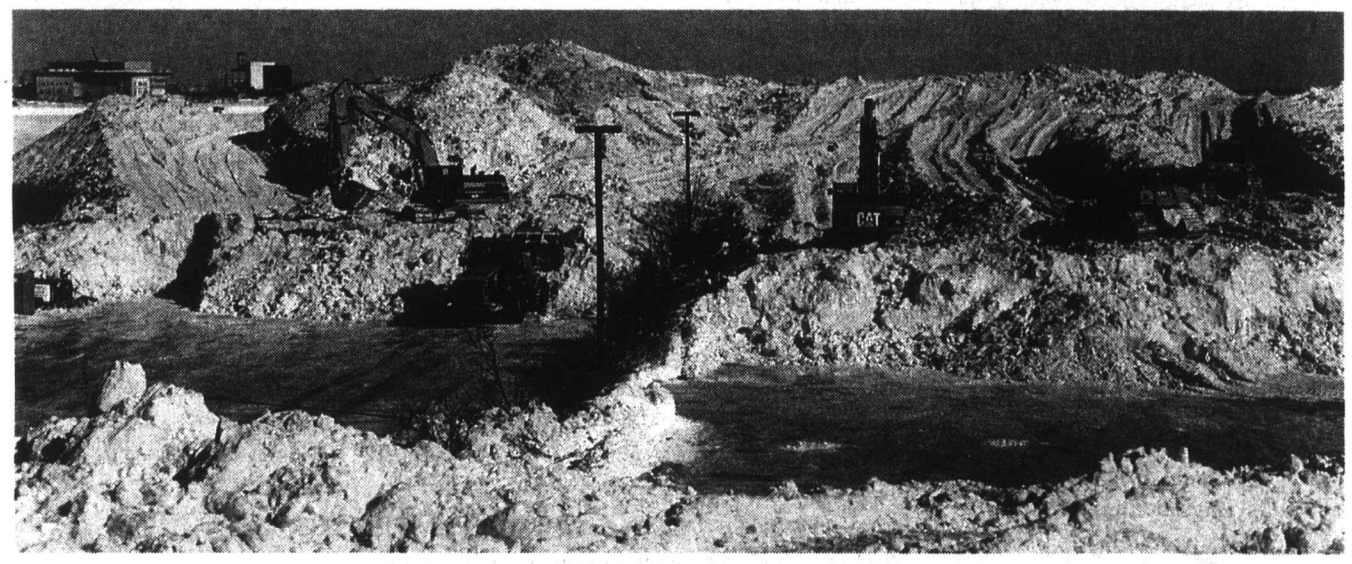
Palmucci also voiced concern about the implementation of temporary one-way streets throughout the city. He supported the idea of having temporary one-way roads to help ensure vehicles could use smaller streets, but noted it took up to four weeks to implement them.

"I have some concerns about the implementation. I understand it was mostly due to having the signage ordered," Palmucci said. "That was the delay from when ward councillors first saw the maps, then I think a week later they were released to the press to The Sun and then the signs weren't up, it wasn't fully implemented, for maybe another week or two after that."

Koch said the need for temporary one-way streets wasn't anticipated going into this winter and many sign shops weren't open. Going forward, he explained, the city has those signs available if they are needed during future winters.

In addition to a four-page summary of snow removal costs given out by the administration Monday night, councillors also received a 31-page list of all purchase orders charged to the snow and ice removal account during the current fiscal year from city Auditor Susan O'Connor last week. O'Connor was not at Monday's meeting and the snow report was kept in committee in case councillors asked more questions for her at a future meeting.

CITY OF QUINCY spent $2.2 million on plowing and salting city streets as well as municipal lots like the John Hancock Parking area across from the Quincy District Courthouse this past winter when 114 inches of snow fell, including 85 inches during one three-week period.
Quincy Sun Photo/Robert Bosworth



IN TOTAL, the city spent approximately $13.5 million on snow operations, of which $7 million was spent on hauling snow to three snow farms including this one at Squantum Point Park at Marina Bay. This photo was taken on Feb. 27.

goal, covered the whole field and resulted in a score by McEvoy.

"The credit for the passing goes to coach. She gives us these drills in practice and we work and work on them" said Minton.

"We work hard on passing. Tonight, I just sat back and enjoyed watching it," said Therrien.

Senior Marguerite Belcher was sharp in goal against Abington, making 13 saves, eight in the first half, including four free shots. McEvoy had three goals. Savannah Flynn and Sarah Tsan each had a goal and an assist. Kiera Clifford, Katie Sautter, Jill Hallisey, and Scuzzarella had single goals. Cannon and Charlotte Chretian each had a pair of assists. Minton chipped in with an assist.

Forde, Scuzzarella, Clifford, Belcher, Minton, and Aislinn Collins were introduced and honored with their families in a Senior Night ceremony before the match.

The closeness of the team was well shown in the final minutes. Scuzzarella plays defense. She had never scored a varsity goal. Her teammates, especially Forde, did everything except put the ball on a tee to get her a goal. She shot and shot and shot. Some went wide, some were blocked, some were turned back by the keeper.

"It felt like I took a 100 shots. I could hear everyone. I heard my teammates cheering. It was exciting," said Scuzzarella.

For Therrien, the season was proof that you can go back home again. As a senior, she played defense on the last North team that made the tourney in 2007. She also played on tourney teams in 2005 and 2006. The drought began when she left. The good times began when she returned.

"This year, I was so excited I tried not to think of the tourney until the second half of the final game. It's very satisfying not just for me, but for the kids," said Therrien.

Welcome back, coach.

Phelan Names Emily Hajjar Mayoral Campaign Manager

Quincy mayoral candidate Bill Phelan announces he has hired Emily Hajjar to serve as campaign manager for his 2015 race.

"Emily's educational background, her commitment to public service, and her Quincy roots make her a great fit for this position," said Phelan. "With my campaign team now in place, I look forward to connecting personally with as many Quincy voters as I can before the September primary," Phelan added.

Hajjar has served in roles related to public policy and political campaigns with Congressman Stephen Lynch and the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency. She earned her Bachelor of Arts in Political Science and Master's in Public Policy from the University of Massachusetts Amherst. While attending UMass Amherst, Hajjar was elected Vice President of the undergraduate student body, and competed as a Division I athlete for the UMass Women's Rowing team. Hajjar is a lifelong Quincy resident.

"Bill Phelan has been a role model for me," Hajjar said. "I am inspired by Bill's commitment to the people of Quincy and look forward to helping Bill with Quincy's comeback."

2014, Woodward & Curran and the city's engineers completed elevation certificates for homeowners to determine if they should have filed a letter of map amendment independent of the letter of map revision; the data from those surveys was also used in the city's LOMR.

It's too late, Shea said, for residents to seek an elevation certificate from the city but the Engineering Department does have a list of local surveyors available; a list of surveyors can also be found at malsce.com. Shea advised residents who have an older elevation certificate but didn't seek a new one last year to contact the surveyor who filed the one on record, because they may be able to update it as a discount.

Homeowners who received an elevation certificate with a recommendation to file for a letter of map amendment should do so even if the city's appeal moved the property out of the flood plain, Shea explained.

"I would encourage everybody to protect your own interests and your own parcel. If you're eligible for a letter of map amendment I would recommend you get out of the flood plain potentially twice through the letter of map amendment and the citywide appeal, just to cover yourself," he said.

"Letters of map amendment, which is an appeal of just your property, move much more quickly than the citywide process."

Residents who received an elevation certificate along with a recommendation to wait until the city's appeal was accepted should contact the Engineering Department.

Bill Dunn Jr. Memorial Road Race June 27

The Bill Dunn Jr. Memorial Road Race will be held Saturday, June 27 in Houghs Neck.

The event is a great time for friends and family of Bill Dunn Jr. to gather in honor of his life and share memories with each other. Registration for the annual event will begin at 7 a.m. at the St. Thomas Aquinas Hall on Darrow Street in Quincy. Those interested can participate in a 5-mile run or 2-mile walk beginning at 9 a.m.

Prizes will be awarded for 1st Place Male/Female Runner and 1st Houghs Neck Resident Male/Female Runner. The first 300 people to register will receive a free race T-shirt.

Proceeds from the event benefit the Bill Dunn Jr. Memorial Scholarship which has provided scholarships to Quincy High School students, donations to Children's Hospital, Manets Youth Football and other local organizations.

The registration fee is $30 for runners; however for those who sign up before June 10th, the registration fee is $25.

The registration fee is $20 for walkers prior to race day and the day of race. Registration forms are available on line at www.RememberB.com and can be mailed to: Bill Dunn Jr. Memorial Road Race, 105 Edgewater Dr., Quincy, MA 02169.

You can also register online at www.active.com or www.coolrunning.com. For more information contact Margaret Dunn at 617-471-9075.

Oh Glorious St. Theresa
Whom almighty God has raised up to aid and counsel mankind. I invite your miraculous intercession. So powerful are you obtaining every need of body and soul, our Holy Mother Church proclaims you a "Prodigy of Miracles." Now fervently I beseech you to answer my petition (mention here) and carry out your promise of doing good upon earth of letting fall from heaven a shower of roses. Henceforth, Dear little flower, I will fulfill your plea to be made known everywhere and I will never cease to lead others to Jesus through you. Amen
(Say prayer everyday for 9 days. By 4th day, ask for a sign. If prayers are to be answered between 4th and 9th day, you will see a rose in a Magazine, TV picture or receive Roses. You can also get strong scent of roses in home even if no roses are present. Must promise publication. Thank you.) E.S.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Choosing to work with someone you once thought might have been disloyal is a courageous move. The logical next step is to talk things out so there'll be no reason for raising suspicions again.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Take your time making a decision about a personal or work-related relationship. New facts are still coming in, and you'll want to know the full story before you take a definitive step.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Expect to learn something new about an old problem. This could provide some insight into how the problem began, and why it still defies efforts to find a resolution. Good luck.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) An uneasy work-related relationship can be eased with compromises by both sides. The parties might consider putting the agreed-upon changes in writing in case of a future misunderstanding.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Oh, you lucky Felines: Your romantic aspects are in absolutely purrrfect form. Don't be surprised at how especially attentive the ladies and gentlemen in your life are going to be this week.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Looking to prove yourself in a difficult situation is laudable. But try paying more attention to advice from experienced contacts. It could help you avoid time-wasting missteps.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A business decision seems easy enough to make based on what you know. But this week could bring new facts to light, and you might have to do some heavy rethinking.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Feeling sure about the steps you expect to take is great. But you may need to share a few dollops of that confidence with those who have some doubts about your plans.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A sense of well-being dominates much of the week. A slightly depressed mood could set in on the weekend. But being with family and friends helps shoo it away.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) You appear to be walking your life's path like the sure-footed Goat you are. But someone might feel you could do better. Listen to the advice, but make up your own mind.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) With positive signs growing stronger, Aquarians could find themselves facing choices that are each too good to turn down. Best advice: Go for the one you feel most comfortable with.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Someone you know might need your comfort and wisdom during a particularly difficult period. Your encouraging words help restore self-confidence and rebuild strength.

BORN THIS WEEK: Your kindness to all who need you is always appreciated and sets a fine example for others to follow.

John Neal (L) & EMT Kristen Kehoe holding baby Thomas and Jen Fallon, Call Taker

No two emergencies are exactly the same; each has its own reach. There are those emergencies that affect a single individual or an entire family, while others have a wider reach, affecting our entire community and beyond. In all instances, Fallon Ambulance is there for families, like the Kehoes who needed specific help and fast, and for all of Quincy when a blaze threatens our citizens and our downtown. No matter the scale or reach of the situation, Fallon responds with promptness and readiness, committed to successfully addressing the emergency at hand.

An Unexpected Home Birth

Sometimes emergencies result in a miracle, and that was the case with the Kehoe family, residents of Quincy. In March, Kristen Kehoe was at the end of pregnancy and beginning to show signs of labor on a snowy March day, so she packed her hospital bag as her husband, Ron, was on his way home from work. Ron arrived at home, but the couple's plan to get to the hospital was suddenly unrealistic. Kristen's rapidly progressing labor, the rush hour time of day, distance to the hospital, and snowy road conditions kept them put at home. Their baby was coming and soon.

Kristen's father, Rich O'Connell, was already there at the family's home, helping out with their 2-year-old but he was soon called on to be more than a grandfather. It became apparent that he'd be assisting in the delivery of his grandson. Rich called 911 and was connected with Jen Fallon, Call Taker in Dispatch for Fallon Ambulance. Rich recalls relying on Jen as she stayed calm and in control while his adrenaline took over. The baby was born 15 minutes later, and Jen provided support and direction during and after the delivery.

> "If it wasn't for the great operator, I don't know how the situation would have turned out. She was terrific, stayed calm and walked us through the whole thing."
> Rich O'Connell
> Father to Kristen, Grandfather to Thomas

Moments after baby Thomas was born, the Quincy Fire and Police Departments and Fallon Ambulance responded to the snowy scene. Fallon provided care to the mother and baby, transporting the healthy pair to South Shore Hospital. The Kehoes were thrilled to welcome their beautiful son, who will have quite the memorable birth story!

Quincy Shipyard Roof Collapse

When the Quincy Shipyard roof collapsed in January 2005, Fallon responded with four ambulances, three supervisors, one Rehab unit and activated its Incident Response Group to support this regional catastrophe. There were multiple injuries requiring on-scene treatment from Fallon and additional support was provided to Fire Fighters on scene to ensure their safety.

Masonic Temple Building Fire

In September 2013, a four-alarm blaze ravaged the historic Masonic Temple building in downtown Quincy. Over 70 emergency personnel fought a fire that risked lives, safety, and property. While responding to this incident, Fallon ensured that the EMS operations in the City were enhanced, as Quincy was divided due to the emergency apparatus on Hancock Street. Fallon deployed additional ambulances to the north and south parts of the City, so that advanced and basic life support ambulances were available should another emergency arise simultaneously.

Preparation Related to Ebola

As the international community faced the threat of Ebola, Fallon prepared for a public health emergency at home. Fallon hosted training on donning and doffing of protective gear for patients suspected of Ebola exposure in October of 2014. Attendees included Fallon employees, Quincy Fire and Police, as well as administrators from Manet Community Health.

Ruptured Gas Line at Quincy Medical Center

In February 2015, a falling brick ruptured a gas line at Quincy Medical Center, forcing an evacuation of the building. This generated eleven transports out of the medical center to other area hospitals. Fallon responded with ten ambulances within minutes, ensuring that all needs of the neighbors and hospital were met. At the same time, Fallon maintained an additional three ambulances dedicated to the community.

Always Here in an Emergency

When Faced with an Emergency of any Scale, Quincy Can Always Count on Fallon

As the municipal ambulance provider in Quincy, Fallon addresses emergencies every day—that's our line of work and that's where we thrive. Having served the City for nearly two decades, we've seen emergencies on a larger scale than those we experience regularly: building collapses, gas line ruptures, evacuations, and natural disasters. Whether we're responding to a routine medical call or a larger scale emergency, we are proud to be there for the residents and visitors of the City of Quincy.

Emergencies Can Take Many Forms. And Fallon is Here for All of Them.

Brewster Awarded City EMS Contract

The city will more than double its fleet of full-time Emergency Medical Service ambulances under a new contract recommended by a review committee that studied three proposals, according to Mayor Thomas Koch who announced the deal Tuesday.

In a prepared statement issued Tuesday afternoon, Koch said he will follow the committee's recommendation and award the City's EMS contract to Brewster Ambulance, which has also recently taken over emergency medical response in neighboring Braintree.

The committee recommended

Budget Retains 38 Classroom Aides

By SCOTT JACKSON

The city's school system will be able to hire five new teachers and retain 38 classroom aides under the proposed budget for the upcoming fiscal year.

The City Council's finance committee on June 3 approved budgeting $95,587,723 to the Quincy Public Schools for fiscal year 2016, which begins July 1. That is an increase of $1,481,000 or 1.57 percent over the school system's general fund budget for the current fiscal year. In addition, the schools

$11.7M Snow Deficit Could Be Paid Off This Year

By SCOTT JACKSON

The city could pay off its $11.7 million snow and ice removal deficit this year in one fell swoop, though a final determination won't be made until the fall.

Quincy had $1.76 million budgeted for snow and ice removal in the current fiscal year and spent $13.5 million to plow and haul the record-breaking 114 inches of snow that fell, leaving the city $11.74 million in the red.

Mayor Thomas Koch, in a recent interview, said he expects to receive a minimum of $1.5 million in reimbursement from the Federal Emergency Management Agency, which would further reduce the city's deficit; that reimbursement could increase to up to $4 million. The FEMA reimbursement is one of several factors that will be con-

$100,000 Budgeted For Additional Police Training

By SCOTT JACKSON

The City Council's finance committee approved the Police Department's $25.99 million budget for the new fiscal year, which includes an additional $100,000 for training the department's officers.

The Police Department's budget for fiscal year 2016 – July 1, 2015, to June 30, 2016 – is up more than $730,000 (2.9 percent) over the current fiscal year budget of $25.26 million. The additional money covers contractual salary obligations; it also increases the training time pay for officers to $250,000, up from $150,000 in the current budget.

Parade, Fireworks Celebrate Flag Day Saturday

The annual Quincy Flag Day Parade and Celebration – a local tradition dating back to 1951 – will take place Saturday, June 13.

Started 64 years ago by Koch Club founder, the late Richard J. Koch, the Quincy Flag Day parade is the longest-running parade of its kind in the nation.

"It is a great testament to our community that this wonderful tradition not only continues, but continues to grow each and every year," said Mayor Thomas Koch, who has been Flag Day Chairman for more than 25 years.

The parade consists of specialty units ranging from fire units, Army National Guard vehicles, and the 2014 Miss Massachusetts. Some of the best marching bands throughout the state march the parade route playing everyone's favorite patriot songs as impressive floats carrying very special guests follow the sound of music.

The Quincy Flag Day Parade has devoted itself to instilling patriotism and pride in our youth. Each year, more then 1,500 flag-waving youngsters highlight the event as they march down Hancock Street side by side with their youth organization.

The 1.5 mile parade steps-off at 7 p.m. at the intersection of Coddington and Hancock Streets and proceeds north on Hancock Street to Merrymount Parkway, disbanding at Pageant Field.

The grand marshal of this year's parade is Bertha Glavin, president and director of the Massachusetts chapter of the American Rosie the Riveter Association.

New Rockland St. Bridge Gets Preliminary OK

By SCOTT JACKSON

A $650,000 appropriation to replace an aging bridge in Houghs Neck received preliminary approval from the City Council.

The council's finance committee, which includes all nine councillors, approved the appropriation for the replacement of the Rockland Street Bridge on June 3. The council will likely give final approval on June 15, the last meeting before the body takes its summer recess.

To fund the project, the council allocated $150,000 from the sewer stabilization fund, $200,000 from the sewer rehabilitation fund, $150,000 from the water stabilization fund, and $150,000 from free cash. The money will cover the engineering, permitting and construction of the new bridge.

The 10-foot-long Rockland Street Bridge is one of two points of access to the Rock Island neighborhood of Houghs Neck, spanning over what neighbors call "the creek." Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest said the area around the bridge was flooded over the course of the winter.

"Rockland Street Bridge is in an area of Houghs Neck at the Rockland Street/ Spring Street intersection, known as 'the creek.' In a storm event it's going underwater," Laforest said. "It was the deepest I had ever, ever seen it this winter. Water was practically at Joseph Street. It was really just absolutely flooded out."

David Murphy, vice president at engineering firm Tighe & Bond, said the bridge was inspected after this winter's storms and corrosion was found on flanges on the underside of the stringers, or beams, that hold up the deck.

"As a result of this last winter, we actually went out and looked at the corrosion of the underside stringers," he said. "The flanges on the bottom side of the stringers are corroding rapidly."

The first thing Tighe & Bond will do after the project receives final approval is to perform a detailed inspection to determine if

City Hall Seen Reopening In September

By SCOTT JACKSON

When the City Council convenes in September following its summer recess, the body is expected to meet for the first time in the restored Old City Hall building, Mayor Thomas Koch said in a recent interview.

Old City Hall – officially the James R. McIntyre Government Center – closed in 2011 over mounting safety concerns. The restoration of the building, which first opened its door in 1844 and is thought to be among the oldest municipal buildings in the country, began in October 2013. The restoration work was supposed to be completed by the beginning of this year but was delayed by a three-alarm fire in September 2014 and this winter's severe weather.

The building will be finished as early as August, according to the mayor, and the council will no longer have to meet in a temporary chamber in the all-glass city hall annex after returning from its summer recess.

THE LAYERED LOOK

If there has been one trend that has transformed women's attitude toward jewelry, it is the layering and mixing of styles that has become so prevalent. No longer necessarily satisfied with wearing single pieces, women are now more apt to personalize their looks by wearing multiple bracelets, rings, necklaces, and other jeweled pieces. This individualized approach to wearing jewelry encourages women to mix heirloom pieces with more casual jewelry, as well as to combine different metals, styles, and materials. It is up to each woman to decide for herself what combination of pieces best defines her style and attitude. When everything works together harmoniously, the whole exceeds the sum of the parts.

Go ahead and have a little fun by layering your delicate chain necklaces with chunky beads. Wear silver with gold. Break all the fashion rules and have fun layering different styles to create brand-new, bold looks. If you're looking for a lovely selection of earrings, gemstones, wedding bands, engagement rings, pendants, and watches, you will find it at our store at 1402 Hancock St. in Quincy Center. We are a full service jewelry store, and we accept custom orders. Our prices have always been more than competitive with no fake markups in order to offer huge discounts. Brother William Remembers Maj. Gen. Charles Sweeney

Later this year, this nation will commemorate the 70th anniversary of the end World War II.

Sept. 2 marks 70 years since Japan formally surrendered aboard the Battleship Missouri in Tokyo Bay.

It will be a time of remembrance and gratitude for all those U.S. service men and women who help win the war and keep our country free. But there may also be renewed debate about how the war ended – after two atomic bombs were dropped on the Japanese cities of Hiroshima and Nagasaki in early August of 1945.

Revisionists argue the U.S. didn't have to drop those bombs. Those who lived and served during the war years strongly differ. And many of those folks are no longer here.

Quincy has a direct link to the end of World War II. Army Air Force Maj. Gen. Charles W. Sweeney, who grew up in Quincy and graduated from North Quincy High School in 1937, was the only man to fly on both atomic bomb missions. He flew his bomber to Hiroshima on Aug. 6, 1945, accompanying the Enola Gay piloted by Col. Paul W. Tibbets that dropped the first bomb.

Three days later, Maj. Gen. Sweeney flew the B-29 Superfortress called Boxscar that dropped the second bomb on Nagasaki. On Aug. 15 – six days later – Japan surrendered, ending World War II.

Maj. Gen. Sweeney died July 16, 2004. He was 84.

"It's still a big question today – should we have or shouldn't we have? It's just the straw that the camel couldn't carry anymore," said William Sweeney, one of Charlie's brothers, in a recent interview at NQHS. William, age 75 and a Weymouth resident, is the fifth and only surviving brother of the Sweeney clan.

Many like William Sweeney point out that without the atomic bombs there would have been an invasion of Japan. And that would have presumably led to many U.S. casualties.

"We were getting ready. A lot of soldiers and U.S. Marines were getting ready (for an invasion). It saved a lot of American lives by dropping those bombs. Japan finally had to say 'look, we can't fight anymore' and that was the end of it."

Sweeney, who died in 2004, was the only man to fly on both atomic bomb missions that ended World War II 70 years ago this summer. Photo Courtesy William Sweeney Family

William Sweeney had four brothers. Three served during World War II. Besides Charles, brother John (Jack) was a Marine. Another brother, Arthur, served in the Navy. He was in China when Charlie dropped the bomb on Nagasaki. A fourth brother, Paul, was also in the Marines. He died in an auto accident when he was only 19.

William Sweeney was born Aug. 4, 1939 – about a month before World War II broke out. He graduated from North Quincy High School in 1957 and served in the Marines from 1957 to 1960.

In the interview, William Sweeney recalled being a young boy – age five going on six, as the war continued during the summer of 1945. It was a few weeks before the historic atomic bomb missions. He and his mother took a train to visit Charlie in Florida.

"It wasn't a Pullman train (with sleeping cars.) We had to sleep in the seats. We got to Florida and I remember bits and pieces. I remember playing at the beach. Charlie took my mother up in an airplane that was something he was not supposed to do. I was sitting there and remembering him saying 'Billy.' We went from the tower to the tarmac and there was Col. Tibbets. I said hello.

"We went out to the Enola Gay. It was out on the tarmac. He brought me out and they lifted me into the cockpit of the Enola Gay. He said 'sit down in the pilot's seat.' I sat down and saw what it was like.

"There were also some other planes, including a Japanese plane that had been captured. One was a two-seater. It was very dark green in color. They lifted me up and put me in the gunner's seat in the back. And I remember sitting there with the machine gun."

William Sweeney is speaking inside the North Quincy High School Atrium of Honor on the Saturday of Memorial Day weekend. His family had just visited the graves of his brothers and other family members.

"Memorial Day is a big thing. And it should be," he says, settling into a bench seat in the atrium.

Over his shoulder on the wall above is a mural of Charles Sweeney. There is a black and white photo of the famous pilot with lettering on one side. It reads: "Few men in American history better understand the burden of war and the call to serve than Major General Sweeney, who piloted planes for both the Hiroshima and Nagasaki bombing missions at the end of War II. The war in Japan ended six days after the second mission." The script ends with this quote attributed to him: 'As the man who commanded the last atomic mission, I pray that I retain that singular distinction.'"

There are other murals in the Atrium of Honor, including one for William R. Caddy.

He too attended North Quincy High School before enlisting in the Marines. He was killed during the Battle of Iwo Jima and received the Congressional Medal of Honor – the nation's highest military decoration - for bravery posthumously.

Coincidentally, William Caddy was also the paperboy for the Sweeney family. "He lived two streets over from our house," William remembers.

He points out another hero whose mural hangs in the Atrium – Major Everett Pope – a 1936 North Quincy graduate who also served in the U.S. Marines during World War II. Major Pope received the Congressional Medal of Honor for his conspicuous gallantry on Peleliu in September 1944 while leading his men in an assault on a strategic hill, and for holding it, with rocks and bare fists when ammunition ran low, against Japanese suicide attacks.

"It seems like every family knew someone who was wounded or dying during World War II," Sweeney says. "The consensus at the time we dropped the bombs was we have to win the war. And so, when they dropped the bomb, I suppose the Japanese were beaten already pretty badly. But they are a very proud people and they weren't going to give up. Even after the first bomb they didn't want to give up and they were getting ready to fight back."

Today, Japan is a great country and they do wonderful things, Sweeney says. "That all comes from freedom. Without freedom, you've got nothing. That's the story. I'm sure my brother didn't relish the thought that he would be part of two atomic bomb missions. There was a Catholic mission in Nagasaki and he used to give money to them every year because he felt terrible that all those people died and they were innocent."

Major Gen. Charles Sweeney went off to be an Air Cadet when this nation was at peace in the late 1930s and became a pilot when the U.S. was not in World War II. That changed on Dec. 7, 1941. He graduated Cadet School 15 days after Pearl Harbor and was commissioned an officer at the very beginning of U.S. involvement in the war.

Charles Sweeney has his place in American history. But to his family, he was much more than a pilot. He was a loving son, brother, husband and father.

"Charlie was a guy who worked very hard to do the best job he could. And he was successful. I miss his laugh, his comedy," says William.

"He had a wonderful sense of humor. He was a very good family man and he enjoyed his family. He had 10 children and as you know, life throws a lot of things at you."

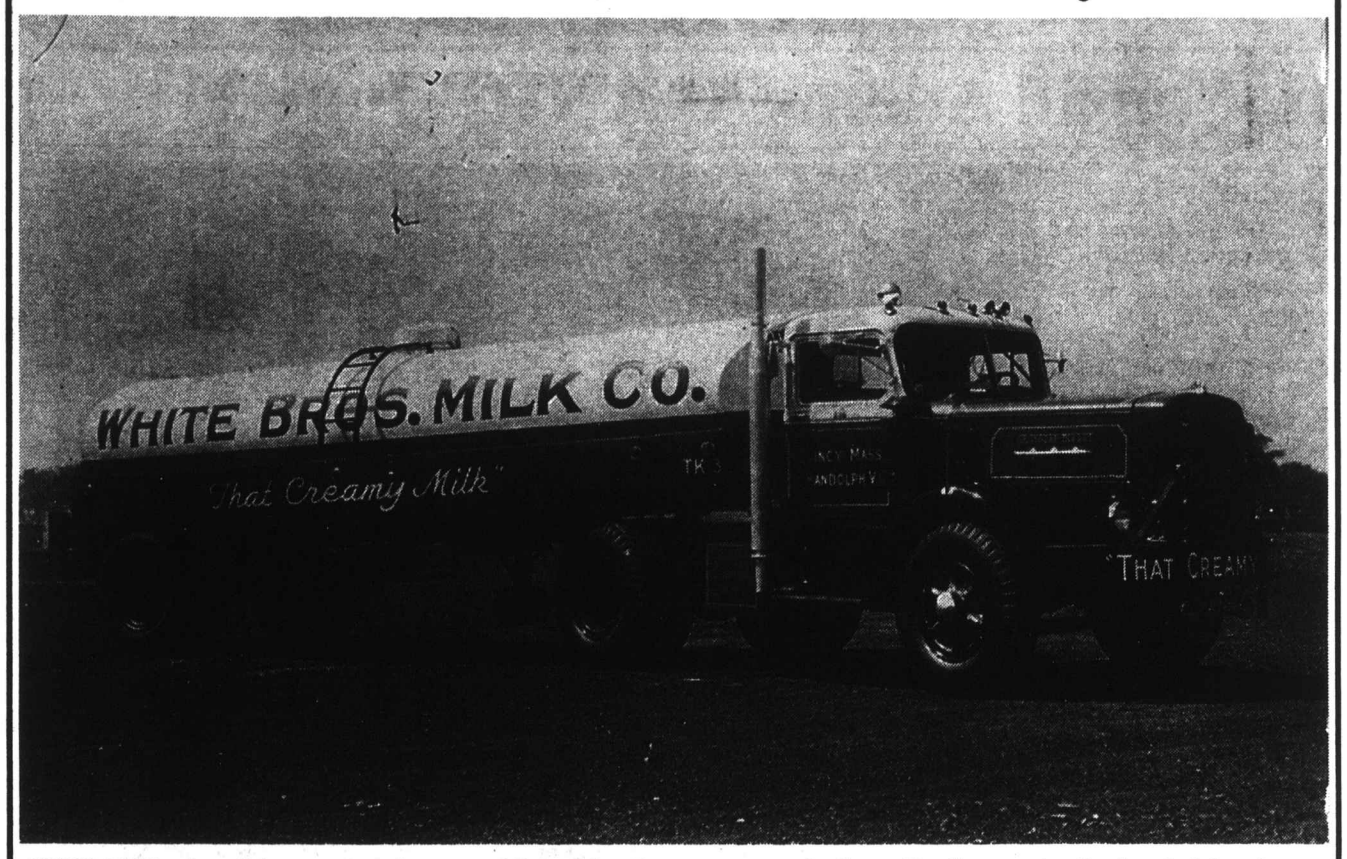
Scenes From Yesterday



THIS 1950 advertising postcard was published by the Autocar Trucks Company's New England branch office on Commonwealth Avenue in Boston. The White Bros. Milk Co. was located on French Street in Norfolk Downs. It was founded in 1914 by Adam and Edwin White who grew up in Atlantic. From a small start the brothers grew the company into a large milk bottling and local delivery business that had over 300 small one-man milk trucks covering southeastern Massachusetts. The tanker trailer truck shown here brought fresh raw milk daily to the Quincy plant from Randolph, Vermont, where the company had a collection center for local dairy farmers. At the Quincy plant the milk was pasteurized and bottled in the famous Cream-Top bottles that were used before milk was homogenized. The company was widely known by its slogan, "That Creamy Milk." White Bros. was purchased in 1961 by the Whiting Milk Company and the Norfolk Downs plant site is now home to the Quincy Commons apartment complex. Thanks Cemetery Foreman, Staff For Great Job

It is a pleasure to write this note of thanks for Paul Hennessey, General Foreman of Quincy Cemeteries, and his staff for the wonderful job they did to beautify the cemeteries for Memorial Day.

With the day-to-day responsibilities, there is always a lot of pressure to make sure the grass is mowed and that everything is perfect for this special holiday. Perfect is the word to describe how the cemeteries looked.

It took the warmer season a long time to reach our area which is why this last compliment is so late. Sorry everyone – it seems winter just finally ended a few weeks ago. While other cemeteries in surrounding communities do not or were unable to bury the deceased, Quincy's cemetery staff succeeded in doing do despite the ongoing snow storms.

Great job!

Thank You From Family Of Michael A. 'Sky' King

Our family would like to send out a heart-felt thank you to everyone who held a good thought for us, offered a ride, sent over food, flowers, plants, cards, spiritual bouquets or simply held our hands during the time of Sky's hospitalization and after his death.

The outpouring of love and support that our family has experienced was truly overwhelming.

To the nurses and doctors of Milton Hospital and Beth Israel, our gratitude for keeping Mike alive for two weeks so we could spend time with him. To anyone who made a phone call, sent a text or email, attended the wake or funeral service, or said a simple prayer for us, we are beyond appreciative and will never forget you.

42-Hour Work Week For Quincy Firefighters

Mayor James R. McIntyre signed a new 42-hour work week for Quincy firefighters.

The new contract reduces the workweek from 48 hours to 42 hours. Present at the signing were Fire Chief Edward F. Barry, Councillor at-Large John J. Quinn and John Menz, Jr., president of Quincy Firefighters Local 792.

Mayor McIntyre also signed contracts for registered nurses at the hospital, giving them a 6 percent salary hike.

Public Works, L.P.Ns and nurses' aides will receive a 6 percent raise effective July 1.

2,200 TO MARCH FOR OLD GLORY

Some 2,200 youngsters and adults will join forces in a demonstration in Quincy Saturday. They are getting together simply to boost their country and flag.

The occasion will be a 2 p.m. Flag Day parade and ceremonies sponsored by the Koch Club, a non-profit recreational-civic organization.

There will be Stars and Stripes by the thousands.

An estimated 1,200 boys and girls, ages five to 14, will march through the Quincy Center area, each proudly carrying Old Glory.

The flag bearers, all members of the Koch Club, will be joined in the march by another 1,000 youngsters and adults including veterans' units, bands and drum and bugle corps. "All kids love a parade," noted Richard J. Koch, Sr., club founder and executive director.

Love Songs Of John, Abigail Adams At ANHP June 21

Opera Performance In The Carriage House

New York City based Chelsea Opera in cooperation with the Adams National Historical Park will present a free performance of the Gary S. Fagin/Terry Quinn opera, A Distant Love: Songs of John and Abigail Adams at the Adams National Historical Park in Quincy on Father's Day, Sunday, June 21 at 2 p.m.

The performance takes place in The Carriage House behind Old House at 135 Adams St. and features soprano Victoria Tralongo and baritone Robert Taylor portraying the iconic roles of Abigail Adams and John Adams. The opera is scored for string quartet. The production has been funded by a grant from the National Endowment for the Arts – Art Works program, and by friends of Chelsea Opera who have matched the $12,500 grant.

Drawn from letters exchanged between John and Abigail Adams, the first part of the work, A Song for Abigail, concerns John Adams' work in Amsterdam to acquire loans from the Dutch to support the Revolution, already well underway. The second half, A Song for John, chronicles Abigail Adams' struggle to maintain her family and their farm while a revolutionary war was fought right on their doorstep.

Married for only 10 years, John Adams left Abigail and their three young children behind in Braintree for Philadelphia in 1774 to participate in the greatest political experiment known until that time, the severing of the American colonies from Great Britain to become an independent nation. Little did they realize that John would spend nearly three decades away from his beloved family and farm, during which time he served as Massachusetts's representative to the Continental Congress, a representative to draft the Massachusetts state constitution, a commissioner to Great Britain, France and the Netherlands, the nation's first Vice-President and its second President.

During those same years, Abigail was left alone to raise her children and keep the farm going, and in doing so survived a war, inflation, and a small pox epidemic. With only occasional reunions lasting a few weeks or months, it was their incredible correspondence that sustained them both, and which has been preserved and handed down as a testament to their love for each other and their mutual determination to see the birth of an independent nation. These letters were the inspiration for A Distant Love: Songs of John and Abigail Adams.

Saferstein*

A Distant Love received its Manhattan premiere from Chelsea Opera in 2013. In the audience, Caroline Keinath, Acting Deputy Superintendent of the Adams National Historical Park, who had driven all the way from Quincy to see the performance enjoyed it so much that on the spot, she invited Chelsea Opera to perform at the ANHP site.

Keinath later wrote, "The words of John and Abigail Adams are poetic and the singers' voices captured the strength and emotion of every word. I appreciate that a specific time and place was chosen, especially a period that carried such importance in the young nation's history AND the experiences and sacrifices of two of the most important patriots of their time. The performance of the Chelsea Opera String Quartet was absolutely elegant. The selection of a string quartet for this period was genius."

Adams National Historical Park, run by the National Park Service, includes three historic houses, the John Adams Birthplace, the John Quincy Adams Birthplace, the Old House at Peace field; the 1870 Stone Library, the 1873 Adams Carriage House, and 12 acres of historic grounds including the formal garden and orchard. It was the home of two American presidents and subsequent generations of their descendants from 1720 to 1927.

This performance venue is accessible in compliance with the ADA. For handicapped or disabled access or if you require an access accommodation for this event such as sign interpretation call 617-773-1177 or contact Lynne Hayden-Findlay (212-260-1796 or ChelseaOpera@aol.com) by June 5, 2015.

Chickie Abdallah Recognized For Dedicated Volunteer Service

Quincy resident Chickie Abdallah was one of three individuals and several organizations recently honored by the Massachusetts Service Alliance for demonstrating the impact of service and volunteerism in the state.

Abdallah received the "Getting Things Done in Massachusetts" award for her service as a Norfolk County RSVP volunteer. The award recognizes an exceptional AmeriCorps, Commonwealth Corps, or Senior Corps member (including RSVP) who demonstrates outstanding commitment and service over and above their routine volunteer assignment.

Abdallah is a veteran of the Navy WAVES division, or US Naval Reserve for Women. Throughout her life she has served Quincy: cleaning beaches and helping neighbors informally, coaching softball and leading scouts, and serving with St. Joseph's Parish, Youth Activities Commission, Ward 2 Civic Association, MBTA Rider Oversight Committee, and Quincy's Beaches and Coastal Commission.

Abdallah joined Norfolk County RSVP when she began volunteering at Interfaith Social Services in 2006. Interfaith helps over 7,500 families annually with programs focused on hunger, mental health and emergency assistance. Chickie served at the front desk, checked in clients for the food pantry, sat one-on-one with families, and staffed the Bureau Drawer thrift shop.

In 2007, she combined her passions for Interfaith and Quincy's public beaches by co-founding the John Hancock Polar Plunge fundraiser with Leo Kelley of the Beaches and Coastal Commission. This event brought attention to Quincy's beaches and to the needs of vulnerable families. It also inspired daring outdoor-lovers to participate in service. Participation ranged from toe-dunking to full plunges into the cold January Wollaston Beach water. Over seven years the event raised $30,000 for Interfaith Social Services, thanks to Chickie's organizing work.

Abdallah was nominated for the "Getting Things Done" award by Bettyanne Lang, retired Interfaith Social Services volunteer coordinator and Claire Howsberger, both leaders of the RSVP Advisory Committee. Her nomination was supported by Interfaith Executive Director Rick Doane, Mayor Thomas Koch, Norfolk County Commissioner John Gillis, state Rep. Ron Mariano, and friends from around Quincy. Norfolk County RSVP places and supports volunteers age 55+ in a variety of public and nonprofit agencies, and is sponsored by the Norfolk County Commissioners with funding from the national Senior Corps.

Lottery Communications Director Speaker At Southwest Seniors Meeting

The Southwest Seniors will meet on Wednesday, June 17 at 1 p.m. at the Ward 4 Community Center, 100 Brooks Ave., South Quincy.

Guest speaker will be Christian Teja, director of communications for the Massachusetts State Lottery. As director of communications Teja interacts with reporters and the public to ensure that lottery news is delivered in a timely and accurate fashion. This includes providing a variety of facts and figures about lottery sales and the revenue it generates for all of the 351 cities and towns in Massachusetts.

After the presentation there will be a question and answer period.

Refreshments will be served after the presentation. The senior group meets weekly on Wednesdays from 1 to 3 p.m. to discuss news and issues that concern seniors along with guest speakers on issues and information for seniors.

The Southwest Seniors welcome all seniors throughout the city to join the weekly group.

Friends Of The Blue Hills Peek-A-Blue Hike

The Friends of the Blue Hills is participating in Quincy's 50 Days of FREEdom campaign by offering a "Quincy Peek-a-Blue Hike" on Thursday, June 18, at 11 a.m. at the St. Moritz Trailhead.

Parking is available at Shea Rink, 651 Willard St. This free, one-hour guided hike is for parents and tots. Free drinks and healthy snacks will be provided, and there will be a simple scavenger hunt for parents and children with all children receiving a prize at the end.

Although the Friends of the Blue Hills offers free hikes every other Tuesday throughout the year at Houghton's Pond in Milton, this is the only Peek-a-Blue hike scheduled so far in Quincy. More hikes may be planned depending on interest.

For more information, email info@FriendsoftheBlueHills.org or visit www.FriendsoftheBlueHills.org/peekablue.

WHAT'S COOKING with Marie & Suzie

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO and SUZIE FALCO

Carrot Soufflé

By MARIE

My neighbor Janet often times brings me some delicious tastes of all kinds of food. She enjoys cooking very much and recently brought me a wonderful carrot soufflé. She said the recipe was from her sister, Debbie.

I couldn't believe how easy it is to make as you will note.

CARROT SOUFFLÉ

2 cups carrots (cooked and mashed)
1/2 cup softened butter
3/4 cup sugar
1/4 teaspoon cinnamon
1 tablespoon flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
dash of salt
1 cup whole milk

Beat all ingredients together until smooth. Pour into a 2 quart casserole dish and bake uncovered in a 350-degree oven for about 40 minutes.

Tahini Cookies

By SUZIE

Tahini is a paste made from ground sesame seeds that is very common in middle eastern recipes. (If you have had store bought hummus, you have had tahini!)

Here are 10 reasons why you should be using it. Very versatile and can be used to make creamy salad dressings, hummus, and even cookies!

1. It's rich in minerals such as phosphorus, lecithin, magnesium, potassium and iron.

2. It's a good source of Methionine, which aids in liver detoxification.

3. It's one of the best sources of calcium out there.

4. It's high in vitamin E and vitamins B1, B2, B3, B5 and B15.

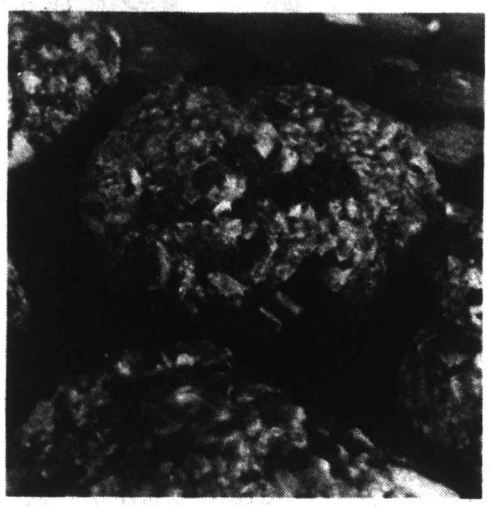
5. Helps to promote healthy cell growth.

6. Prevent anemia.

7. Helps to maintain healthy skin and muscle tone.

8. It has 20 percent complete protein, making it a higher protein source than most nuts.

9. It's easy for your body to digest because of its high alkaline mineral content, which is great for assisting in weight loss.



10. It is high in unsaturated fat

Preheat oven to 350 degrees.

Combine 6 tablespoons tahini with 1/2 cup raw honey or real maple syrup, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, 1/2 cup walnuts, 1 1/2 cups gluten free oats, and 1/4 cup dark chocolate chips OR raisins.

Mix well and drop on parchment paper lined cookie sheets (about the size of a tablespoon per cookie) and bake at 350 degrees for about 12 minutes or until done. They will be still soft in the center. Do not overbake.

Raspberry Crumble Bars

By MARIE

Here is a great recipe for raspberry crumble bars from my daughter, Ann Marie. They are so crunchy and chewy and can be made ahead of time

2 sticks unsalted butter (at room temperature)
1/4 cup sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 1/3 cups flour
1//2 teaspoon salt
10-12 ounces raspberry jam
2/3 cup plain granola
1/4 cup sliced almonds
powdered sugar for sprinkling

Mix the butter and sugar and add the vanilla until well blended.

Add the flour and salt to the butter mixture until it all comes together like a ball

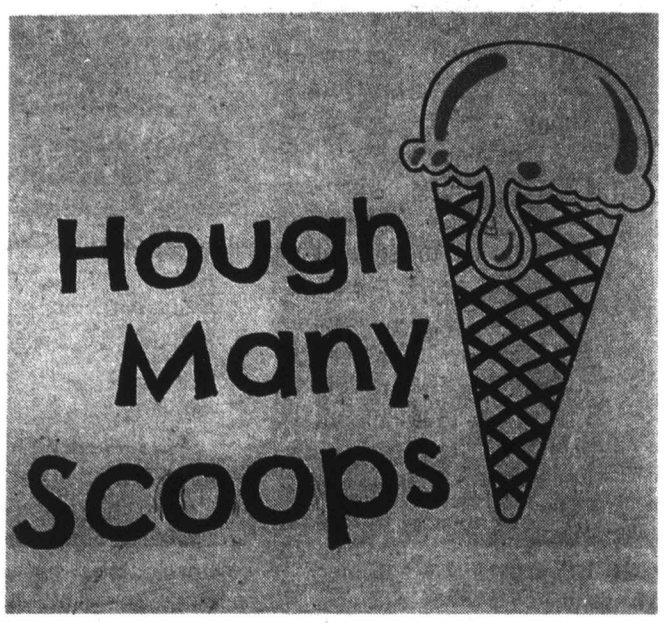
Turn the dough onto a board and place 2/3 of the dough on the bottom of a 9-inch square pan and then spread the jam with about a 1/4 inch border. Mix the granola into the remaining dough with your hands.

Break the dough in small bits and place on top of the jam Sprinkle the almonds on top. Bake in a 350-degree oven for 45 minutes until lightly browned.

'Hough Many Scoops' Ice Cream Shop Has Local Flavor

A new ice cream shop featuring "local flavor" is opening in Houghs Neck.

The shop, called "Hough Many Scoops," will open June 17 at 1094 Sea St., former site of the Orbit Sign buidling next to the fire station in Houghs Neck. Proprietors and local residents Scott Campbell and Kelli Galligan said their shop may rekindle some fond memories for residents who recall an ice cream shop at the same location some 70 years ago. It was located across from the former Paige's Pharmacy.



LOGO FOR "Hough Many Scoops," a new ice cream shop opening June 17 at 1094 Sea St., Houghs Neck.

Campell and Galligan said they plan to open Hough Many Scoops seasonally from March to November. Hours will be 11 a.m. to 10 p.m. The shop will serve both hard and soft serve ice cream as well as frozen yogurt. They'll also showcase a specialty ice cream sandwich featuring home-made chocolate chip cookies by Vermont's Ice Cream Sandwiches with a choice of ice cream made on site. The cookies are made locally by elementary school teacher Jenny O'Connor and her family.

Also on the menu will be mix-ins, sundaes and shakes. There is limited seating inside the store. Leo Kelly Park with park benches is next to the shop.

"There will also be a t-shirt winning ice cream for the brave," Campbell said. "The name of the dish is "The Crusher." The ingredients will be plenty and will win a t-shirt saying something like, "I crushed The Crusher!" The Crusher is a local favorite place on the dike that all Neckers know and admire."

Campbell noted that generations of local families have gone fishing and boating and to the beaches togehter. "What better way to end the day than to have an ice cream. We are hoping it will be a tradition for years to come."

Galligan agreed.

"Houghs Neck is a neighborhood that is steeped with history. Generations of families summered and, ultimately, settled here. There's no better family neighborhood than what we have here in the Neck," Galligan said.

Campbell added:

"This is a very strong neighborhood. Every day and night, you can see families walking and riding bikes. Hopefully, this is a place they can use as a destination and make some great memories, 'I remember my parents taking me to Paige's Pharmacy when I was a kid.' Who knows, maybe they'll say the same about Hough Many Scoops," Campbell said.

The shop is also a tribute to Paul McCloskey who passed away in July, 2014.

"He lived and breathed Houghs Neck," Campbell said. "It was the place he grew up, raised his kids and lived his whole life. It was his most favorite place in the world. I can't think of a better way to honor him than by making the community he loved most, better."

Galligan and Campbell said they hope their new shop becomes a welcome addition to the close-knit coastal community of Houghs Neck.

"Houghs Neck has come such a long way. The community is so strong here and the response has been phenomenal all across the city. I never realized there were people in this world who liked ice cream as much as me and my family," Galligan said.

"In the end, for so many reasons, I think the neighborhood needs it," Campbell said. "Hopefully, this will make the neighborhood brighter. It will be a clean, nice spot for families to come and enjoy a nice treat. For practical reasons, living on a peninsula, there's only one way in and one way out; as our kids get older, they'll need a place to work. Hopefully, this will be part of a solution to that-- although, the bar will be set pretty high for working there...maybe they won't like the fact we will take report cards into consideration during the hiring process," he added.

will receive $3,672,000 in circuit breaker funding from the state for special education – $472,000 more than they did this year.

The School Committee was set to vote on Quincy Public Schools' proposed $99,259,723 budget for FY16, which includes money from both the general fund and the state, at its meeting last night (Wednesday). The School Committee worked on the budget previously during several meetings held last month.

One of the five positions created in the new budget is to address classroom size. That position would be filled if needed to ensure classroom sizes stay within an acceptable range.

"Looking at classroom sizes and all, the School Committee felt very strongly the superintendent should have one classroom teacher to deal with if indeed we got class sizes where we have concerns," School Superintendent Dr. Richard DeCristofaro told the council. "That's very appreciated."

The second position is a tech/engineering teacher. That will allow all five of the city's middle schools to offer tech/engineering classes to students in grades 6-8.

"The School Committee felt very strongly that our tech/engineering program at middle schools should be enhanced to include grade 6 as well so within this budget we have grade 6, grade 7, and grade 8 for tech/engineering at every middle school," the superintendent explained.

"We're very proud of that and they work so greatly with our science teachers as those standards change, so it's a nice team we build. Middle school students really enjoy the hands on experiences they have."

The school system will also bring on two teachers for the English language learner (ELL) program.

"The English language learner program will increase by two positions. Based on the data that we have that's needed," DeCristofaro said. "State regulations ensure that our ELL learners have blocks of hours, especially at the elementary level, very much like special education. We needed to take care of that."

The final position is a new music instructor.

"We're increasing to 85 to 90 musicians," DeCristofaro said, referring to the high school band. "We need to make sure we have the staff that can work with our band students. Really it's quantity but it's also tremendous quality.

"We're also looking at this summer having a marching band camp that our music staff is going to put on. We're looking forward to that program really growing and as you know with the music it's lifelong. We're very, very proud of where we are in that regard."

Each new position is budgeted for $50,000.

The 38 academic aides included in the new budget already work for the school system. That number includes 20 special education aides, many of who are already working as long-term substitutes, according to Laura Owens, the assistant to the superintendent. The new budget brings them on as full-time employees with benefits.

The remaining 18 positions are for full-time kindergarten aides. Those aides already work for the school system and had been funded by the state's Quality Full Day Kindergarten Grant; Gov. Charlie Baker cut that grant earlier this year. The city will pay $320,300 for the 18 kindergarten aides.

Also included in the budget is an extra $11,300 for elementary extracurricular activities, with each of the city's 11 elementary schools receiving between $760 and $1,574 more than they did this year; $10,000 for professional development, bringing that total to $38,000; and $40,000 to upgrade computer labs at two schools. Pension costs are down $18,363 this year to a total of $15,078.

There will be no increase in the amount charged for school lunch and food service, athletics fees, school building rentals, or transportation.

Several councillors used the budget meeting to ask DeCristofaro about the school system.

Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall asked about the city's continued growth and the impact it would have on the school system.

"It's not smoke and mirrors to see we're experiencing substantial economic growth here in the city of Quincy. We have construction projects, multi-unit construction projects, coming online almost monthly," Croall said. "What are your thoughts on the economic growth of the city as it relates to stabilization in the classroom?"

The superintendent replied that the schools have enough space for the near future.

"The academic classroom space we have right now is very, very adequate. Our highest class sizes are 22, 23, maybe three classes of 24 as we project for September. Those are very, very good class sizes," DeCristofaro said. "I think we're fine here. I don't think we're at a point where we need to look certainly at the near future and say we need this or we need that as the growth continues in the city."

Croall, as a follow up, mentioned the planned 140-unit apartment complex on East Howard Street in Quincy Point. Projects like that may cater to younger professionals, he explained, but that doesn't mean families won't move in.

"They may build it and say this is going to be marketed to millennials, but sometimes what we believe and what the reality is become to different things," Croall said.

DeCristofaro replied that the apartment complexes haven't led to a large influx of students yet. But he also said the Clifford Marshall Elementary School, which serves Quincy Point and is the newest elementary school in the city, is a concern.

"Marshall is probably the one that would be of major concern in the future, looking two years, three years, four years in the future to see where we go with that," the superintendent said. "It also may be difficult to redistrict."

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci asked about plans to replace or remodel Sterling Middle School.

"I do a lot of community meetings as you know in the auditorium of Sterling. I can't tell you how many folks sit in the chairs and they're in their 60s, 70s and 80s and they say 'wow, this has not changed at all,'" Palmucci said. "They can still see their names carved in chairs."

DeCristofaro said Ai3 Architects has been brought on as the designer for the building; the Wayland-based company also designed the new Central Middle School. The project is now in the feasibility study phase and the superintendent is optimistic the Massachusetts School Building Authority will ultimately decide to construct a new building instead of remodeling the old one, which opened in 1927.

"Ai3 was all about new and I think the MSBA at this point – not to speak for the MSBA – but I think they realize that Sterling Middle School needs to be new," he said.

Ai3 and Joslin Lesser, the project's manager, were set to provide an update to the School Committee yesterday (Wednesday). DeCristofaro said the next step is looking at the educational programs needed in the school, which would be sent to the MSBA for approval. At that point, the MSBA will determine if a new school would be built or the old one renovated.

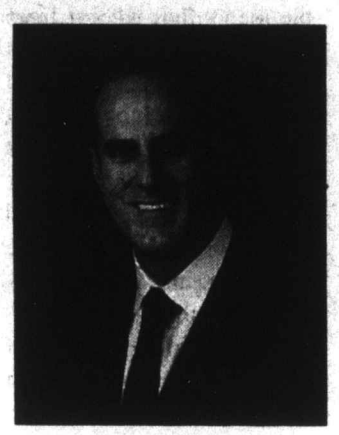
Brad Croall Seeking Re-Election As Ward 2 City Councillor

Ward 2 City Councillor Brad Croall announces he is a candidate for re-election in this fall's municipal election.

The Committee to Elect Brad Croall will host a campaign kickoff tonight (Thursday) from 6 to 8 p.m. at the Commonwealth Restaurant and Lounge, 79 Parkingway, Quincy. Suggested donation is $25. All are welcome to attend.



BRAD CROALL

"Ward 2 has grown in a positive direction during my first two terms," said Croall, 35, a 1998 graduate of Quincy High School, where he played football, basketball and baseball. "When I first campaigned, I told residents that I had a vision to implement a progressive agenda that focused on constituent services."

In his re-election campaign press release, Croall noted the following successes:

- Creation of the Citizens Alert Police (C.A.P.) Program
- Chairmanship of the Senior Citizens Committee
- Dramatic transformation of parks and recreation, including the trophy Faxon Park property
- The creation of a new e-newsletter, the Councilor's Chronicle
- An engaged community of Ward 2 residents

He said the Citizens Alert Police Program is a powerful tool to connect neighbors with neighbors to create a safer, more alert neighborhood for Ward 2 families.

"I'm a big believer that it is better to try and tackle crime-related issues as a community rather than go at them alone," Croall said

Croall said his leadership of the Senior Citizens Committee has helped increase the quality of life for the city's more experienced residents with in-building prescription drop-off days, "Sizzling Seniors Specials" program, public safety improvements by way of the C.A.P program and being there as a vocal advocate for those residents living in public housing.

"I'm very grateful to have been given the opportunity to work for such a caring and thoughtful group of people who have taught me so many life lessons," said Croall.

Croall said the Ward 2 Parks and Recreation facilities have undergone dramatic improvements while he has served as city councillor. Faxon Park, he pointed out, boasts a beautiful new state-of-the-art playground filled with children from across the city.

Croall has also worked with the Park Conservancy to raise money to create a new walking trail that allows residents to experience the beauty of Faxon Park. He's also working currently to upgrade the fields at Fore River Field, a staple of the Quincy Point community that Croall believes is long overdue for a makeover.

"As a lifelong resident and former QHS athlete, I have always had a passion for parks and recreation," said Croall. "As your city councilor, I quickly realized that I was in a great position to be a vocal presence with hope of providing every individual, every family and every senior citizen a new experience when visiting the parks in Ward 2."

He said "The Councilor's Chronicle" keeps all Ward 2 citizens, and any other interested Quincy residents, abreast of all the developments across the neighborhood.

"More importantly, the newsletter gives everyone an opportunity to get involved," said Croall. To sign up for the newsletter e-mail croall4ward2@gmail.com.

"Starting out as a community activist with the Ward 2 Civic Association has helped me to not only understand the ward and its issues but has given me the grass roots appreciation for the great place we all call home," said Croall. "From Quincy Point to Penn's Hill, this district and its people have been wonderful to work for. We have a lot of positive momentum taking place in Ward 2 and I'm inviting all residents to join my team as I go forward to earn my spot as your city councilor and continue to push for progress."

we're required to provide all of our officers. We try and meet that through various training classes and whatnot through the department and we also work with the Mass. Police Training Council. We have to train our officers and we have to provide overtime for the officers for training," Police Chief Paul Keenan explained at the June 3 budget hearing.

"Although we have an extensive training program that is continuously ongoing – and I try to utilize as many of the free classes as I can find – we try and send them to us much training outside the department as we can. I believe it's critical; well-trained officers better serve their community."

This year, Keenan said, officers attended training sessions on mental illness, legal updates, handgun and long gun training, hand-to-hand defensive combat, and updates on motor vehicle law.

Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin, who works a chief probation officer in Plymouth County, attended one of those training sessions on mental health, substance abuse and first aid.

"I had an opportunity to sit in on a class with some of my probation officers and some of the police officers," Coughlin said. "It was a terrific opportunity and a learning experience for my staff and it was fun being there with your officers too."

The new budget doesn't provide money to bring on additional officers. The Department is budgeted for the chief, four captains, 14 lieutenants, 30 sergeants, and 161 patrol officers; 159 patrol officers are currently on the force with the other two spots being held for active duty military personnel.

Keenan said the department is at the highest staffing level in the past 10 or 12 years; the department at one time had 141 or 142 patrol officers and 27 sergeants.

"Over the last few years, we've done a substantial amount of hiring," the chief said. "This is the peak staffing level we've had."

There could be some retirements in the upcoming fiscal year – Keenan said a couple officers have mentioned the possibility of retiring. Those positions would likely be filled by lateral transfers from other departments and not by recruits who complete the training academy, according to the chief, because it could take 12-15 months to find an academy spot, have the recruit complete the academy and complete field training after that.

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci asked Keenan if the department has enough officers as the city continues to grow.

"We're growing. We're adding people everyday," Palmucci said. "More and more people are moving into Quincy. Are we keeping the right levels?"

Keenan indicated he would ideally want up to 170 patrol officers, but said the department is at a safe level as is.

"I think we're at a safe level," Keenan said. "I would like to see more. I think optimal staffing levels would be 165 to 170 patrol officers. I think with that level of officers we can increase the size of the drug unit; we can expand community policing a little bit.

"We've done very well with what we've had over the years and I think it's a credit to our officers who work everyday on the streets. We are a safe community. We have to keep on top of it. We are continuing to grow; every time we grow a little bit, problems grow."

Councillor Doug Gutro asked if there was a backlog with the drug unit. Keenan said there is, which isn't unique to Quincy.

"There is always a backlog," Keenan said. "I could double the size of the drug unit and they'd still be busy; they'd still be going 24/7. There is a huge backlog in that respect. We could use more help in that area but our community is not unique."

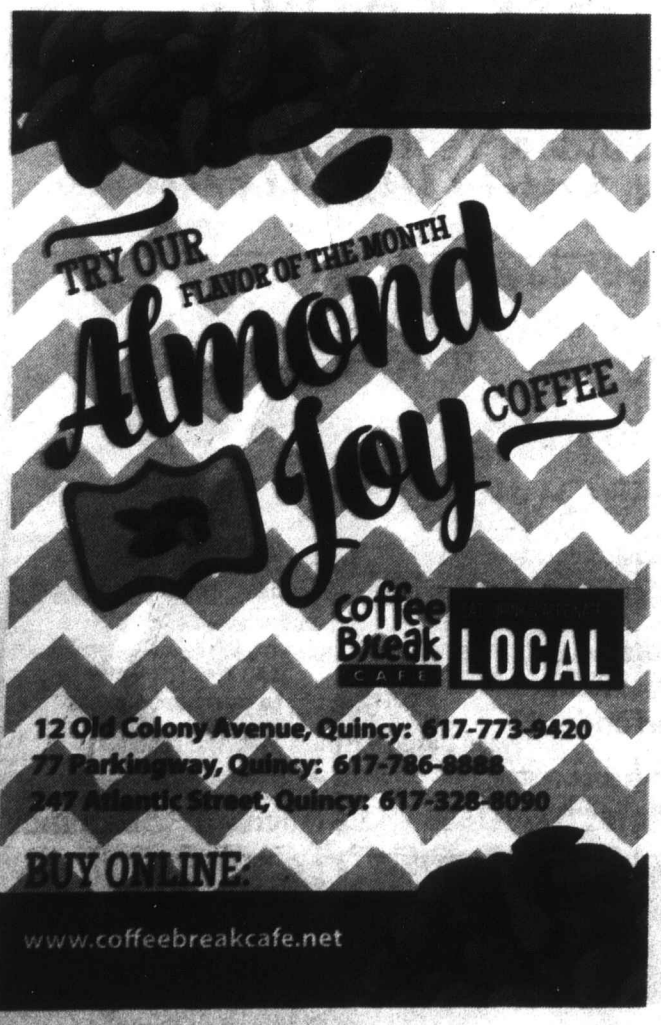
Keenan said drug dealers come to Quincy from Boston, Brockton and Randolph, and most deals happen at the buyers' home or in vehicles parked on side streets and in parking lots.

"We're aggressive on that. We're out there everyday and every night making good drug arrests," Keenan said. "They'll follow it up and follow it up and try and get into a bigger dealer."

Also approved on June 3 were the $755,244 budget for the Mayor's Office, which is up $19,000 over the current fiscal year budget and includes the second part of a $28,000 raise for the mayor that was approved last June and the $623,676 budget for the City Council Office, which includes the second part of raises for each councillor approved last June. Those raises couldn't take effect until Jan 1., 2015, under state law. Both budgets were approved by voice vote, with Gutro voting against the budget for the Mayor's Office. The City Council budget was approved with no dissent.

Other budgets approved that night were $1.4 million for the Department of Municipal Finance; the City Clerk's Office's $363,761 budget; the $754,001 budget for the Election Department, which is up $200,000 over the current fiscal year because three elections (the municipal preliminary election on Sept. 22, the Nov. 3 municipal election and a presidential primary in March 2016) will take place in FY16; the $68,728 budget for the Board of License Commissioners; $25,000 for the city census; $118,865 for animal control; $1.67 million for the Drain Department; $117,500 for celebrations; $23.84 million for retirement contributions; $150,000 for unemployment compensation; $2.14 million for Medicare; $26,795 for non-contributory pensions; and $143,715 for the Furnace Brook Golf Course lease.

The council will vote on the full $277 million general fund budget at its meeting on June 15.



DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

WORD OF MOUTH

For patients with missing teeth, dental implants present the most natural replacement option. Dental implants look, feel, and function so naturally because the titanium implant provides a stable foundation to which substitute teeth can be attached. When it was first discovered that pure titanium could fuse with bone under the right conditions, its application as an artificial root became clearly evident. The first step in evaluating if dental implants are right for you is for the dentist to record a thorough medical and dental history. Diagnostic procedures such as study casts, x-rays, tissue examinations, and CAT scans need to be evaluated. If there is insufficient bone to support the implant, it will limit overall success and cosmetic results.

If you have any questions about your chances for replacing lost teeth through the latest techniques, call us at 617 479-6220. We can provide you with implants, dentures, bridges, and crowns, as well as general dental treatment for the entire family. For a happy, healthy, and good-looking smile, we urge you to have a checkup soon. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. In addition to adequate bone in the jaw to support the implant, the ideal candidate for a dental implant has healthy gum tissues that are free of periodontal disease.

sidered when Koch determines how to pay back the shortfall.

"Right now we have over $10 million in stabilization. We have $2.3 million in free cash. We're closing the books at the end of June. It takes several weeks to figure out exactly where we're at; we expect to have a surplus from this fiscal year," the mayor responded when asked how he would pay off the deficit.

"Then we've got the $1.7 million that was budgeted, so take it off the $13.5 million. We're going to get some money from FEMA. It will be seven digits; my guess is it would be a minimum of $1.5 million and we could get as much as $3 or $4 million.

"When you mix all that up, come the fall we'll be able to resolve it. I don't know that we'll have to amortize it over three years, but we have that option under the state law that was passed. We'll figure it out and make it work. It's unfortunate because we were making great progress in building our stabilization and our reserves, but that's what it's for, this kind of event."

When asked if he would pay off the shortfall in its entirety this year, Koch said the city could do so and that all options remain on the table at this point.

"We could; we would drain down our reserves if we did," he said. "It's a decision I have to make. Everything is on the table at this point on how we're going to resolve it."

The lion's share of the city's snow and ice removal expenses went towards removing the snow from streets and bringing it to snow dumps, including ones in the Fore River Shipyard, Squantum Point Park and Crown Colony. Hauling that snow alone cost $7 million, pushing and piling snow at the snow dumps another $1.5 million and police details, many of which were related to snow hauling, $500,000, according to figures the mayor presented to the City Council on June 1.

The city, he explained at that meeting and in the recent interview, does limited snow hauling during typical winters around schools, MBTA stations and business districts such as Quincy Center. Doing it on neighborhood streets, which was done this past winter, was "tedious work," Koch told The Sun.

"When you do Quincy Center, for example, we can shut down Hancock Street, push everything to the center and load the trucks. When you're doing these side streets, you can't do that. It's tedious work," he explained.

"You don't want to do any damage to low-lying lines and [tree] limbs and fences. You don't want to be hitting anybody's property. The maneuverability is very difficult, so you've got to push it almost on the end of the street to the nearest cross street. It's a much slower method because you've just got to be so much more careful.

"The other thing is your lighting in your business areas at night, the visibility is much clearer. You've got pedestrians walking around at midnight coming home from work or someone walking through a neighborhood, they're not as easily seen. So you've got to be so careful in the operation. The last thing we needed was somebody getting hurt by one of the machines clearing the snow for public safety purposes."

The hauling operations this winter also extended to major arteries where it doesn't happen in typical years, including Newport Avenue, Independence Avenue and East and West Squantum Streets.

"These are main, main drags that carry a lot of traffic and the traffic was being impeded tremendously by the windrows being pushed out onto the street. A plow pushes it back but when the windrow gets this high it can't push it any further. We normally don't do streets like that," Koch said.

"It was the neighborhood streets plus the mains we normally don't do. It was just an intense effort."

Koch said he met everyday in his office with the police and fire chiefs, the school superintendent, and other officials to come up with a plan of action for that day. Those meetings, he said, came to resemble a war room.

"It really did. We had the big map up. We had individual maps. Then we'd break the maps down for the contractors by route, keeping track of what was done," Koch said. "Then you get into the fire hydrant issue and the catch basin issue and nursing homes and churches and funeral homes – trying to help them out – because it's all about serving the public."

The first priority was to ensure public safety vehicles would be able to get up and down city streets.

"Public safety was first – absolutely first," the mayor said. "We had five fires during that time period. All single alarms. All knocked down quickly. So response time was not a major issue. That's one thing you worry about – a house burning to the ground because a fire truck couldn't get there. Somebody having a medical event, a very serious event, where the ambulance couldn't get there. It's public safety first.

"Then it's getting the school routes ready and the T routes for those people to walk to the stations. You want it to be as safe as it can for the pedestrians. That was the other area we chipped away at."

Koch said the city will look at purchasing new snow removal equipment after the past winter. Among those are possible replacements for the city's fleet of snow fighters – large trucks with two plow blades and a large hopper for salt or sand – and snow blower like attachments for other vehicles. Officials will also look at purchasing special snow melters, but those may prove too costly.

"We're looking now at additional equipment. First of all, some of the snow fighting equipment is getting up there. Some of those big trucks that are snow fighters – they've got the blade underneath, they've got the blade in the front and they're made to carry big loads of salt – they're getting up there, 20 years old. So the life of those are coming to an end. So the normal wear and tear on stuff we're due to do things anyway," Koch said.

"I'm inclined to look at one of the big snow blower attachments that goes on the loader that we got from MassDOT through the effort of the governor, because that shoot can be directed out into an open space area or it can be directed into a truck as you're driving along and you haul it away at the same time. You can't use it everywhere but it has an application on the main drags. You ride the truck along next to it and you keep replacing the trucks and you pick up a ton of time. The downside is there are frequent breakdowns because you don't know what's in the curb line. Something goes into that auger, could be something crazy, and it shuts it down. The efficiency it creates overall is well worth it. You can make up a lot of time. So I'm looking at one of those.

"The melter is interesting. They're high maintence and they use a ton of fuel. So you talk about saving trucking it but you're using a lot of fuel. It's like a jet plane, the noise that it makes is like a jet engine on the thing and it just sucks the fuel right up. That's a very expensive piece of equipment. We're looking at it, but I'm inclined if I have to prioritize the snow blower attachment would probably be the first item I looked at."

Koch said the snow melters would cost $300,000 or more depending on the size of the unit. The snow blower attachments could cost between $100,000 and $300,000; the wide range in that estimate is because new trucks could be needed mount the attachments to.

The mayor said he is looking at that equipment as part of a planned capital improvement bond.

"I'm looking at it as part of the whole capital improvement plan, which is very complicated and in depth. We're looking at every aspect of things – roads, sewer, water, drain, seawalls, pump stations, you name it. Anything we oversee, we're looking at it. And equipment is part of it – When do we need to replace the next fire engine and the backhoes and dump trucks," Koch said.

"Something like special snow equipment would probably take out early because it takes time to get those pieces and we want it ready for this coming winter. We could perhaps in September be looking, depending on how we're shaping up with the plan."

Summer Specials Begin At Crane Library Bookstore

By MIRIAM JOSEPH

"'Tis the season" to dig out those shaded bifocals and enjoy some summer reading by your pool, or while you're on a beach at The Cape. And your greatest and most reasonable resource for light, vacation-time reading right now is the Crane Library Bookstore.

All fiction books, including the ever-popular mysteries, are on a buy-one-get-one-free special through June and July. Hard-cover books sell for $2 and paperbacks for $1. All books in the store are in gently-used condition.

And if reading is not your summer relaxation preference, the Bookstore has a variety of entertainment media, including DVD's, CD's, videos and audio-books. The shop also offers foreign language and reference material, some giftware, and a large selection of children's and young adult books and videos.

With the exception of some distinctive items, like the shop's wide assortment of coffee table books, most merchandise sells for a dollar or two, and there's a special corner of the store where some best-selling authors' books sell for four for a dollar.

The shop is open on Thursday evenings from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. and on Saturdays from 10 am to 4 pm., and has its own separate entrance on Spear St., in the rear of the architecturally historic Thomas Crane Public Library.

Sponsored and managed by The Friends of the Crane Library, 100% of the bookstore's proceeds are used to fund the many community programs at the library, including lectures, concerts, film screenings, museum passes, and a variety of special events for children.

Wollaston Garden Club Receives State, Regional Awards

At the 88th Annual Meeting of the Garden Club Federation of Massachusetts (GCFM) held in Framingham June 3, the Wollaston Garden Club received formal recognition for their club's diverse work in the community as reflected in their 2014 Press Book.

The club received First Place in the 2014 Publicity Press Book Award for an extra large club in the state competition, and Honorable Mention in the New England Region competition.

The purpose of a garden club press book is to capture the history of the club for a particular year. During the year club members collected press releases from newsletters, online and in news publications, like The Quincy Sun.

In January of 2015 the press and publicity committee met with its chair, Pat Artis, to sort, cut, paste and compile the previous year's events in press. Working on this year's press book committee was Ruth Griffin, Claire Fitzmaurice, Suzanne West, Karen McCarthy, Val Stromberg and club president, Anita Fasano. Fasano supplied the club with beautiful colorful photos from members' gardens which were used to accent each page of the press book. Awards chairp of the Wollaston Garden Club, Colleen Lawler remarked how "the press book does a wonderful job of capturing the club's history and is a necessary part of archiving the mission and work of the club."

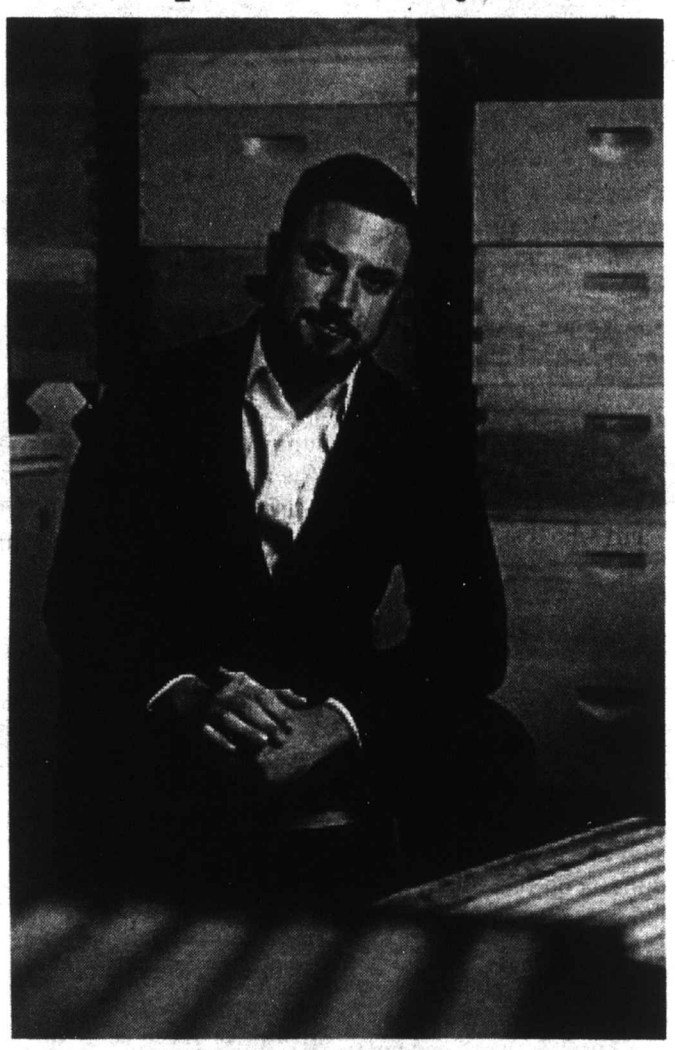
Bees Topic At Library June 16



NOAH WILSON-RICH will talk about the role beekeeping can play in revitalizing both a city and a species Tuesday, June 16 at 7 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library 40 Washington St., Quincy. Bees have been rapidly and mysteriously disappearing from rural areas. This has grave implications for food production. But bees seem to flourish in urban environments — and cities can use their help, too. Wilson-Rich is the author of The Bee: A Natural History and owner of Best Bees (http://www.bestbees.com/), a company that offers beekeeping services. Copies of his book will be available for purchase and signing after his presentation.

Brewster Awarded EMS Contract

Brewster over current provider Fallon Ambulance and Action Ambulance, citing additional resources, an innovative community outreach program, state-of-the-art technology and lower private-payer costs for ambulance trips outlined in Brewster's proposal as among the primary factors.

"The committee worked diligently on reviewing these proposals, and the result will be a substantial expansion and enhancement of emergency response for the residents of our City," said Mayor Koch.

Under the current contract, the City is protected by 2 Advanced Life Support (ALS) ambulances, 1 Basic Life Support (BLS) ambulance 24-hours a day. Under the new contract with Brewster, those numbers will jump to 5 ALS ambulances and 2 BLS ambulances. Brewster's proposal was the only one that included the dedication of a 5th ALS ambulance to the City.

The City does not pay for emergency ambulance service, rather costs are passed on to insurance companies and patients. The committee found that Brewster offered the most beneficial rate package for customers, who are either private-payer or pay a deductible to their insurance.

The contract term is for five years plus an option for additional years, according to the mayor's office.

Brewster plans to implement its innovative "Smart 911" program for Quincy residents at no charge. The program allows residents to sign-up for the program and provide basic medical information that first responders will see when they are dispatched to an address.

The Committee also cited Brewster's plans for upgraded technology in ambulances, communications, training for City first responders, and translation services as among the other factors in recommending Brewster.

The 8-member committee met several times to deliberate the proposals, and comprised of Fire Chief Joseph Barron, Police Chief Paul Keenan, Mary Jo Brogna, the associate chief nurse at Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center, Health Commissioner Andrew Scheele, Deputy Fire Chief Joseph Jackson, Fire Captain Richard Bryan, Police Captain Anthony DiBona, and Police Sargeant Greg Goyette.

Brewster CEO Mark Brewster said qualified paramedics currently working for Fallon will be offered jobs at Brewster, which also plans to operate three garages in the City. The new contract will take effect July 1.

"We are looking forward to working closely with the City to design an EMS system suited to their unique needs and to help improve the level of service throughout the community," Brewster said. "Our dispatch, EMTs, paramedics, local healthcare resources and leadership have prepared for a seamless transition into service on July 1, and we are looking forward to bringing the Brewster brand of performance to everyone in Quincy."

'This Star Won't Go Out' Fundraiser June 20

A fundraiser to support "This Star Won't Go Out," established in memory of a 16-year-old North Quincy girl who lost her battle with cancer five years ago, will be held Saturday, June 20 from 7 to 11 p.m. at Alba in Quincy Center.

Esther Earl died of thyroid cancer when she was 16 years old. Her family established "This Star Won't Go Out" to help families with children living with cancer.

All proceeds help pay for family's rent checks and prescriptions and day-to-day costs.

The fundraiser June 20th will be hosted by FOX 25 anchor Sorboni Banerjee and Leo Keka, owner of Alba.

Tickets for the fundraiser can be puchased at tswgo.brownpapertickets.com.

ing World War II Mrs. Glavin worked in a South Boston factory that stitched raincoats for the U.S. Navy. Glavin's sister, Mary Kennedy of Braintree, who worked as a welder at the Fore River Shipyard during the war, will also be in the parade to share the honors.

Also being honored Saturday is Edward Keohane, chairman of Keohane Funeral Service and past chairman of the Quincy Partnership. He will receive the Richard J. Koch Youth Service Award.

The Youth Service Award is named for the late Richard J. Koch, founder of the Koch Club and originator of the Flag Day Parade and Celebration when it was first held in Quincy more than six decades ago.

The award will be presented at Pageant Field following the parade.

The celebration portion of the evening held at Pageant Field following the parade will also feature the flag raising of an impressive 30' x 60' version of Old Glory; a patriotic medley, and presentation of awards and a 30-minute fireworks display over Black's Creek.

For more information regarding the Flag Day Parade, contact Christopher Rooney at 617-376-1251 or by email at crooney@quincyma.gov.

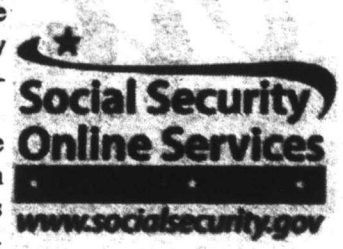
Communicating For Your Benefit

By KRISTEN ALBERINO
Social Security Public Affairs Specialist

June is National Effective Communications Month, but at Social Security, we're at the forefront of clear, concise communications all the time.

Our efforts to better serve and clearly communicate with the American public are paying off, and people like you are reaping the benefits. We're proud of our consistently high ratings in customer satisfaction and usability.



In the most recent ForSee E-Government Satisfaction survey, Social Security's website outranks the customer satisfaction ratings of the private sector websites of icons like Amazon, LL Bean, and Apple. Out of the top-ranked government websites, five of our sites were ranked in the top six, including the Retirement Estimator, Business Services Online, my Social Security, and our online benefit application sites.

This year, for the second year in a row, we received confirmation that we're doing a great job of explaining our programs and services to the American public in our written products. We scored an "A" on the 2014 Federal Plain Language Report Card from the Center for Plain Language. This grade means we're exceeding the standards of the Plain Writing Act of 2010, which requires federal agencies to communicate clearly with the public. We're the only federal agency to earn this honor for two consecutive years!

Not only is our website simple to navigate and understand, our publications and Frequently Asked Questions (FAQ) are easy to read and understand as well. You can browse through our collection of publications at www.socialsecurity.gov/pubs to learn about Social Security, our programs, and what they mean to you and your family. Many publications are available in up to 17 different languages, and they're written in plain language. If you prefer a printed copy of a publication, you can call us at 410-965-2039, and we'll mail you a copy.

Our online FAQs provide quick and accurate answers about our programs for millions of people every year. Recently, we streamlined and consolidated our FAQs so you can find answers easily and efficiently. You can visit www.socialsecurity.gov/faq for accurate information at your convenience.

Nothing is more important to us than meeting the needs of those we serve. We thank you, our customers, for your valuable feedback and vote of confidence. Our customers continue to express their satisfaction because of our effective communication, and we remain committed to maintaining these high standards.

NORTH QUINCY HIGH SCHOOL recently hosted a Career Day for sophomores. Twenty presenters from six career clusters spoke to the students about how they chose their career paths and what their jobs entail. The clusters represented were arts/communications/design, business, health sciences, human services/education, law/government, and STEM. Many presenters spoke to the students about the skills they will need to succeed and how to present themselves when applying for jobs. Students were assigned to a cluster based on a career inventory that they had taken earlier in the year with the school counselors. The North Quincy High School counselors plan on making this an annual event for sophomores and would like to expand the list of presenters. Community members who are interested in participating next year may contact Helena Skinner at 617-984-8747 or email to helenaskinner@quincypublicschools.com. Presenters: (left to right) Larry Liuzzo, Beth Moran Liuzzo, Aaron Cadieux, Don Bagnall, Arthur Bertoni, Sue Joyce, Mike Davoli, Lisa DeBenedictis, Will O'Connell, Christa Hagearty, Kate Sampson, Ana Fridman, Melanie Roberts, C.K. Over 150 Events To Discover Quincy

By MARGARET LaFOREST
Executive Director
Discover Quincy

Quincy is rich in arts and culture, community, historic and recreational assets.

As the organization dedicated to promoting tourism in the City of Quincy, Discover Quincy has coordinated a new program series in partnership with many local organizations.

From the City's signature Flag Day Celebration on June 13 to the Arts Affair at Marina Bay on August 1, we welcome you to participate in over 150 events. Each day will feature at least one free event, while some events may accept donations and others have an admission fee.

Discover Quincy has converted a vacant retail space into a pop up art gallery, which will be open free to the public Fridays from June 19 - July 31, except for July 3. We will have entertainment weekly. There has been a lot of enthusiasm about having an art space downtown with over 125 artists applying to showcase their work.

We are also sponsoring an outdoor concert series at the Ruth Gordon Amphitheater on alternating Tuesdays beginning June 30. We recently launched a new website DiscoverQuincy.com that has additional information for many of the events and is a great resource for our area attractions.

This week's highlights:

Saturday is an extremely busy day with the Houghs Neck and Merrymount neighborhood associations hosting large yard sales, Touch-a-Truck event to benefit the Atherton Hough School PTO, a Backyard BBQ Music Festival across the border in East Milton Square and then one of the best nights to live in Quincy, the Flag Day Parade & Celebration.

In honor of Flag Day, the USS Salem offers free admission to the public as they reopen for visitors at the Fore River Shipyard this season.

Quincy Art Association kicks off the first of many "Open Studios" we will have during the 50 days. Tours are available of the Abigail Adams Birthplace in Weymouth and the Suffolk Resolves House in Milton; these two historic properties aren't often open to the public so this is a great opportunity to visit two authentic properties from the Revolutionary Era.

Milton's Wakefield Estate celebrates Dogwood Days all week long. Take a self-guided tour of the 22-acre estate grounds and formal gardens to view the breathtaking kousa dogwoods at their peak bloom where plants are available for sale.

The fourth Annual Taste of Quincy is becoming a signature event of the Quincy Chamber of Commerce. Quincy is a dining destination and this is a chance to sample fare from 20+ restaurants. Scheduled for Tuesday, June 16, tickets are available online at TheQuincyChamber.com, from the office at 180 Old Colony Ave., second floor or at the door.

Each Wednesday during the 50 Days of FREEdom, Adams National Park Ranger and John Quincy Adams re-enactor will give guided tours of the Hancock Cemetery. Visit DiscoverQuincy.com for details. More events are being added. For more information, contact Margaret Laforest, Executive Director, Discover Quincy, 617-639-1117 or email mlaforest@discoverquincy.com

On Thursday, June 18, the Friends of the Blue Hills are hosting a free one-hour guided hike for families with young children. Free drinks and healthy snacks will be provided. Meet at the St. Moritz Trailhead, Shea Rink Parking Lot, 651 Willard St. at 11 a.m.

The popular Peek A Blue Hike Series typically meets on the Milton side of the Blue Hills but are bringing this program to Quincy in support of our event series.

I'm so thankful to all of the local organizations for their support of the Discover Quincy's 50 Days of FREEdom program series. Growing up in the city of Quincy, I'm familiar with many of the organizations but find in talking to others that they weren't aware of all there's to do in their own backyard. This program series was designed to showcase all there's to do for residents and visitors.

any weight load restrictions need to be put in place before the replacement project begins. The inspection will also determine if the existing abutments can be used to support a new deck as is planned now. If those abutments need to be replaced, Murphy said, the project could cost between $2 and $3 million.

Gas and water mains run along the deck of the bridge; they will be buried in the deck of the new bridge. A sewer main runs under the water in the vicinity of the bridge; the sewer main won't be replaced as part of the project but contingency funds from the appropriation will be set aside in case the line is damaged during construction.

The project would require a Chapter 91 permit from the Massachusetts Department of Environmental Protection and a separate permit from the Army Corps of Engineers. Murphy hopes to expedite that process.

"We are hoping to proceed through an emergency procedure to get it done quickly so it doesn't have the time delays," he said. "There are procedures within both the Chapter 91 program and the Army Corps program to expedite that along."

Under the best-case scenario the project would be completed in September, Murphy explained. Under the worst-case scenario it would be completed next spring.

Midsommer Celebration June 20

The Viking Club will host a "Midsommer Celebration" Saturday June 20 from 11:30 a..m. to 3 p.m. at the club, 410 Quincy Ave., Braintree (at the Quincy line.)

Grills will be going and cold drinks and coffee will be available. There will also be a Herring on Hardtac table, a bake table with assorted goodies, an import table and raffles.

A parade of flags starts at 1 p.m. Bring your own lawn chair. For more information call 617-524-7871.

QHA Landlord Seminar June 19

The seminar will be presented by Kathleen McCabe, Health Resources in Action, Quincy Housing Authority, and Chris Banthin, Public Health Advocacy Ins., Leased Housing Division.

Attendees will learn the latest market research on the demand for smoke-free properties and receive basic legal advice and sample lease and condominium documents.

A question and answer segment will follow each presentation.

NQHS Senior Stay Out 2015

Thanks You

Each year parents, local businesses and associations give donations as well as volunteer their time and services to help ensure that our graduating seniors enjoy a fun and safe, all-night, after-prom party. This year marked the 19th year of this very special event and it was once again a huge success! The seniors and their dates enjoyed games, food, music and an incredible selection of prizes. We would like to extend our thanks to everyone who was involved and helped out... thank you so much— we couldn't have done it without your help!

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Friday, May 29 2015, at approximately 2:50 a.m., Officers Chris Donovan, Thomas Gaeta and Scott Doherty (Canine Unit) were dispatched to the car wash in West Quincy on a report of an assault with a knife. Anti-Crime Unit Officers Steve DesRoche, Dan Parisi, John Leuchte, and Roger White, who were all working in a plain clothes capacity in the area due to a rash of car breaks, also responded.

Officers Donovan and Gaeta were already out at the car wash when the call came in because they were watching a male and female in the lot. The Officers spoke with the male caller, who was the male that they were watching. He appeared to be in panic mode, claiming that two men, one with a knife, just kidnapped his female friend and forced her to drive away in her own vehicle. He added that only one of the men took off in the vehicle and the other male ran away on foot towards Common Street. He said that he initially drove after them and yelled for a passerby to call 911. He followed the vehicle on Furnace Brook Parkway, where the vehicle took a right on an unknown side street, then a right on Common Street and left on Morton Street. He then saw a police vehicle on Copeland Street, so he stopped following the vehicle and went to the Officer. The caller described the males to the Officer.

A BOLO (be on look-out) was given out to all units as it appeared a potential armed car jacking and kidnapping had just occurred. A few minutes later, Officer White observed a male fitting the description of the male who fled on foot in the area of 260 Common Street, but the male upon being spotted by the Police, fled into backyard and was unable to be located. Officer White identified this individual (suspect 1) by name because earlier in the night he confronted him about roaming around the neighborhood so late at night. This suspect gave a local address as his home and it appeared that he was trying to make his way back there. At the time of the initial contact, the suspect did not possess a knife.

Officer Reilly was dispatched to the car wash to stand by with the caller as multiple units searched the area for the victim and her vehicle. The victim is very well known to the Quincy Police Department, as is her on again/off again boyfriend who was recently evicted from his apartment for criminal activity.

Officer Reilly showed the caller a photo of the boyfriend through the RMV database, and he stated it was possible that it was the boyfriend who got into the vehicle with the victim. Officer Donovan then interviewed the caller to figure out what actually happened. He said that he recently met the victim at his psychiatrist's office, where they are both patients. He said that the victim had just been physically abused by her boyfriend and she was also a former addict. He said that he has been sober for fourteen months and sympathized with her, then befriended her while becoming a support system for her. He went on to say that they talked a few times a week and would meet up occasionally. He said that they agreed to meet this night at the car wash around midnight, but she kept pushing back the time, eventually showing up at approximately 2:30 a.m.. He denied that they were dating – that he is married with two daughters.

When asked what his wife thought about him being out at the late hour with another woman, he stated that she doesn't ask questions because she knows how he believes it's his duty to help people struggling with addiction. He stated he is currently working with a few different females who are struggling with addiction, but didn't mention helping any males.

The caller then added to his account of what happened. He said that he was with the victim at the car wash and they were talking outside for a short time before they got in his vehicle. He got upset with the victim because she showed up with a beer in her hands and appeared to be intoxicated. As they were talking, two males approached the vehicle in an aggressive manner, yelling some "not so nice things" but could not remember exactly what was said. He said that one of the males approached the driver's side door so he quickly put the vehicle in reverse create distance, but the men kept walking towards the vehicle.

He then drove about a block away and as he stopped, the victim exited his vehicle and walked back toward the men. He said he was unsure if she knew the males but she walked back toward them as if nothing was wrong. He thought that suspect 1 had the knife hanging from his belt, but couldn't be sure. When asked why he first reported the incident as a possible car jacking and kidnapping at knife point if he never saw a knife in hand and observed the victim voluntarily walk back toward the alleged suspects, he stated he didn't know what he said earlier because he believed he was in shock.

It was around this time that Anti-crime Officers notified Quincy Police Communications that they had the victim's vehicle in the driveway on Buckley Street, with the victim and her boyfriend in it. The victim presented a drastically different story than the caller. She stated that she met the caller a few months ago at the methadone clinic, where he stated he worked for Verizon and if she ever needed anything than she could contact him. She said she needed a phone so she contacted him and he got her a cell phone.

Real Estate Inventory, Sales Down; Average Sale Price Up 5%

Continuing a theme seen over the past few months, Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell reported that reduced inventory activity in Norfolk County had a mixed effect on the real estate market during the month of May.

"What we have consistently seen throughout the late winter and spring months is a decrease of real estate inventory in Norfolk County," O'Donnell said. "May 2015 figures continues to reflect that slide with the total number of commercial and residential real estate sales slightly down by 2.6 percent, 1,451 compared to 1,492 in May 2014.

"However, there was some silver lining in May's housing data. While the total number of sales fell, the average sale price of commercial and residential property continued its upward trend, increasing 5 percent year over year to $652,981. Total volume of commercial and residential sales also showed an uptick, jumping 2 percent to $604.6 million."

Another positive indicator O'Donnell noted was the continued strong performance of the mortgage market in Norfolk County. During May 2015, the total number of mortgages recorded increased by 26 percent compared to the same time last year. Total mortgage indebtedness also increased by 46 percent.

"The mortgage figures clearly reflect increased consumer confidence," O'Donnell said. "Homeowners are showing an increased willingness to take advantage of equity in their homes to finance home improvements and other critical needs."

With regard to other housing data, Homestead recordings, which provide limited protection against the forced sale of an individual's primary residence up to $500,000, decreased 1 percent from May 2014 to May 2015. A total of 997 Homesteads were recorded compared to 1,007 in May

Bobbi Gibb To Attend Kennedy Run Saturday

First Woman To Run Entire Boston Marathon

ROBERTA "BOBBI" GIBB

Roberta "Bobbi" Gibb, the first woman to run the entire Boston Marathon, will be at the start of the 18th Annual Jimmy Kennedy Memorial Run for ALS, (the Squirrel Run XVIII), a 5-mile run, 2.5-mile fitness walk and family fun day which will be held on Saturday, June 13th at Pageant Field, Merrymount Parkway in Quincy.

Gibb's appearance at the road race, walk and family fun day will kick-off a year-long celebration of the 50th anniversary of her historic run in 1966.

Until 1972, when the first women's division marathon opened, the Boston Marathon was a men's division race; all the women who ran before 1972 were, under the AAU rules, unsanctioned runners, running in an as-yet-to-be sanctioned women's division race.

Gibb, who trained for two years to run the Boston Marathon, submitted an application in February 1966 to run the race, only to be told that women were not "physiologically capable of running marathon distances" and that under the rules that governed amateur sports set out by the AAU, women were not allowed to run more than a mile and a half competitively. Determined to participate, Gibb traveled from San Diego by bus to her parents' home in Winchester. The following day, Patriots Day, April 19, 1966, her mother dropped her off at the start of the 26.2-mile marathon for her history-making run.

Gaining support along the way, from men and women alike, Bobbi was greeted by then-Governor John Volpe after crossing the finish line in three hours, twenty-one minutes and forty seconds, ahead of two-thirds of the pack of 415 official starters.

"We are pleased that Bobbi will be on hand to officially start the race," Rich Kennedy, Jimmy Kennedy's brother and President of The Angel Fund said. "Her pioneer spirit and her determination to run the Boston Marathon have been the catalyst for countless runners over the past 50 years."

Proceeds from the Squirrel Run will benefit The Angel Fund, a nonprofit organization dedicated to funding ALS research at the Cecil B. Day Laboratory for Neuromuscular Research at the UMass Medical Center in Worcester. Jimmy Kennedy lost his courageous battle with ALS, better known as Lou Gehrig's Disease, in 1997 at the age of 31.

Runners and walkers of all ages and abilities are welcome to participate in the 5-mile run and 2.5-mile walk that begins with registration at 8 a.m. The 2.5-mile fitness walk starts at 9 a.m. followed by the 5-mile run at 10 a.m. Childrens' races begin at 11 a.m.

In addition to the race and walk, the day will be filled with entertainment for children, plenty of refreshments, and awards for competitive runners in all divisions for men and women. There will be trophies, gift certificates, and other awards, as well as raffle prizes.

For registration information, or for further information call Rich (Ratt) Kennedy (781) 383-6008, or email him at tytaylin@aol.com.

Swim Instruction At Lincoln-Hancock Pool

The Quincy Recreation Department will conduct swimming lessons at the Lincoln Hancock Community pool weekdays during July and August, announces Director Barry Welch.

In addition to giving important life skills, learning to swim opens up a lifetime of recreational opportunities such as boating and sailing, and other aquatic sports. Lessons are taught by Water Safety Instructors and Lifeguards trained in accordance with the standards set by the American Red Cross.

The Recreation Department will conduct an advanced testing in preparation for Quincy residents unfamiliar with the swim program or for a child who may have had additional instruction during the winter. The schedule for testing is Friday, June 12th from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. The Boating and Sailing prerequisite swim test will also be given at this time for residents age 8 or older.

The normal recreational swimming schedule will be canceled during hours of testing.

There will be two summer sessions.

Session 1 begins Monday, June 29th and ends Tuesday, July 21st. Session 2 begins Thursday, July 23rd and ends Thursday, Aug. 13th. Because school is still in session, registration for all classes will be held at the Quincy Recreation Department Office, One Merrymount Parkway.

The following classes are offered for both sessions and are conducted in accordance with the standards of the American Red Cross: Level I/II Water Exploration and Primary Skills; Level III Stroke Readiness; Level IV Stroke Development; Level V/VI Stroke Refinement and Proficiency.

The department will also offer Lifeguard Training that will begin Tuesday, June 30th and will run through August. Please contact the Recreation Department for details regarding this course, 617-376-1394

Instructions are for children who are age six and over and are Quincy residents. Lifeguard Training candidates must be 15 years of age and must pass a prerequisite swim test.

Because school is still in session, registration for all classes will be held at the Quincy Recreation Department Office, One Merrymount Parkway, according to the following schedule.

Session 1: Class dates are June 29th – July 21st and registration will be Thursday, June 18 from 9 a.m. to noon.

Session 2: Class dates are July 23rd to Aug. 13th and registration will be Wednesday, June 17 from 9 a.m. to noon.

Lifeguard Training registration will be Wednesday, June 17 from 9 a.m. to noon.

The Quincy Recreation Department will not accept pre-registration or phone registrations. Assured placement in the class, day and times of choice should be done at the above dates and times. Post-registration is accepted on a space available basis.

For more information call 617-376-1394, or go to www.QuincyRec.com.

Bill Dunn Jr. Memorial Road Race June 27

The Bill Dunn Jr. Memorial Road Race will be held Saturday, June 27 in Houghs Neck.

The event is a great time for friends and family of Bill Dunn Jr. to gather in honor of his life and share memories with each other. Registration for the annual event will begin at 7 a.m. at the St. Thomas Aquinas Hall on Darrow Street in Quincy. Those interested can participate in a 5-mile run or 2-mile walk beginning at 9 a.m.

Prizes will be awarded for 1st Place Male/Female Runner and 1st Houghs Neck Resident Male/Female Runner. The first 300 people to register will receive a free race T-shirt.

Proceeds from the event benefit the Bill Dunn Jr. Memorial Scholarship which has provided scholarships to Quincy High School students, donations to Children's Hospital, Manets Youth Football and other local organizations.

The registration fee is $30 for runners; however for those who sign up before June 10th, the registration fee is $25.

The registration fee is $20 for walkers prior to race day and the day of race. Registration forms are available on line at www.RememberB.com and can be mailed to: Bill Dunn Jr. Memorial Road Race, 105 Edgewater Dr., Quincy, MA 02169.

You can also register online at www.active.com or www.coolrunning.com. For more information contact Margaret Dunn at 617-471-9075.

NORTH QUINCY HIGH SCHOOL fielded a team of 30 talented lacrosse players for the 2015 season. The schedule included two games versus Quincy High School which North won 3-2 and then later in the season 6-2. With nine returning players and 21 new lacrosse players, the team worked hard on basics, rules and team defense and offense to make the season a success. Returning goalie Gabby Doody did an outstanding job in net with Brenna Kirby backing her up. Captains included Kay O'Connor, Gabby Doody, Diedre McDougall and Janelle Chin. Scoring multiple goals for North throughout the season included players Rachel Gillespie, Alison Radzick, Kay O'Connor, Celia Hussey and Olivia Hussey. The team included players Toni Alvarado, Julia Brady, Larissa Bunmee, Janelle Chin, Elizabeth DiMattio, Gabby Doody, Erin Fallon, Rachel Gillespie, Jillian Hallisey, Amy Huang, Celia Hussey, Olivia Hussey, Caroline Keenan, Olivia Keenan, Sinead Kelly, Brenna Kirby, Kiki Mai, Diedre McDougall, Molly McGoldrick, Maggie McGoldrick, Nora McLaughlin, Morgan Murphy, Kay O'Connor, Alison Radzick, Joanna Rafti, Rachel Riley, Annie Shinto, Angela Tran, Neenah Tran and Vivian Tran. The team was coached by Betsy Doherty.

Quincy Softball: Talented Team Deserved Happier Ending

By BILL GRIFFIN

The story deserved a happier ending.

Quincy won 16 games and made the tournament for the third straight year. The Presidents rattled off 10 straight wins at one point and took second place in the division. Their pitcher set a standard of excellence which might last for decades.

Perhaps most importantly, they were fun. They played with a smile and a laugh. They enjoyed the game they played, and they made it enjoyable for anyone who watched them. They may well have been the happiest team in the state of Massachusetts.

No. 7 seeded Milford ended Quincy's season in a classic of a softball game. The Scarlet Hawks pushed across a run in the bottom of the eighth inning to edge No. 10 seeded Quincy, 6-5 in the first round of the Division 1 South Sectionals last Thursday in Milford.

"It was a tough loss. But it was also one of the best softball games I've ever coached," said Quincy coach Greg Sommers whose team finished 16-5. "We pitched well, we played good defense and we hit well. The players did everything we asked just as they did all season. It was an excellent tournament game that came down to a bounce of the ball."

It was a game which belonged in the semifinals or the finals, not in the first round. Quincy jumped ahead, 4-0 after four, took a 5-4 lead into the bottom of the sixth, and were a stroke of bad fortune away from breaking open the game in the top of the eighth.

"We told them to be cool and confident, to go up there and take their swings. That's just what they did," said Sommers.

Junior second baseman Alicia Walker went 4-5 with an RBI and a run scored. Senior third baseman Angela McDonald had a single, home run and two RBI. Angelina Avitabile and Madison Synan each had a pair of hits. Many tourney teams freeze against good pitching. Quincy did not.

"We worked counts and hit the ball well throughout the lineup," said Sommers.

In the first, McDonald belted a home run and Lucia Buzzel scored on a wild pitch for a 2-0 lead. Saxon Bresnahan singled to drive in Walker in the second and Walker's single sent home Dana Varmahmoodi in the fourth for a 4-0 lead.

"Hitting the ball early and getting on top was huge for us," said Sommers.

After Taylor LeBrun's three-run homer tied it for Milford at 4-4 in the fourth, Quincy faced two tests. Bresnahan needed to settle down on the mound. Secondly, the Presidents also needed a quick offensive response.

Bresnahan showed the poise and maturity which have been hallmarks of her season that included four no-hitters and two perfect games. She pitched terrific softball over the final four innings. Both of Milford's final runs were unearned.

The offense came through with another clutch hit from McDonald who drilled an RBI single in the top of the sixth to put Quincy up, 5-4.

"After they tied it up, Saxon showed what she is made of. It was a tough spot and she pitched very well after the home run. Angela has given us the big hit all season," said Sommers.

Milford tied it in the bottom of the sixth and the game rolled into extra innings. Quincy had a golden chance in the eighth. The Presidents loaded the bases with none out. After a popup, Bresnahan ripped a rocket up the middle. It deflected off Milford's pitcher directly to the second baseman who turned it into an inning-ending double play.

If the ball goes through, Quincy is up by two with runners on first and third and one out. Sometimes the tournament smiles on a team. Sometimes it does not.

"If that goes through, at least two runs score and we still have the chance for a big inning," said Sommers.

Milford (18-3) was an unusually tough first round-draw. The Scarlet Hawks were champions of the Davenport Division of the Hockomock League. They beat the No. 1 seed in the sectional, Hopkinton. They defeated Silver Lake and rolled past Stoughton, 14-0. Quincy lost to Silver Lake twice and defeated Stoughton, 3-1. This would have been a signature win for the Presidents and they nearly brought it home.

"We lost our final game of the season against Whitman-Hanson. It gave us four losses and hurt us in the seedings," said Sommers. "If we had won, we probably would have been in another bracket with a home game."

All discussion of the season, of course, begins with Bresnahan. She threw the four no-hitters and two perfect games in the space of 24 days. In one game, she struck out all 21 batters she faced. She was one walk away from three perfect games. She had five career no-hitters. She set a school record with 291 strikeouts in 21 games (average of 14 per game). She struck out more than 800 batters in her career. She was the best of the best, and anyone who had a chance to watch her was most fortunate.

"She is one of the best pitchers in the state," said Sommers. "I remember her as this little freshman with a good arm, and I marvel at the pitcher she became. She worked hard and deserves everything she achieved."

There was a fine core of seniors on this team. Avitabile hit well over .300 and is a certain Patriot League All Star. She was dead solid perfect on pitches in the dirt. Her pitch selection and her best-friend trust with Bresnahan was invaluable. McDonald played a great third base and delivered hits when Quincy most needed them.

Varmahmoodi was a smooth, sure fielder in left who saved Bresnahan's second no-hitter against Duxbury with an excellent catch. Emma Kelly was a three-year starter in center. She ran down everything in the outfield and used her speed to get on base and cause chaos with her baserunning.

"Angelina was a leader. You could hear her all over the field," said Sommers. "Angela probably had the biggest heart on the team. She brought so much energy to the game. I remember using Emma as a pinch runner as a freshman. She has helped us for four years. Dana was not only good in the outfield, she gave us good at-bats."

There is talent returning. Walker, Kate McGahey (right field), Nicole Jorgensen (first base) all started. Synan is a proven hitter. Sophomores Clare Doherty and Ally MacPherson gained experience at short. There is good pitching coming up from the JVs.

"They have big shoes to fill,' said Sommers. "If they work hard and show the leadership this year's seniors did, we have a chance to be right back in the tournament."

Sommers will miss this senior class. Many people will miss this senior class. They were freshmen when Sommers took over as head coach. He has seen them grow as players and people. He has enjoyed their talent, and he has enjoyed their good humor. They had fun playing softball and that is the way it should be.

Twelve senior players graduated. They were McDonald, Bresnahan, Avitabile, Kelly, Varmahmoodi, Madison Davis, Sam McMahon, Emily Van Tassel, Bella Falco, Meghan Caggiano, Annie Waterman and Emma Kimmell.

"They are a special group. I'll miss them," said Sommers. "It's been a long time since Quincy won 16 games in a season. They brought so much enjoyment to the game. A lot of people who were around the team told me they were a down little a couple of times when they came to practice. Someone cracked a joke and they felt better. It was that kind of group. It was great being around them. I'm proud of them. It was an honor to coach them."

by Dr. Gabrielle Freedman

SITTING DUCKS

In case there is any doubt that a sedentary lifestyle is not conducive to good health, researchers are busy quantifying just how unhealthy it is to lie on the couch. The latest research of this sort, which involves data from 41 research studies, indicates that sitting for long periods increases the risk of a variety of unhealthy outcomes, including death. The more time people spent sitting, watching TV, or lying down, the higher their risk was of developing cancer, diabetes, and cardiovascular disease. Perhaps the most surprising aspect of this study was that researchers found that sedentary types' risk of disease and death was even elevated if they exercised regularly. Chiropractic treatment is dedicated to getting patients active and healthy.

Our concern is the total health of our patients. At FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we take a total look at the total picture and formulate lifestyle changes that will help you maintain your health. We have state of the art equipment – let us help you. Please call 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy, where our goal is to understand your needs. We work to restore your health and guide you in a personalized approach to overall wellness. We offer computerized spinal scans. We are able to adjust patients sitting, standing, or lying down to accommodate any level of discomfort.

P.S. If painful joints and limited range of motion prevent you from doing the things you want to do, the chiropractor is expert in pinpointing the causes of joint dysfunction and eliminating them.

Manet Health Raises $145,000 At Annual Dinner, Auction

Sen. John Keenan Receives Manet's Highest Honor

Manet Community Health Center raised nearly $145,000, exceeding its fundraising goal, at its Annual Dinner and Auction held May 27 at the Granite Links Golf Club. More than 400 guests and supporters attended.

Organizers said the resources raised will go toward increased health care access for residents of the South Shore and Southeastern Mass. through expanded programs, services and operational advancements.

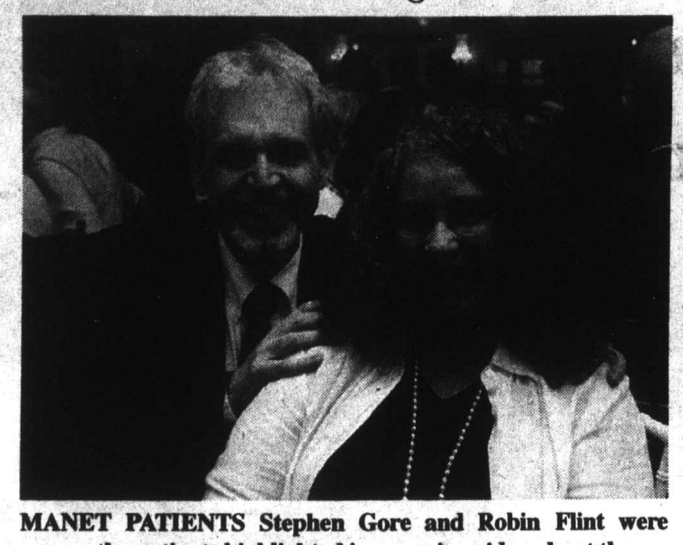
"We are delighted with the demonstrated excitement, enthusiasm and support for the Manet Mission as we celebrate our 35 years of providing high quality, steadfast and uninterrupted service," said Joseph M. (Joe) Reardon, president of the Manet Board of Directors.

The festive crowd of community leaders and Manet friends saw the presentation of the Manet Medallion – Manet's highest honor, given to recognize outstanding community service – to state Sen. John F. Keenan, chairman of the Senate Committee on Bonding, Capital Expenditures and State Assets, and vice-chairman of four Senate Committees, including the Special Senate Committee on Opioid Addiction Prevention, Treatment, and Recovery Options.

"It was our honor and distinction to award the Manet Medallion to Sen. Keenan, who has been an exemplary, tireless, and visionary leader on behalf of community health," said John J. Holiver, Manet's Chief Executive Officer.

Other highlights included the recognition of Lily Yung, MD, and her entire practice team with the Barbara A. Morris Distinguished Service Award, named for Manet Board Member Barbara Morris and given to an outstanding employee or team of employees. Dr. Yung and her team were selected for the award by the Manet Board for their demonstration of great personal and professional commitment to Manet and the communities it serves, along with their exceptional collective leadership, in helping patients smoothly transition from Manet's practice site at Quincy Medical Center.

Among the government and civic leaders in attendance were Medallion Honoree Sen. Keenan, along with Cong. Stephen Lynch; state Reps. Tackey Chan and Bruce Ayers; Norfolk County Dist. Atty. Michael Morrissey; Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti; and Quincy Mayor Thomas Koch.



MANET PATIENTS Stephen Gore and Robin Flint were among the patients highlighted in a moving video about the superlative services offered through Manet Community Health Center, which debuted at Manet's Dinner & Auction on May 27.

Under the direction of High School Band Director, Rich Kenneally, the Quincy High School Jazz Quartet – including Ali Mokalled, Luis Escobar, Gianni Hill, and Mark Hajjar – provided the musical entertainment.

The Event Sponsor was Steward Health Care System, whose Chief Strategy Officer, David Morales, provided welcoming remarks.

Other sponsors included: athenahealth; Blue Cross Blue Shield of Massachusetts; Boston Medical Center & BMC HealthNet Plan; Eastern Bank; South Shore Hospital; Eric Cohen, MD; Columbia Construction Company; Massachusetts League of Community Health Centers; Neighborhood Health Plan; New England Eye Center at Tufts Medical Center; Jennifer Sabir, MD, Manet's Chief Medical Officer; John W. Dalton, MD; Fallon Ambulance Service; Fallon Community Health Plan; Keohane Funeral Home; Mayor Koch; Shields Healthcare Group; United Healthcare; Carol Garner, MD; Attorney Robert Griffin; John and Patricia Holiver; AAFC-PAs; Beth Israel Deaconess Hospital, Milton; Blue Hills Bank; CeltiCare Health; DiGiorgio Associates/Monitor Builders Inc.; The Howard Family; Hub International; Key Discovery; Krokidas & Bluestein LLP; Lisa and Ken Levine; Thomas and Nancy Mahan; Old Colony Hospice; Henry Rittal and Ann Toscano; Senior Whole Health; Tufts Health Plan – Network Health; Tufts Health Plan – Senior Care Options; and, Walgreens Pharmacy. Blue Cross Blue Shield of Massachusetts also contributed with the donation of its volunteer "Blue Crew," who assisted at the event.

BARBARA A. MORRIS AWARD for Distinguished Service was presented to Lily Yung, MD, (5th from left) and her entire practice for their demonstration of great personal and professional commitment to Manet and the communities it serves, along with their exceptional collective leadership, in helping patients smoothly transition from Manet's practice site at Quincy Medical Center.

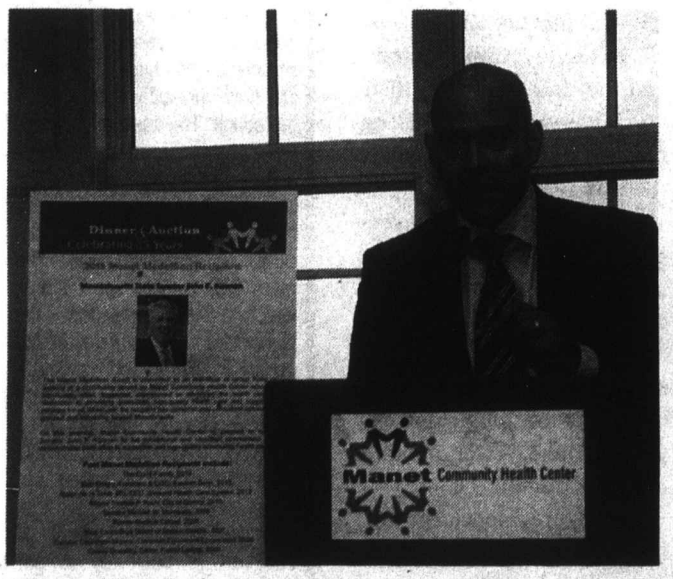
To support the Manet Mission, make a donation toward the May 27 annual gala or to learn more about the programs and services at Manet, email events@manetchc.org, or visit www.manetchc.org. or https://www.facebook.com/ManetCommunityHealthCenter.



DAVID MORALES, Chief Strategy Officer for Steward Health Care System, the Event Sponsor for the evening, provided welcoming remarks at Manet's 2015 Dinner & Auction.

Gov. Baker Speaker At Elks Scholarship Ceremony

On behalf of Exalted Ruler Maureen Mesheau and the Scholarship Committee, the Quincy Lodge of Elks announces the Annual Scholarship Award Ceremony will be held on Monday June 22nd at 6:45 p.m.

Massachusetts Gov. Charles Baker will be the guest speaker for this scholarship ceremony.

The event will be held in the Tirrell Room at the Quincy Lodge of Elks, 254 Quarry St., West Quincy.

Scholarship recipients will receive citations to honor their achievements and a dinner will be served.

"The Quincy Lodge of Elks is proud to support our high school seniors by recognizing their academic achievements and successes," said Bruce Ayers, Elks Scholarship chairman. "This is one of the many charitable endeavors through which the Elks give back to the community throughout the year."

All Elks members are invited to attend this scholarship ceremony.

Retired Teachers Association Awards $74,000 In Scholarships

The Quincy Retired Teachers Association (QRTA) recently awarded $74,000 in scholarships to 38 graduates of Quincy High School and North Quincy High School. The QRTA also distributes generous scholarships from the family of John Walsh, late Principal of North Quincy High School. At an evening ceremony on May 12, held at Central Middle School in Quincy, $74,000 were distributed.

"This ceremony is a highlight of every year for retired educators," said Paul Phillips, President of the QRTA Scholarship Fund. "We love to see the excellence of the Quincy Public Schools mirrored in the achievements of these wonderful students."

The Quincy Retired Teachers Association, parent organization of the QRTA Scholarship Fund, consists of retired Quincy Public Schools teachers and administrators. This organization established a scholarship fund in the 1980's when they received contributions for the purpose of awarding scholarships from the estates of former educators. "The fund is intended to benefit students from both high schools to reimburse some of college's many expenses," said QRTA President Kathleen Mitchell, retired System-wide Department Head for Library and Media Services for Quincy Public Schools.

Since the 1980's the QRTA Scholarship fund has benefited from numerous bequests and memorial contributions honoring retired Quincy educators. The established trust fund now manages approximately $1.7 Million and students receive scholarships from the interest earned. "This kind of contribution to the youth of Quincy from its retired teachers is unique in the Commonwealth," said Mitchell.

Since its inception, the QRTA Scholarship Fund has given over 1,000 scholarships to graduating Quincy High School and North Quincy High School seniors, totaling over $2 million.

"Quincy is very, very lucky to have an organization like the QRTA and their generosity to our students is truly wonderful," said Quincy Public Schools Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro, who attended the May 12 ceremony. "Tonight showed once again that Quincy's educators give unselfishly to our children while they work, when they retire and even after they pass away. I am proud to be part of this group."

City Hall Reopening In September

"I think it will be – we're planning on that," Koch answered when asked if the building would be ready when the council meets in September.

"It could be ready earlier in August, I just don't know when. But we're planning on having the first council meeting in the Great Hall in September."

A ceremony will be held to mark the completion of the project, likely in September. Koch said it would be a "big time" public event.

"I think it's worthy of a great celebration," the mayor said. "How often do you do something like this?"

The Great Hall – which will be reserved for council use and other special events including mayoral inaugurations – will encompass the entire second floor of the building and accommodate up to 180 people. A balcony overlooking the chamber will hold another 40 seats.

Other city boards and commissions, including the Planning Board, Board of License Commissioners and Zoning Board of Appeals, will meet in an 85-seat meeting space located on the restored building's first floor.

Also planned for the first floor is space for exhibits highlighting Quincy's history. The mayor said a special committee, comprised of the city clerk and local historians, has been tasked with determining what will go in the new exhibition area.

"We have subcommittee of the building committee working on that, including City Clerk Joe Shea; Dr. Ed Fitzgerald from Quincy historical; Tom Galvin, city historian; and obviously the architect and their team, to try and figure out what we're going to need for cases and how we're going to lay things out, what are those artifacts and letters and things we want to show," Koch said.

"We won't have room to show everything, but there are probably certain aspects of the place you can rotate things in and out. Security is a very important issue as we do that, for the building but also for that space.

"We want people to be able to go in and if there is a meeting upstairs and people want to go through it and enjoy it, we want them to be able to do it. I don't want the thing locked all the time. Recognizing that, the stuff in cases and things all has to be very secure. Of course, everything will be on cameras and everything, but still, you want to make sure there is no chance of losing something."

Koch identified a September 1826 letter written by John Quincy Adams that was found in the building's basement in April 2010 as one artifact that will be put on display for the public. In the letter, the then-president laid out his wishes to have his father John Adams, who died that July 4, entombed in the United First Parish Church.

While that letter will be put on display in the exhibition area, Koch said the space would focus more on the city's government and politics than it does on the Adams family and John Hancock.

"I've asked the city clerk to do a little about city elections and there will be a little about the town government turnover. It won't be all Adams and Hancock. It's going to be more about the city and the government and the whole political side of it," Koch said.

"I don't think we have to retell the granite story and the shipbuilding story or the Adams story. That doesn't mean they won't be part of it, don't get me wrong, there is a place for it but I think we'll be telling some of the rest of the story, if you will."

As part of the restoration process, a number of bronze plaques that were once located in the council chamber will be given new homes in the building.

"The whole building will be open to the public," Koch said. "There are going to be some nice areas to be able to take care of some of those dedications."

OBITUARIES

Eleanor M. Keane

Funeral services for Eleanor M. (Moriarty) Keane were held last week.

Late retired employee of Verizon for 32 years and makeup artist for the Wellesley Players for 12 years.

Beloved wife of the late John H. Keane. Loving mother of Daidra A. and her husband Roger Means of Braintree, Hilary Keane and her husband Stephen P. Dunleavy of Quincy, Kara E. and her husband John P. O'Riordan of Marshfield, and the late Gary F. Keane.

ELEANOR M. KEANE

Loving daughter of the late Timothy and Nora (Brown) Moriarty. Sister of the late Jean O'Connell, James Moriarty, and Neil Moriarty. Devoted grandmother of Leigh E. Rivera, Robert F. Gorham Jr., John F., Hilary J., and Margot M. O'Riordan. Great-grandmother of Jordan J. Gorham and Olivia R. Rivera. Survived by many nieces, nephews, and Maggie the dog.

Funeral arrangements were made by Murphy Funeral Home, Dorchester.

Sheila J. McDonald, 91

A funeral Mass for Sheila J. (O'Mahoney) McDonald, 91, of Quincy, will be celebrated at 9 a.m. Saturday in St. Mary's Church, Quincy.

Mrs. McDonald died peacefully Sunday at the Hancock Park Nursing & Rehabilitation Center in Quincy after a long illness.

She was born, raised and educated in Killarney, Ireland. During World War II, she moved to England and worked for the Women's Voluntary Services and the social welfare department for the city of Coventry. She immigrated to the United States in 1947 and lived in Boston's South End. She had lived in Quincy the past 55 years.

Mrs. McDonald was a homemaker and was also employed as a secretary at the former Joy Electric Company in Quincy for 15 years. She enjoyed her life with her husband Buddy for many years in West Quincy. She was an active member of the Emblem Club of Quincy and a longtime parishioner of Saint Mary's Church in West Quincy. Mrs. McDonald loved music and was well known for her rendition of "Danny Boy" at parties and holidays, which always was a standout performance.

Her greatest love was for her family. She lived for them all and gave all of them an abundance of love, guidance and care. Throughout her illness she remained the person she always was – a kind, loving individual who always had a smile for you and would join you in a song or two.

Beloved wife of the late George B. McDonald, former Norfolk County Commissioner. Devoted mother of Eileen E. Teixeira and her husband Tony of Scituate, the late Colleen A. Haley and her husband Tim of Quincy and the late Erin P. McDonald. Loving grandmother of Michael G. Cronin and his wife Joette of North Attleboro, Keith P. Cronin and his wife Jen of Martha's Vineyard and Kurt C. Teixeira of Scituate. Loving great-grandmother of Keira and Bridget Cronin, both of North Attleboro, and Eliza Cronin of Martha's Vineyard. She was predeceased by her siblings, Elsie Mangan, Seamus O'Mahoney and Joan Albericci. Also survived by many nieces and nephews.

Visiting hours are 4-7 p.m. tomorrow (Friday) in Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals, 1 Independence Ave., Quincy. Funeral from the funeral home at 8 a.m. Saturday, prior to the Mass.

Interment at St. Mary's Cemetery, West Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to the Alzheimer's Association, 480 Pleasant St., Watertown, MA 02472.

Anne McHugh

A funeral Mass for Anne (Connolly) McHugh of Milton, formerly of Quincy and County Galway, Ireland, will be celebrated at 10:30 a.m. today (Thursday) in St. Elizabeth's Church, Milton.

Mrs. McHugh died June 6.

Her family was her world and she had a great love for her children and grandchildren. She was a caring, generous, and selfless woman that would always put others first. Mrs. McHugh would entertain family and friends and always had a warm and welcoming home. She enjoyed traveling to Ireland to visit family and friends. She loved music, especially Irish music, and enjoyed dancing with her husband. She will be sadly missed by all who knew her.

Beloved wife of the late Martin F. McHugh. Devoted mother of Patrick McHugh and his wife Jeanne of NJ, Michael McHugh of Quincy, Thomas McHugh and his wife Elizabeth of MI, Martin McHugh of Quincy and Winifred Rioux of Quincy. Loving sister of Nora Rudderham of England and Michael Connolly of Randolph. Cherished Grammy of Kelli, Michael, Meghan, Caitlin, and Keira. Also survived by many nieces and nephews.

Visiting hours were 4-8 p.m. yesterday (Wednesday) in Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy. A celebration of life service will be held there at 9:30 a.m. today, prior to the Mass.

Interment at Pine Hill Cemetery, Quincy.

Beth Israel Deaconess Hospital – Milton Community Health Walk, Health Fair

Family-Oriented Event Saturday

Beth Israel Deaconess Hospital-Milton (BID-Milton) will hold its sixth annual Community Health Walk and Health Fair on Saturday, June 13, from 9:30 a.m. to 2 p.m, at the hospital located at 199 Reedsdale Rd, Milton.

The family-oriented, health and wellness event will start at 9:30 a.m. with a special appearance by Wally the Green Monster, the official mascot of the Boston Red Sox. Wally will be available for photos with children from 9:30 to 10:15 a.m.

At 10 a.m., a 5-kilometer (3.1 mile) walk through Milton, beginning and ending at the hospital's Highland Street entrance, and a shorter 1-mile walk around the hospital's campus will kick off.

The walk will be followed by a community health fair in the hospital's main lobby at 11 a.m. Blood pressure checks as well as body mass index, glucose and vision tests will be provided. Displays and information from area health and wellness providers will also be available.

Family-oriented events following the walk include face painting, moon walk and obstacle course, tours of several emergency response vehicles and DJ entertainment. A free barbeque lunch will be available starting at noon.

For teenagers, the nationally noted Arrive Alive texting and distracted driving prevention simulation program from Unite will be featured again this year. This interactive program uses a car and virtual reality goggles to show young drivers the dangers of texting while driving.

The hospital will also formally award its Community Health Mini-Grants to several local organizations whose programs address the primary health needs identified in the hospital's Community Health Needs Assessment undertaken in 2013.

Funds raised at the event will go towards facility improvements and new equipment for the hospital's outpatient Cardiac Rehabilitation Program. This multidisciplinary program provides monitored physical exercise, stretching and stress management as well as vital education for individuals recovering from a heart attack, heart surgery, angioplasty or angina. Since its inception, the hospital's Cardiac Rehab has helped hundreds of local men and women lead new, heart-healthy lifestyles.

Mrs. Bausemer died May 31 at John Adams Health-Care Center in Quincy.

She was born in Presque Isle, and raised in Caribou, Maine. After high school she moved to Boston to attend nursing school, later working at Massachusetts General Hospital as a nurses aid. She met her husband and raised a family. She never forgot her Maine roots.

Beloved wife of the late Francis; loving mother of John and his wife Denise of Quincy, and the late James. Also survived by her three grandchildren, Jonathan, Scott, and Evan. dear sister of Arlene McNeal of Brewer Maine.

Arrangements by Hamel, Wickens & Troupe Funeral Home, 26 Adams St., Quincy.

Jean Sidlauskas

Visiting hours for Jeanne "Carole" Mansfield Sidlauskas of Quincy will be held today (Thursday) from 4 to 7 p.m. in Lydon Chapel for Funerals, 644 Hancock St., Quincy.

Ms. Sidlauskas died peacefully Monday after a seven-year courageous battle with cancer.

She was a graduate of Jeremiah E. Burke High School in Boston and spent her career working for Verizon and later worked for D's Electric for the past 16 years. Ms. Sidlauskas had many hobbies including old movies and always enjoyed finding a great bargain. Some of her most memorable times were spent with her extended family and friends and just loving life.

Loving daughter of the late Les and Alice Mansfield. Also survived by her brother Steven Mansfield and his wife Marie of Norwell, Joanne Guncheon and her husband Joseph of CT and Diane Woods and her husband Gerry of GA. Also survived by many loving nieces, cousins and cherished friends.

Interment tomorrow (Friday) at 10 a.m. in Blue Hill Cemetery, Braintree.

She began hanging out with him until he began obsessing about her. When she found out he was married with children, she wanted to end their friendship.

She denied agreeing to meet him tonight and that she was just at the car wash vacuuming her car out. She was asked why she chose to do this task at such an odd hour, and she stated she had just dropped her boyfriend off at suspect 1's house and the car wash was close. She could not explain how the caller found her nor could she say why her boyfriend showed up at the car wash other than, "He must've known something was wrong."

When asked why she appeared to be conversing normally with the caller when the Officers first observed the two at the car wash, she stated he was being friendly at first, but when she got in the car he became extremely upset with her and demanded to see her cell phone to see who she had been talking to. She said at one point the caller grabbed a long machete style knife and told her he would "Slit my f@#$%^& throat." The Officer inquired why he became so upset as to threaten her with a knife and she stated she wasn't sure other than, "He is crazy." She said that when her boyfriend and his friend showed up, she called for them and that is when the caller immediately reversed the vehicle and attempted to "run them down." She said when he stopped; she jumped out of the car. She said that the caller then yelled for someone to call the police, so suspect 1fled the area.

The victim and her boyfriend then got into her freshly vacuumed vehicle. She could not provide a reason why suspect 1 would run away if he didn't do anything wrong. She continued by saying that they attempted to flee, but the caller pursued them in his car. They pulled into a driveway on Buckley Street to hide. When asked why she didn't call the police, she stated because the police know her history and wouldn't do anything.

Officer Donovan asked the victim where the knife was and she stated it was in the caller's vehicle, under the middle row of seating where he could reach it from the driver's seat. The Anti-crime Officers asked to see her cell phone to confirm she had not been communicating with the caller, but the battery to the phone was dead. At their urging, she was able to charge the phone and show her texts, which showed that she in fact had been communicating with the caller all day. When asked why she lied about this, she did not have an answer. Her call log also showed her to have approximately 15 recently missed calls from him over the span of a few hours.

While Officer Donovan was interviewing the victim, Sergeant Don Allison interviewed her boyfriend, who said that he was with her earlier in the night but was dropped off at suspect 1's house. He added that he and suspect 1 then went out looking for suspect 1's brother who hadn't been heard from for a few days. He said he just happened to walk by the car wash and saw his girlfriend, so he went to check on her. When questioned about the odds of coincidentally running into her there, the boyfriend agreed that it was just a coincidence meeting someone at a car wash at 3:00 a.m.. Officer Donovan then returned to the caller's location and asked for permission to search his vehicle and he allowed this.

When asked if he had any weapons in the vehicle, the caller stated he did not. When asked if he had a machete, the caller said he did. The Officer asked why he did not disclose ownership of the machete and the caller said he didn't consider it a weapon and uses it for hiking. Officer Donovan located the machete described by the victim in the exact location she had given. When asked why he didn't have any other hiking equipment in his vehicle, the caller said he had a hiking helmet at his house as well as a hiking backpack in his vehicle. The backpack was empty and there was no indication that the caller was actually a hiker. Although the victim and her boyfriend proved to be dishonest with Officers at times, the victim did describe the exact location and appearance of the machete.

Due to the seriousness of the allegations the victim made about the caller, a 34 year-old Quincy resident and now the main suspect, the decision was made to place him under arrest for "Assault by Means of a Dangerous Weapon (To Wit Machete) and Threatening to Commit a Crime (Murder)." Suspect 1 was never found and all involved consistently lied to the Officers. The Officers were aware that something else was going on but no one was providing additional information. Nice Work!

CANCER TREATMENT SCAMS: If you or someone close to you has cancer, most likely you have done considerable research on various treatment options. In the mix of legitimate information is solicitations about supposed miraculous cancer-fighting products such as pills, powders, herbs, lifestyle changes, etc. that you may have read about, seen on television or heard about from family and friends. Question – Question - Question the information because these offers are usually scams and when you're battling cancer, the last thing you need is to be victimized. People with cancer are often desperate and willing to try anything in hopes of beating cancer. Even when it comes to herbs or natural cures, it is always best to consult with your Doctor first. In many cases, the product can be counter-productive; it won't treat the cancer and it could even harm you, offsetting legitimate treatment. The doctor treating you can tell you about the risks of a product, as well as how it might affect your current treatment or any medications you might be taking. In your research, you may come across references to complementary and alternative medicine.

Complementary therapies are meant to enhance standard medical treatment like surgery, radiation, or chemotherapy. Again, your Doctor can tell you whether there's any proof that this may help reduce your discomfort or other symptoms.

Alternative therapies are meant to replace conventional cancer treatment. Reputable medical and cancer experts generally do not recommend alternative products and practices because there's no proof that they are effective treatments for cancer. Many can even be harmful. Scammers take advantage of the emotions surrounding a diagnosis of cancer. They promote unproven and potentially dangerous remedies like black salve, essiac tea, or laetrile with claims that the products are both "natural" and effective. "Natural" doesn't mean either safe or effective - it can be harmful! Television ads pushing cancer cures offer testimonials that appear to be honest and heart-felt, but they can be completely fake. There is often very small print and briefly displayed that it is impossible to read, stating that "results may vary, it may not work for everyone, or that the actors or models have been paid to endorse the product. Beware of testimonials from people who have taken the product - personal stories aren't reliable evidence of effectiveness. A money-back guarantee doesn't prove that a product works either. Even if the guarantee that you're promised is legitimate, a money-back guarantee definitely is not a reliable substitute for scientific evidence that a treatment is safe or effective. Bottom line: Consult with your Doctor first and save your money!

A 'Two-Fer' For Quincy Athletes At MIAA All-States

It was a "Two-Fer" for Quincy athletes at the MIAA All-States. Two athletes - two second places. Two totally dissimilar athletes.

The MIAA All-States held at Fitchburg State's Elliot Field was a hot bed of exciting track and field talent. Anyone disinterested in the sport could not help but be drawn in by the drama in nearly every event.

The boys shotput featured muscular behemoths from across-the-state from Northampton to Cape Cod. Quincy High senior Curtis Calley has been on a hot streak since the Notre Dame Last Chance meet. He placed second in 52'05.5" beating athletes who had bested him during the season including Patriot League Champ UMass-Amherst bound Ben Stoyle of Pembroke. All six of Calley's throws were over 50 feet. In close attendance watching every throw were Quincy High head coach John Green and throwing coach Peter Chrisom. After the competition several college coaches approached Calley as he is undecided on college.

At the other end of the meet, the final event, the water sprites who run the distance races were warming up. Here is where Emily Bryson plys her craft against the best in the state. This year has been Emily's to enjoy as she was a top finisher in cross country and Indoor track and just won Division 2 Eastern Mass a week ago.

The two-mile race: eight grueling laps of the track became a gang of eight after two laps. All eight had a chance to win. Emily held down a close second for most of the first mile as Needham's Margie Cullen led by a scant second.

After four laps Cullen increased her lead as the group of eight became a group of four. With a half mile to go Cullen held a five second lead. It seemed nobody would even attempt to challenge her. Bryson held a three-stride lead over the always unpredictable Rebecca Grusby of Newton South. Suddenly the gap became three seconds and with 400 meters to go, Bryson made a run for it.

The crowd started yelling louder and louder. A crescendo ensued as Bryson came up on the shoulder of Cullen. On the final 100 meters Cullen put the hammer down and clocked a personal best 10:41 with Emily a scant two seconds behind in 10:43 - a full 19 seconds faster than she ever run two miles before. The entire Elliot Field grand stand was on its feet as the girls both turned to congratulate the other finishers and each other.

"I was legless the final 100, I couldn't go any faster" said Bryson taking high fives from the other 13 girls in the race.

Next week it's the New Englands up at Thornton Academy in Scarborough Maine. Curtis Calley will travel with Green and Chrisom as he is the first event on the card. Bryson will travel with Geoff Hennessy and her family as she is the last event.

"Our plan is always to do the best in the biggest meet and that happened. What a great job done by our coaches Green, Chrisom and distance coach Carolyn Mullaney. We're on to Scarborough!"

May Report: Real Estate Inventory, Sales Down; Average Sale Price Up 5%

2014.. Information on how to apply for the Homestead Act can be found on the Registry's website at www.norfolkdeeds.org.

Foreclosure activity worsened in Norfolk County during May 2015. Notices to Foreclose Mortgage recordings totaled 63 in May compared to 48 in May 2014. In addition, 25 foreclosure deeds were recorded in May compared to 13 in May 2014, a significant 92 percent increase.

Commenting on the foreclosure statistics, O'Donnell said, "There is no way to sugarcoat these numbers. Clearly, the economic expansion experienced in eastern Massachusetts these past few years has not lifted all boats. Some of our neighbors are in crisis.

"The Registry continues to partner with Quincy Community Action Programs at (617) 479-8181 x-376 and Neighbor Works Southern Mass at (508) 598-0950 to help anyone who has received a Notice of Foreclosure from a lender. Another option for consumers is to call the Massachusetts Attorney General's HomeCorps program at (617) 573-5333."

He added:

"The total real estate sales figure for May 2015 was disappointing. With that said, I continue to be cautiously optimistic that we will see an uptick in real estate inventory resulting in an increased number of sales. Norfolk County continues to be a very desirable location for individuals and their families to live and work."

The Norfolk County Registry of Deeds, located at 649 High St., Dedham is the principal office for real property in Norfolk County. Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A plan you've kept on hold for a long time finally could be greenlighted. But in typical Aries form, you'll need to be sure that everything is in place before you hit the "start" button.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Others might urge you to act more quickly on your ideas. But you'd be wise to follow your Bovine instincts and get more facts to bolster your position when you finally present it.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You might be tempted to accept the well-meaning offer of a friend to act as an intermediary in a dispute. But you know best what it's about, and you can handle the challenge. Good luck.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Entertainment can play an important role this week. Enjoy some well-earned diversion with people you care about. Something especially wonderful might come from this well-spent time.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Catnaps and playtime are in order for Leos and Leonas who need to take some time off from their hectic schedules to restore their energies and rebuild their mental muscles. Have fun.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Virgos will need to keep an open mind this week about choices that seem improbable. A closer study might well reveal possibilities that might have been overlooked. Stay with it.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A disappointing outcome of a well-intentioned effort should be seen as a lesson in how to do it right the next time. Note all your changes and have your new plan set up by week's end.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Travel plans might need readjusting because of changes in the costs previously agreed to. Deal with the problem as quickly as possible to minimize any delays that might result.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Your honest approach to an unsettling experience draws admiration from others. Use their positive feedback to build support for your program to introduce needed changes.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Travel is strong in your aspect this week, and so is nostalgia! You might want to consider planning a trip to a place that holds some very special meaning for you. Bon voyage.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A job-related situation could provide an opportunity you hadn't considered before. Look it over carefully and see where and how you can tailor it to fit your needs.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Showing strength as well as sympathy helps you deal with a difficult personal matter. It also helps you set an example for others when it's their turn to get involved in the situation.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a way of making people feel comfortable without losing one whit of your own dignity in the process.

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Welch Group Honors Quincy Employees At Annual Awards Dinner

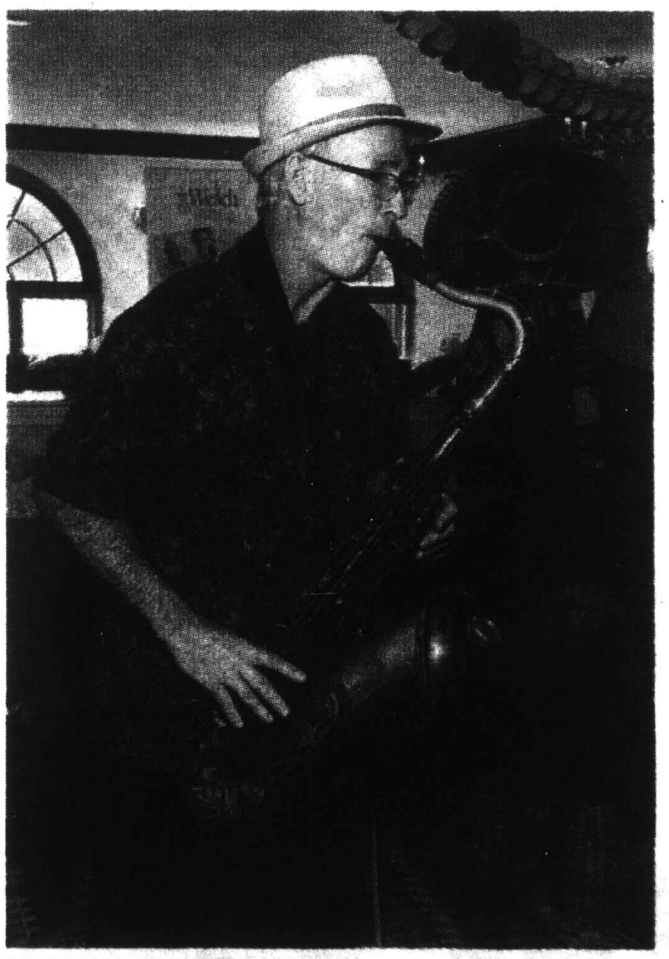
Reward and recognition are essential components to any successful work environment.

Rewarding employees for exceptional service is a hallmark of Welch Healthcare & Retirement Group – one of the oldest senior services organizations in Massachusetts. Welch Group, which includes Quincy's Hancock Park Rehabilitation & Nursing Center, Allerton House Assisted Living at Hancock Park and Hancock Park Adult Day Health, recently honored long-time employees during the organization's Annual Staff Recognition Dinner, held at Pembroke Country Club.

"We invest in our employees and our employees invest in us," says Welch Group President Richard W. Welch, referring to the extraordinary length of service of so many Welch Group employees. "Welch Group employees embody our company's goals and values, providing the highest standard of care to seniors," adds Welch.

This year Welch Group employees receiving top honors for their years of service to the company include John Howe, a 42-year dietary staff worker at Colonial Rehabilitation & Nursing Center in Weymouth; Sandra Benotti, RN, an MDS/MMQ coordinator at Hancock Park Rehabilitation & Nursing Center in Quincy who has been on staff for 41 years and Donna Griffin, director of social services at John Scott House Rehabilitation & Nursing Center in Braintree, who is a 40-year employee.

Innovation and quality care are the backbone of Welch Healthcare & Retirement Group – increasingly important with an estimated 72 million Americans expected to be 65 years old or older by 2030. That commitment has made the Welch Group a leading provider of continuum of care services to seniors and their families who may need housing or care options, including independent living, assisted living, short-term rehabilitation and long-term care, Alzheimer's care, adult day health or home care services. A significant company milestone later this year is the 20th anniversary of Harbor House Rehabilitation & Nursing Center in Hingham.



MUSICIAN DAVE BECKER entertains a crowd of nearly 300 Welch Group employees during Welch Healthcare & Retirement Group's Annual Staff Recognition Dinner held at Pembroke Country Club.

In addition to awards for distinguished length of service, the Welch Group each year honors individuals who plan to continue their education in healthcare or related services. This year there were 14 recipients of the Florence May St. John Scholarship. The scholarship was established by the Welch Family to honor St. John, who began caring for seniors in her home and would later set the model for her own daughter, Rita M. Welch who with her husband, Thomas, opened their first nursing center in Braintree - the John Scott House. The Welch Group, a leading provider of senior services for more than 65 years, with facilities located in Braintree, Brighton, Duxbury, Hingham, Marshfield, Quincy and Weymouth, employs over 2000 staff members.

Message from Executive Director

Quincy is rich in arts and culture, community, historic and recreational assets. As the organization dedicated to promoting tourism in the City of Quincy, Discover Quincy has coordinated a new program series in partnership with many local organizations. From the City's signature Flag Day Celebration on June 14 to the Arts Affair at Marina Bay on August 1, we welcome you to participate in over 150 events. Each day will feature at least one free event, while some events may accept donations and others have an admission fee. Please note the colored star next to each listing to reflect event pricing.

Discover Quincy has converted a vacant retail space into a pop up art gallery, which will be open free to the public Fridays from June 19 - July 31, except for July 3. We will have entertainment weekly. There has been a lot of enthusiasm about having an art space downtown. We are also sponsoring an outdoor concert series at the Ruth Gordon Amphitheater on alternating Tuesdays beginning June 30. We recently launched a new website DiscoverQuincy.com that has additional information for many of the events and is a great resource for our area attractions.

New for this season:
We are pleased the Quincy Historic Society welcomes visitors free to their museum Monday through Saturday. The USS Salem has reopened to the public and visitors are welcome daily 10am - 3pm.

Tune into our social media channels for daily upates. For more information, contact us at 617-639-1117 or email mlaforest@discoverquincy.com.

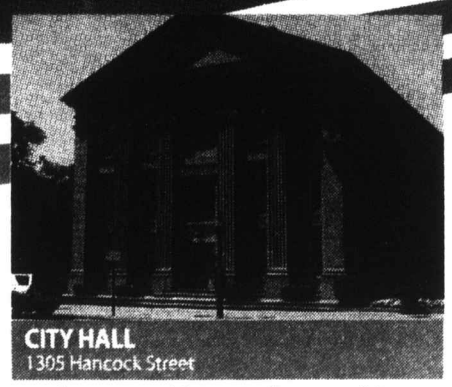
QUINCY HISTORY MUSEUM
8 Adams Street | 617-773-1144 | QuincyHistory.org
Open Mon-Fri, 9 am – 4 pm. Saturdays, mid-April–October, noon – 3 pm.

The Adams Academy, built of Quincy granite, is an early and important example of Gothic revival architecture in America. Endowed by John Adams as a preparatory school for boys, it was built on the site where the legendary patriot John Hancock was born. Now home to the Quincy Historical Society whose museum showcases the city's history from Native American times up through the early 21st century.



CITY HALL
1305 Hancock Street

Built in 1844, old City Hall is one of the oldest functioning seats of government in the country. Its academic Greek Revival architecture has been described as one of the outstanding examples of mid-century classical American design. Unusual in both its monumentality and in the severity of its granite detail, these features may be attributed to its architect Solomon Willard, who was instrumental in the development of the granite industry in Quincy. Historic Preservation work is currently underway.

HANCOCK CEMETERY
1307 Hancock Street

From 1630 to 1854, Quincy's most illustrious residents and civic leaders were buried here; Henry Adams, the first Adams to live in Quincy and ancestor of John Adams; Colonel John Quincy, for whom the city is named; patriot Josiah Quincy, Veterans of the Revolution, the War of 1812, and the Civil War. The memorials offer a chronicle of gravestone art from colonial winged skulls and cherubim, to Federalist classical motifs, to Quincy's 19th century role as the national center for granite quarrying and carving. Scan code to get connected to a Google walking tour map of the cemetery.

20 Sea Street

One of America's earliest garden cemeteries, the first two plots were ceremoniously purchased on May 5, 1856 by Charles Francis Adams, Sr. A two and one half mile long stone wall, erected for the perimeter in 1934-35 by the Works Progress Administration, is dedicated to the memory of Thomas Morton who in 1625 led the settlement here after the arrival of Captain Richard Wollaston. The variety of ornate gravestones and granite monuments beautify this outdoor museum honoring three Adams descendants whose lives were lost in service to our country, veterans, former Mayors and prominent granite industry leaders.

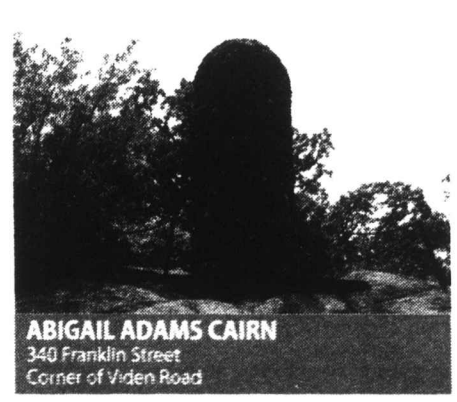
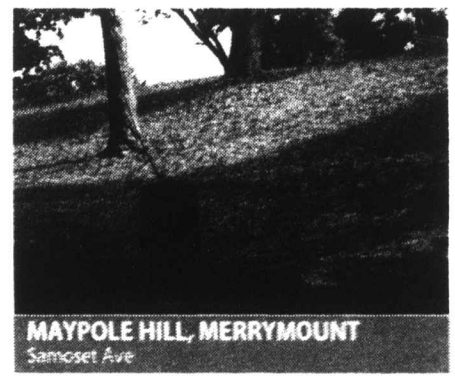
MERRYMOUNT PARK
One Merrymount Parkway | QuincyMa.gov

Quincy's most utilized park, donated by descendants of Presidents John and John Quincy Adams and originally developed by Frederick Law Olmsted, Merrymount Park now includes Adams Field, the finest amateur baseball field in New England, Collins Rest-a-While playground, Fenno Street basketball and tennis courts, Mitchell McCoy softball field, Ruth Gordon Ampitheater, running track at Faxon Field, Ryan Boathouse and Veteran's Memorial Stadium.



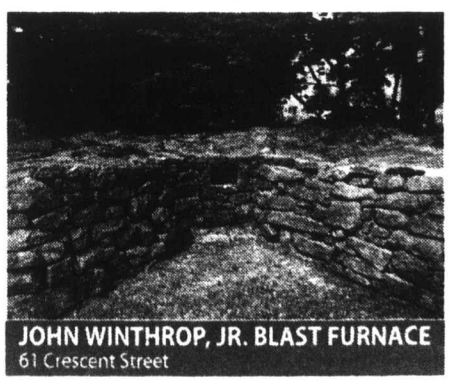
ABIGAIL ADAMS CAIRN
340 Franklin Street
Corner of Viden Road

On June 17, 1775, Abigail Adams and her seven year old son John Quincy walked the short distance from their farm to the top of Penn's Hill, where they observed the smoke and fire of the Battle of Bunker Hill. The cairn, an ancient form of commemoration, was erected by the Daughters of the Revolution in 1896. The cairn's stones came from private properties and historic sites. During historic preservation work in 2008, a time capsule was discovered.



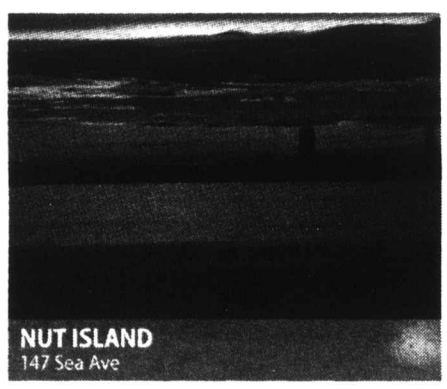
MAYPOLE HILL, MERRYMOUNT
Samoset Ave

Thomas Morton, the first English person to build a plantation, known as Mar-e-Mount, on Massachusetts Bay in 1624, operated a successful trading post. On May Day, 1627, he erected a Maypole. The site is commemorated on the City's Seal. Shown with a large tree on it, a historical marker notes the location, and its remains can be seen at the Quincy History Museum.



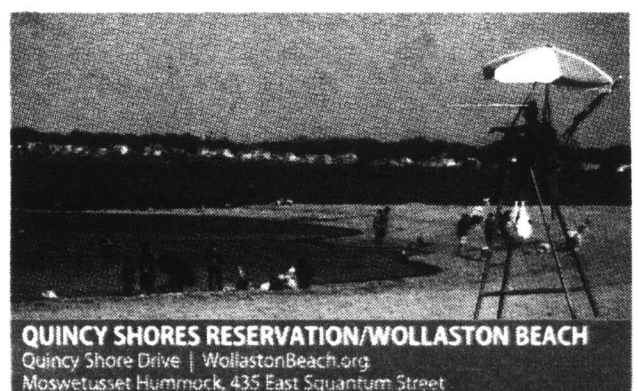
JOHN WINTHROP, JR. BLAST FURNACE
61 Crescent Street

The son of Massachusetts' governor and one of the principal founders of Connecticut, John Winthrop, Jr. operated the first iron smelting furnace in the British colonies, one of the earliest industrial ventures in America (1645). You can view the excavated remains of the furnace, read about its history, and see artist's renderings of the furnace in full operation.



NUT ISLAND
147 Sea Ave

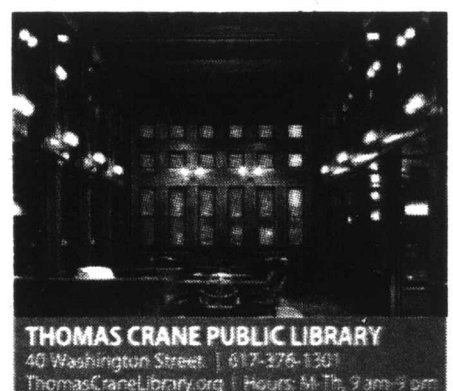
Part of the Boston Harbor Islands National Recreation Area, and one of the few accessible by land, this property offers stellar vistas of the Boston skyline and other Harbor Islands. A great place to watch the sunset, this location is popular for walking, picnicking, or fishing from the pier.



QUINCY SHORES RESERVATION/WOLLASTON BEACH
Quincy Shore Drive | WollastonBeach.org
Moswetusset Hummock, 435 East Squantum Street
Caddy Park, 1244 Quincy Shore Drive

Quincy's largest beach offers 2.5 miles of clean sand, swimming, lifeguards, free parking, a bathhouse, scenic views of the Boston Harbor Islands National Park and a continuous walkway for biking, walking & jogging. Some of the best fried clams in the area can be found at a variety of eateries, as well as hot dogs, hamburgers, ice cream and more. There are also two children's playgrounds with picnic areas.

Moswetusset Hummock (1617) was the seat of the Massachusett Native American sachem, Chickatabot, where he negotiated with the early English settlers. The William R. Caddy Memorial Park and Black's Creek Salt Marsh were used by Native Americans for fishing, shell fishing, and hunting. Colonists harvested salt hay from the marsh and established several tide grist mills around the estuary. Significant for its beauty and for rare Native American artifacts, including 256 stone tools, discovered on site, the park also has informational signage and children's playground equipment.



THOMAS CRANE PUBLIC LIBRARY
40 Washington Street | 617-376-1301
ThomasCraneLibrary.org | Hours: M-Th, 9 am-9 pm Friday & Saturday, 9 am-5 pm, Sunday, 1-5 pm

Built in 1881 by noted architect Henry Hobson Richardson, who also designed Boston's famed Trinity Church, the Thomas Crane Public Library's original building is a masterpiece of 19th century Romanesque architecture. Its ornate woodwork and LaFarge stained glass windows are truly works of art. Since the library opened in 1882, several additions have been constructed, including a multimillion-dollar addition in 2001 that combines the architectural spirit of the original Richardson building with the technological capabilities of a 21st century library. Through memberships and sales at their bookstore at the Main Library (open Thursdays from 6-8 and Saturday from 10-4), the Friends of TCPL are able to fund the museum pass program and special events while supporting the library's vital role in the educational and cultural life of Quincy.

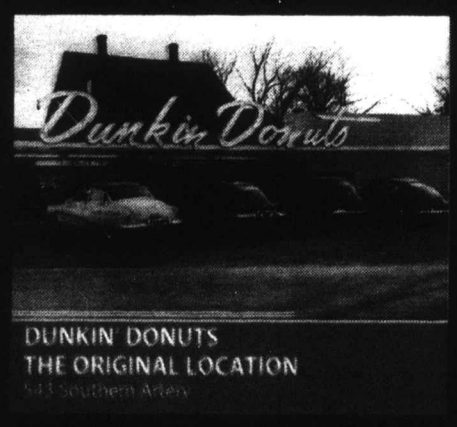
DOROTHY QUINCY HOMESTEAD

The earliest surviving home of the Quincy family, this house was built in 1686 by Edmund Quincy and greatly expanded and remodeled in 1706 displaying the evolution of colonial architecture. The childhood home of Dorothy Quincy, who became Mrs. John Hancock, the house welcomed Benjamin Franklin as a guest and had frequent visits from young lawyer John Adams.



DUNKIN DONUTS
THE ORIGINAL LOCATION

In 1950, William Rosenberg changed the name of his Quincy doughnut shop from "The Open Kettle" to Dunkin' Donuts, and an international franchising giant was born. The original location recently completed a retro-renovation and has memorabilia on display. Dunkin' Donuts is the world's leading baked goods and coffee chain, serving more than 3 million customers per day. This location offers WiFi and is open 24 hours.

Concern Over Affordable Housing, Public Space In New Downtown

Council President Finn: 'We Plan To Fully Vet' New URDP

By SCOTT JACKSON

At a public hearing on a proposed amendment to the city's Urban Revitalization and Development Plan for Quincy Center, residents pressed for affordable housing and public space in the new downtown.

The amended URDP was needed after Mayor Thomas Koch terminated the city's land disposition with Street-Works, the previous master developer for Quincy Center, last year. Under the new URDP, the city would spend $145 million on infrastructure improvements in the downtown over the next decade to spur private development in the area.

The plan envisions 1,250 new residential units, 600,000 square feet of new office space, 125,000 square feet of retail space and 120 hotel rooms in the downtown. The new development would take place on the city-owned Hancock Lot and Ross Parking Area as well as on privately held parcels.

The Rev. Sheldon Bennett, a Merrymount Road resident and member of the city's Affordable Housing Trust Fund Committee, said the council should take steps to ensure affordable housing is created in the new Quincy Center as the body reviews the amendment to the URDP.

"The share of Quincy's housing that is affordable to lower middle-income households is decreasing relative to the total housing stock. The households we are talking about are, for example, young adults starting their careers, especially lower paying careers like teaching, public service work; lower wage employees businesses need to operate here in the community...and elders and others on fixed income," Bennett said.

"Lots of upmarket units will be produced in Quincy, and that's a good thing, but not so many for households at or below median incomes and that is not such a good thing."

Under the previous agreement with Street-Works, the developer had agreed to pay $10,000 into the affordable housing trust for each new residential unit constructed.

Anneli Johnson, a Garfield Street resident who founded the Quincy Farmers Market, noted Street-Works' plan included Market Square, an area in the vicinity of Cliveden that would provide a permanent home for the farmers market. She said there was no mention of the market at a recent economic development breakfast she attended.

"Street-Works saw the value of having a farmers market in their plans," Johnson said. "The farmers bring in foot traffic...and add constant festivity to downtown without any cost to the city or any labor from the city. It is something the city of Boston hosts all the time."

Kevin Dye of Rhoda Street said public spaces, including the farmers market, are what will attract people to Quincy Center.

"To make something in-

Korean War Memorial June 25

By SCOTT JACKSON

The Quincy Veterans Council will hold a memorial service to mark the 65th anniversary of the beginning of the Korean War on Thursday, June 25, at 10:30 a.m.

The ceremony will take place at the corner of Hancock Street and Merrymount Parkway (in front of Veterans' Memorial Stadium) where a memorial dedicated to the 38 young men from Quincy who gave their lives in the war stands.

The special guest speaker for this year's ceremony is Song Jun Ohm, consul general of the Republic of Korea in Boston.

Mayor Thomas Koch and Rep. Tackey Chan are the honorary co-chairs for this year's memorial service. Chan toured South Korea last fall, becoming the first state legislator to make an official visit to the country; while there, he visited the War Memorial of Korea, which includes both exhibits on the Korean War and a memorial to those who were killed during the war.

Lawrence Norton, past commander of the Quincy Veterans Council; Veterans Council Commander Richard Keane; George Nicholson, the city's director of veterans services; and Sen. John Keenan are also scheduled to speak at the ceremony. The Rev. John Carl Swanson, chaplain for the Quincy Veterans Council, will deliver the invocation and benediction.

Past Commander Anthony Wolowitz will place a wreath in front of the memorial. Naseeb "Moe" Morad will sing the national anthem and "God Bless America." Robert LaFleur will play "Taps."

Ask the GEMOLOGIST

BY JEFFREY M. BERTMAN
GRADUATE GEMOLOGIST

ALL HAIL THE KING!

Ruby, July's birthstone, is known as the "king of gemstones." Along with its rarity and hardness (second only to diamond), this royal gem is renowned for its undiluted red color. The best of the best are Burmese rubies, which have the most desirable "pigeon's blood" hue. The reason for this is that the mining districts in Myanmar (as Burma is now known) have very little iron in their geography, which is the element that gives ruby a brownish cast. In the iron-poor soil, aluminum oxide and traces of chromium combine to produce a truly remarkable marvel of nature. By contrast, rubies mined in Thailand have a characteristic brownish tint, which some ruby lovers actually prefer due to their deeper color.

The most important factor when evaluating a ruby is its color. The deeper and more intense the color, the better! If you are considering buying a ruby to be set in a ring, earrings, pendant, or other jewelry, then stop by our store at 1402 Hancock St. in Quincy Center. We are a full service jewelry store, and we accept custom orders. Our prices have always been more than competitive with no fake markups in order to offer huge discounts. For more information, please call 617-773-3636.

Don't Forget: We pay cash for Gold - Platinum - Diamonds... highest prices paid.

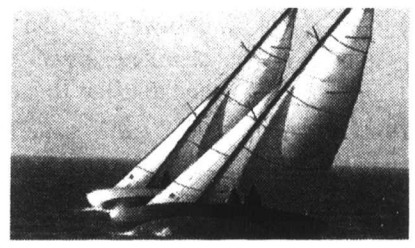
Finally ... you get to do what you want to do



The question now – what's the best way to pay for it? Maybe you're simplifying your life. Maybe you're complicating it. Either way, you're at the point where some new doors are opening. You have resources. You have options. What you want is a lender you can talk with, to help make the financing happen intelligently. At Colonial Federal, you deal directly with lenders who actually like coming up with good ways to make things happen. Including sometimes being able to make customized loans. Sound interesting? THE HISTORY CHANNEL.

• On July 4, 1826, John Adams and Thomas Jefferson, the second and third presidents of the United States, respectively, die on the 50th anniversary of the adoption of the Declaration of Independence. Both men had been central in drafting the historic document.

• On June 30, 1859, Frenchman Emile Blondin becomes the first daredevil to walk across Niagara Falls on a tightrope. Wearing pink tights and a yellow tunic, Blondin crossed a cable about 2 inches in diameter and 1,100-feet long using only a balancing pole.

• On July 5, 1865, in London, revivalist preacher William Booth and his wife Catherine establish the Christian Mission, modeled after the British army, with women given ranks equal with men. In 1878, the organization was renamed the Salvation Army, and two years later the first U.S. branch opened in Pennsylvania.

• On July 2, 1881, President James A. Garfield is shot as he walks through a railroad waiting room in Washington, D.C. His assailant, Charles J. Guiteau, was a disgruntled and perhaps insane office seeker. Garfield died 80 days later of blood poisoning.

• On July 1, 1951, Cleveland Indians ace Bob Feller pitches the third no-hit game of his career, making him the first modern pitcher ever to throw three no-hitters. Feller made his first start in 1936, when he was just 17.

• On July 3, 1985, the blockbuster action-comedy "Back to the Future," in which the iconic DeLorean concept car is transformed into a time-travel device, premieres.

• On June 29, 1995, the American space shuttle Atlantis docks with the Russian space station Mir to form the largest man-made satellite ever to orbit the Earth. It was the 100th human space mission in U.S. history.

Special Olympics Quincy Games At Pageant Field Thursday

Special Olympics Massachusetts will hold the annual Quincy School Day Games today (Thursday) at Pageant Field located at One Merrymount Parkway. The event starts at 9:15 a.m. with competition running until 11:30 a.m.

Athletes and their Unified Partners (those without an intellectual disability) will compete in track and field events during the morning. Focusing on a variety of sports and motor skill development, students will visit a variety of sport stations. Events include: the 50m dash, long jump, football throw, soccer kick, softball throw, bean bag skills among others.

"Our School Day Games are providing tremendous opportunities for not only our athletes but the communities they live in," said Mary Beth McMahon, president and CEO of Special Olympics Massachusetts.

"The games continue to develop in these communities and grow because of the generous financial and volunteer support of our partner, Bank of America as well as Quincy School System and their dedicated team," McMahon added.

Quincy Fire High Angle Technical Rope Rescue Training

Quincy Fire
Prevention Bureau

Rescuers on the Quincy Fire Department have no way of knowing what type of emergency they will respond to each day. Therefore, the Quincy Fire Department actively engages in daily training for different types of emergency scenarios in order to sharpen and advance their skills for emergency responses.

Recently, firefighters stationed at Headquarters conducted a high angle technical rope rescue training drill at a sewage pumping station on School Street in Quincy. The training was orchestrated by Capt. Daniel Gorman. Lt. Kevin Ferent and Lt. Jeffrey Baldock assisted with leading the drill.

A pumping station employee was repairing a hoist above a 100 ft. drop when suddenly he lost his footing, causing him to fall 100 feet to the basement floor.

In this type of emergency response, Quincy Fire dispatch would deploy an engine company, a ladder company, and a heavy rescue company to respond to the call. Due to firefighters preplanning throughout their district each day, Quincy Firefighters would be aware of the building's confined space challenges and toxic air threat due to its use of being a pump house sewage facility.

Firefighters would respond to this incident with gas meters and full protective gear, including self-contained breathing apparatus. Once firefighters are on scene and understand what type of rescue would be needed, a plan would be quickly developed before action is deployed for a high angle technical rope rescue of the patient.

During the planning phase of the rescue, many questions relating to the approach of the rescue would need to be quickly figured out in rapid succession. Some of the questions that may arise for this rescue include the following:

What type of ropes will be needed for this type of rescue? What lengths will be needed? What types of knots will firefighters use for this rescue? What type of anchoring system and lowering system will be needed for this rescue?

Will rescuers need to use anchoring straps or tubular webbing? What size and strength will be needed? Should rescuers use fabric loops or metal "D" rings on the ends? Will firefighters be using friction control or descent devices for the lowering system?

Will firefighters be using brake racks, brake tubes, figure eights or some other device? What hauling system shall firefighters use to haul the patient and the rescuers to safety? What belaying technique will be used as a safety line for the firefighter(s) and the victim? How do firefighters keep the ropes from getting tangled?

What kind of pulleys will firefighters use? Will firefighters need single, double, triple sheave? What kind of carabineers will be used - steel or aluminum? Locking or non-locking gates? What size and strength will be needed?

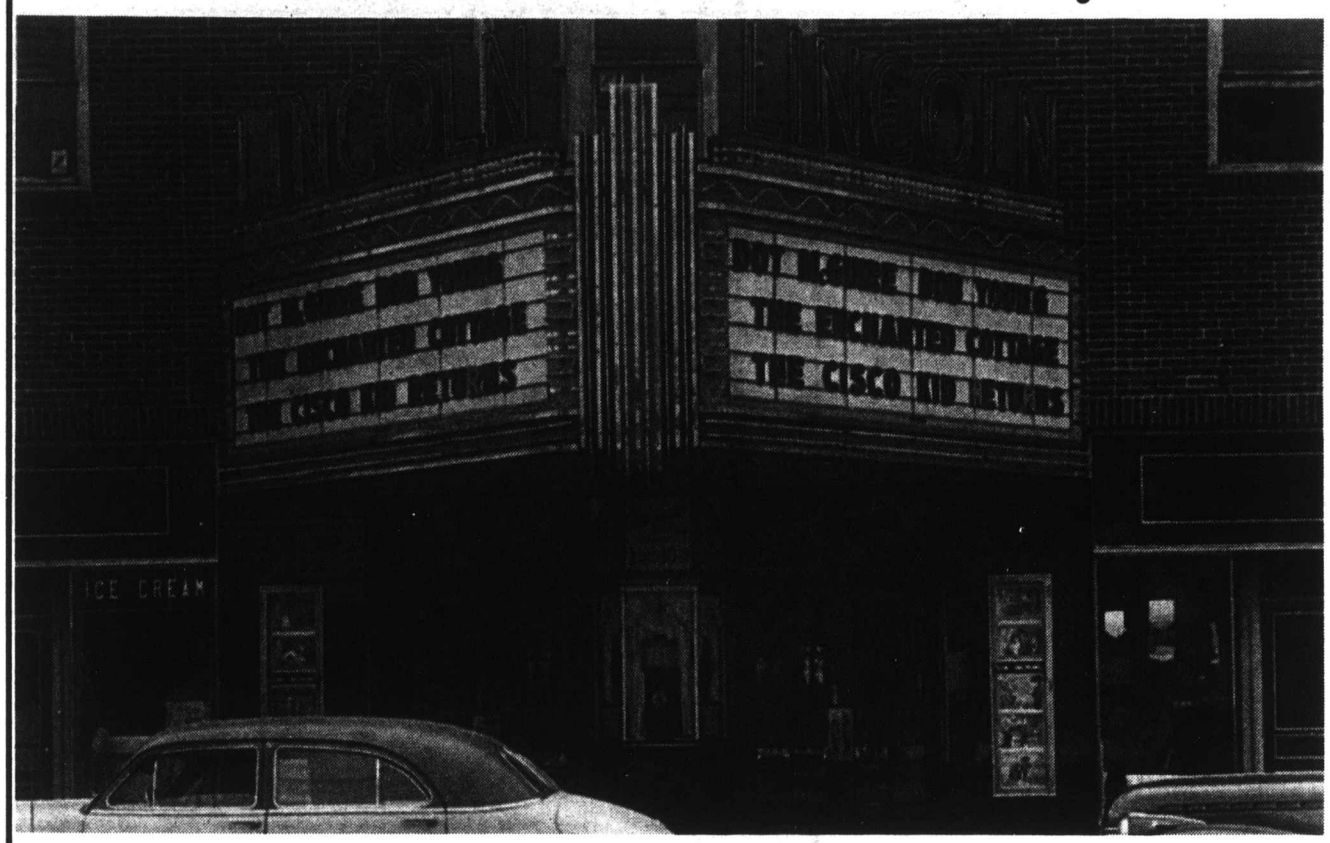
What type of harnesses will be used? Will a seat harness suffice or will firefighters need full body harnesses? When packaging the victim for extraction, what type of carrier will be used? What type of litter would be used to extract the patient? A basket litter, semi-rigid litter or both?

What type of litter rigging and patient packaging tools will be needed? How do firefighters make sure that the victim cannot accidentally fall from the litter after firefighters have packaged him for extraction? What type of lifting bridle will best meet the needs of the rescue - fixed or adjustable length? What strength rating will be needed?

With Quincy's growing population, continuous construction, natural disasters and everyday emergencies, it is becoming more and more important that Quincy Firefighters remain proficient in these rescue techniques. For every emergency that the Quincy Fire Department responds to, extensive preplanning and training will continue to be conducted daily in order to protect the lives and property of the citizens of Quincy.

The Quincy Fire Department is proud to serve the citizens of Quincy. If you should have a questions or concerns whatsoever, please do not hesitate to call the Quincy Fire Prevention Bureau at 617-376-1015.

Scenes From Yesterday



THIS IS A 1948 postcard reproduction showing the old Lincoln Theater that was located at 587 Washington St. in Quincy Point. Known as the Casino when it opened in the mid 1920's, the name was changed to the Lincoln in 1929. The film featured on the marquee – "The Enchanted Cottage" – was a romantic fantasy starring Dorothy McGuire as a maid and Robert Young as an ex-GI in the roles of two unattractive people who fall in love. "The Cisco Kid" was Duncan Renaldo with his sidekick, Pancho. At the time of this photo the Lincoln's snack bar was on the left and Rocco Vitale's barbershop was on the right. The theater was closed in the 1960's and the building was soon after demolished. Today, this is the site of a used car dealer. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Navy Recruiting Station Reopens In Quincy Center

The Navy's Quincy Center Recruiting station, located at 31 Hancock Ct., has reopened. Hours are 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.

The station will have two full-time recruiters. The center will be recruiting both active duty and Reserve officers (college degree required) and enlisted sailors (high school seniors and high school graduates).

Lt. Daniel Murphy said there are three reasons for reopening the station: convenience, technical skills and demographics.

In terms of convenience, Lt. Murphy said the Quincy Center station has been closed for the last three years. During that time, recruits from Quincy, Braintree, Weymouth, Dorchester and surrounding towns have had to travel all the way to Waltham or Brockton to join the Navy.

"Many applicants, parents, teachers, and veterans said this was not convenient. And we agreed. Quincy is a Navy town, and we are tremendously excited about being back," Lt. Murphy said.

• Technical Skills: Quincy and the surrounding communities have outstanding public and private schools with students who have the educational mix we need.

"While today's Navy requires fewer personnel, our new generation of ships and aircraft require officers and sailors who are smarter and more technical. From the Quincy area, we are especially hoping to attract applicants for our nuclear engineering programs and our SEAL and other Special Warfare programs," Lt. Murphy said.

• Demographics: "We believe Quincy and the surrounding communities have a great deal to offer the Navy from a diversity standpoint," Lt. Murphy said. "As the Navy increases its footprint in the Asia Pacific region and in Africa, we are looking for officers and enlisted sailors who represent those countries, understand the cultures in those countries, and speak the languages.

For more information, contact LT Daniel Murphy, daniel.t.murphy@navy.mil, 617-921-0239, or LS1 Soeun Chea, soeun.chea@navy.mi, 978-337-1513.

Quincycycles Montclair Neighbhood Ride Saturday

Quincycles will host an Easy Rider Ride in the Montclair neighborhood on Saturday, June 20th at 9 a.m.

These monthly third Saturday rides are designed for bicyclists who prefer shorter distance, relaxed pace recreational rides. Participants are invited to meet prior to the start time on the Holbrook Road side of Montclair Elementary School.

The ride is free and open to all interested bicyclists.

Quincycles is a group of Quincy residents advocating for bicycle infrastructure on our city streets and promoting responsible bicycling as a means of transportation, recreation, and exercise in Quincy.

More information about the group can be found on their website at www.Quincycles.org or by email quincycles@gmail.com.

The next public meeting is tonight (Thursday) at 7:30 p.m. immediately following the Mayor's Bicycle Commission meeting at City Hall.

NQ Shop Owner Raising Money For Nepal Earthquake Relief

The owners of Danny's Hardware, 53 Billings Rd., have started a collection for relief efforts for the April earthquake that struck Nepal.

The April 25 earthquake, with a magnitude of 7.8, killed more than 8,700 in Nepal and neighboring countries.

More than 300 aftershocks have hit the country since then, including a May 12 aftershock with a 7.3 magnitude that killed more than 200.

Finn, Barry Oppose Safety Commission As 'Step Backward'

The chiefs of the Quincy Police and Fire Departments reacted in outspoken opposition to Mayor Joseph LaRaia's proposal for a three-member Public Safety Commission to supervise their operation.

Police Chief Francis X. Finn called the proposal a "step backward. It is an old hat that doesn't fit today. It smacks of a civilian review board over the Police Department which has been a disaster where it has been tried in this country."

Fire Chief Edward F. Barry called it "definitely not a step forward for the Fire Department." He launched a ringing defense of Quincy Firefighters.

RAYMONDI COMMENDS POLICE FOR SHIPYARD TOWING

Ward 2 City Councillor Daniel G. Raymondi commended the Quincy Police Department for "concerted efforts" to clear the streets and sidewalks of illegally parked vehicles in the area of the General Dynamics Shipyard.

Raymondi noted that one of his first acts as a city councillor was to re-introduce a towing ordinance that would empower the Police Department to remove illegally parked vehicles in certain tow zones.

Raymondi said an intensified effort the past week resulted in about 100 vehicles being removed from the streets and sidewalks in the shipyard area.

DUKAKIS TO SIGN NUT ISLAND BILL HERE

Governor Michael Dukakis was due in Quincy to sign into law a measure that would prevent the MDC from filling 26 acres of Quincy Bay in order to expand the Nut Island Sewage Treatment Plant.

The bill was sponsored by Rep. Thomas F. Brownell and amended by Senator Arthur H. Tobin.

"This is a great day for Quincy," said Tobin. "Particularly for residents who would have been most directly affected."

Quincy Farmers Market Opens June 26 At Hancock Lot

The Quincy Farmers Market opens June 26 in the John Hancock Municipal Parking Lot in downtown Quincy across from the Francis X. Bellotti Quincy District Courthouse.

For 33 years the market has been run primarily as a "producer-only" market meaning that the most of the people selling products are the ones that produce it. The ability to speak directly with the farmers and business owners is what distinguishes a Farmers Market from many other shopping experiences.

This year there are two dozen vendors - all family-run small businesses. In any given year a quarter of the vendors are start-ups. The market is an incubator for cottage-industry businesses. Beyond shopping a visit to the market is a chance to engage entrepreneurs in development of their products and business.

The Frietas Farm from Middleton and the Stillmans Farm from New Braintree have been coming to Quincy since the market's inception in 1982. They are family run farms. Stop by and talk with Scott Frietas or Glenn Stillman and ask how your food was raised.

Mike Ohan from Undisputed Chicken is a market regular. He brings farm-fresh eggs from Holbrook as well as a chicken or two for live viewing.

For 10 years Golden Rule Honey from Leominster has been bringing honey to Quincy. In recent years they have placed hives in Jamaica Plain and Long Island. Learn about antibiotic-free honey and how their bees are raised without pesticides.

In 2012 Westport Rivers Winery joined the Quincy Farmers market from Dartmouth where they grow their own grapes and produce top quality local wine. Ackermanns Maple Syrup returns from Cabot, Vermont. They harvest the sap from over 3,000 trees each spring.

Christine Cotter from Quincy comes to the market with Skinsations, home made products produced by Christine from plants grown in her backyard, organic garden. This year the market welcomes Bill St. Croix and the Frohloff Farm from Ware. The Frohloff Farm raises pigs and will be bringing pork to the market. Stop by and speak with Bill about how he raises his pigs.

New family-run businesses coming to the market this year include Noble Originals hand-made, eco-friendly skin products. Del's Lemonade joins the market from Cohasset. Nina Fe Dimagiba from Quincy will be bringing custards and flans to market. Also from Quincy is a new baker, Chris Parker with the CP Baking Co.

Other family companies providing baked goods includes D'slectibles out of Pawtucket, R.I.; Vermaje's out of Randolph featuring bakes scones and tea breads; O'Brien's Bakery in Quincy with its lineup of products; and Swiss-style baked goods from the Swiss Bakers in Allston.

Entertainment and the arts are part of the landscape of the market.

Facepainting will be available with face painter, Denise Ferreira. The Thomas Crane Library will be conducting Story Time every week through the summer. Arts and crafts will be provided. There will be Scottish Fiddle music by Susan Bill returns with her tunes.

Weekly music will vary with local musicians singing original songs along with old favorites. Among the returning musicians are Mike Delaney, Jungko Ogawa, and Bronson Bofat. Also making an appearance will be Joe Bargar, local Quincy blues legend.

The market traditionally features information booths and nonprofit organizations throughout the season. The NorthEast Community Bank teaches kids about financial literacy and adults about the role of a community bank in local economic development. They also sponsor the appearance of local artists and additional startups and small businesses. Next Step Living and Nexamp will engage people in conversations about sustainable energy practices.

There's a lot to do. Listen to some music, learn a few things about food, talk to an entrepreneur, entertain your kids. While doing this you can get some lunch at The Kabob House, or Quincy's own Home Style Caterers or O'Brien's Grill. Then take home meat from Stillman's at the Turkey Farm, pork from Frohloff's, or fresh fish from Ray the Fish Guy.

The market is run by two volunteers and its operating expenses are paid for solely by the vendors. If you would like to play a role in the market contact the Market Manager, Janet Little at 339-225-2607. Follow weekly announcements and read about the background of these businesses at www.quincyfarmersmarket.com and facebook.com/quincyfarmersmarket

Senior Fire Safety Workshop At Kennedy Center June 23

According to recent statistics, people over the age of 65 account for 40 percent of fire deaths each year in Massachusetts.

Quincy Firefighters will present a Senior Fire Safety Workshop for all seniors at the Kennedy Center, 440 East Squantum St., Quincy, on Tuesday, June 23rd at 10 a.m. The workshop will improve fire and life safety of older adults.

To register for the event, call the Kennedy Center at (617) 376-1506.

Olde Kids Swing Band Performs Aug. 7

Back by popular demand the Olde Kids Swing Band will return to the Kennedy Center on Friday, Aug. 7th from 1 to 3 p.m.

The "Olde Kids" is a dance band in the style of the big bands of the 1930's and 40's. The big band recreates the glamour and romance of an era that lasted 10 years.

Retired and semi-retired musicians are part of a resurgence of interests in live, glamorous and romantic music. The band was formed in 1991 and consists of six saxes, four trombones, four trumpets, four on rhythm and a vocalist.

Tickets are required for this event and can be purchased at the Kennedy Center, 440 East Squantum St., Quincy. Suggested donation is $6. Refreshments will be provided.

For more information, call the Kennedy Center at (617) 376-1506.

Three Residents On Saint Anselm Dean's List

Three students from Quincy are on the Dean's List for the spring semester at Saint Anselm College in Manchester, N.H.

They are:

Public Safety Family Day At Bishop's Field

Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin and the Montclair Wollaston Neighborhood Association (MWNA) will co-host a Public Safety Family Day at Bishop's Field between Holbrook Road and Hamilton Avenue on Saturday, June 20 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

There will be food, music, children's attractions, public safety equipment and demonstrations. Quincycles will be conducting a bike ride through the local neighborhoods in advance of the event and will be present at the event as well.

There is no cost for admission. Area residents and families are encouraged to attend.

"Tremendous thanks is owed to all those who have stepped up to support and help me put this event together including Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti and his staff, Chief Paul Keenan and the Quincy Police Department, Fire Chief Joe Barron and the staff at Engine 5, the Quincy Park Department and DPW with the support of Mayor Koch, and George Meegan and the leadership team at Granite Telecommunications, our great community partner." Coughlin said. "Without all of them this would not be possible."

Coughlin, who was a former Vice-President and President of the Neighborhood Association, and whose son James is the current president noted the importance of the MWNA in the community.

"For more than two decades the MWNA with the backbone of two of its founding members Janet and Howie Crowley has spearheaded advocacy for this neighborhood's best interests and closely allied with the local councillors to get good things accomplished. Its future viability depends on residents taking an active role to advance neighborhood issues," Coughlin said.

Association meetings are held the first Thursday of the month (except January, July and August) at 7:30 p.m. at the Lutheran Church on the corner of Harvard and West Squantum Street.

Each meeting features an informative speaker program.

Blueberry - Black Raspberry Crumble

By MARIE

The combination of black raspberries and blueberries is the best kind of a mixture – which is the one that my daughter Rita brought over last week.

It was such a delicious crumble. The berries weren't mushy – each one was very distinct and natural looking.

She said she usually would use flour or cornstarch as the thickening agent, but in today's recipe, she used tapioca, a much better consistency. It can be served with freshly whipped cream or ice cream, or just plain.

RASPBERRY-BLUEBERRY CRUMBLE

2 cups blueberries
2 cups raspberries
1/3 cup sugar
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1 teaspoon lemon zest
2 tablespoons tapioca, mixed with 1 tablespoon orange juice
Dash of salt

Toss the berries and sugar in a bowl. Add the lemon juice, zest, tapioca and orange juice. Set aside.

CRUMB TOPPING

1/2 cup flour
1 cup oats
6 tablespoons melted butter
1/2 cup packed brown sugar
1/2 teaspoon salt

Combine all the ingredients either with your fingertips or mixer.

Place the berry mixture in a casserole dish, and sprinkle the crumble over it. Bake in a 350-degree preheated oven for 45 minutes until bubbly.

Chocolate Mousse

By SUZIE

Just because I counsel people on their nutrition and diets, doesn't mean I recommend boring foods to eat!

I think sometimes people think I only eat or will tell them to only eat foods that aren't any "fun." We all have our talents, and one of mine is to make food that tastes like it is "bad" for you but is really good for you. Whether it is nachos, fettuccine alfredo, lasagna, or chocolate pudding. I have an "upgraded" version that is healthier, but most important just as delicious if not more delicious.

Here is a recipe for chocolate mousse. You can see from the ingredients that there is no dairy, or refined sugar in it (not to mention, no chemicals or words that you cannot pronounce).

I promise this tastes like chocolate pudding. The dates make it sweet and add nutrients and fiber. The avocado is full of fiber, healthy fat, and lots of important vitamins and minerals. The raw Cacoa powder I have spoken about many times before, which contains magnesium, iron, important micro nutrients as well as fiber. It has been referred to as the healthiest food on the planet (in it's unrefined state like I recommend). It also has been shown to lower blood pressure better than medication if eaten several times per week.

So . . . eat your chocolate mousse and enjoy it knowing that you are pleasing your taste buds as well as your body and mind!

CHOCOLATE MOUSSE

1/2 cup raw cacoa powder
2 tablespoons raw honey or real maple syrup. (You may need more, depending on how sweet you like it.)
½ cup medjool dates, SEEDS REMOVED (otherwise you will break your processor!)
1 1/2 teaspoons real vanilla extract
2 ripe avocados, mashed (make sure they are ripe!)
1/4-1/2 cup water OR coconut milk
DASH of sea salt (just a teeny bit)
1/2 teaspoon instant coffee (OPTIONAL)

Place everything in your Vitamix, Nutribullet, food processor or other high speed blender, scraping down the sides and mixing until smooth and creamy. Refrigerate until chilled (about 30 minutes).

Use the smaller amount of water/coconut milk at first. You may need more depending on how creamy you like it. Keep in an airtight container. It is best cold and when left in fridge at least 30 minutes.

Strawberry - Balsamic Surprise

By MARIE

With summer just about here a light dessert is always welcome.

And so it was when my daughter Ann Marie made this easy and delicious strawberry dessert on one of those summer-like days.

You wouldn't think that vinegar would be one of the ingredients for dessert, but wait until you try it. And with only a couple of ingredients as well.

STRAWBERRIES & BALSAMIC

2 pounds strawberries
1/2 cup of sugar
1/2 cup Balsamic vinegar
A few mint leaves (optional)

Cut the strawberries in quarters. In a bowl, add the sugar and vinegar together until well blended. Pour onto strawberries, mix and then marinate for about an hour in the refrigerator, Sprinkle a couple of mint leaves, and serve with whipped cream or ice cream. So delicious!

'Love Songs Of John, Abigail Adams' At ANHP Sunday

New York City based Chelsea Opera in cooperation with the Adams National Historical Park will present a free performance of the Gary S. Fagin/Terry Quinn opera, A Distant Love: Songs of John and Abigail Adams at the Adams National Historical Park in Quincy on Father's Day, Sunday, June 21 at 2 p.m.

The performance takes place in The Carriage House behind Old House at 135 Adams St. and features soprano Victoria Tralongo and baritone Robert Taylor portraying the iconic roles of Abigail Adams and John Adams. The opera is scored for string quartet. The production has been funded by a grant from the National Endowment for the Arts – Art Works program, and by friends of Chelsea Opera who have matched the $12,500 grant.

Drawn from letters exchanged between John and Abigail Adams, the first part of the work, A Song for Abigail, concerns John Adams' work in Amsterdam to acquire loans from the Dutch to support the Revolution, already well underway. The second half, A Song for John, chronicles Abigail Adams' struggle to maintain her family and their farm while a revolutionary war was fought right on their doorstep.

Adams National Historical Park, run by the National Park Service, includes three historic houses, the John Adams Birthplace, the John Quincy Adams Birthplace, the Old House at Peace field; the 1870 Stone Library, the 1873 Adams Carriage House, and 12 acres of historic grounds including the formal garden and orchard. It was the home of two American presidents and subsequent generations of their descendants from 1720 to 1927.

Quincy Homestead Open For Public Tours Saturday

The Quincy Homestead, a National Historic Landmark, will be open for public tours Saturday, June 20, from noon to 4 p.m.

Tours will start approximately on the hour and the half hour beginning at noon. The last tour begins at 3:30 p.m.

All tours are free of charge, but a voluntary contribution would be appreciated.

The Homestead is located on Butler Road at the corner of Hancock Street in Quincy.

Dating from 1686, the house is 329 years old. During the 17th and 18th century, this mansion was considered the grandest estate in Quincy. During the pre- Revolutionary War era, it was a meeting place for such patriots as Josiah Quincy, John Hancock and John Adams. It was the childhood home of Dorothy Quincy Hancock, the wife of John Hancock.

Quincy Homestead is operated by The Colonial Dames of Massachusetts in conjunction with The Massachusetts Department of Conservation and Recreation (DCR).

Groups may request a private tour on a date of their choice by phoning 617 742 3190 or emailing dames@nscdama.org.

The remaining public tours this season will be held July 18, Aug. 1, Aug. 15, Sept. 12 and Oct. 3.

Council OKs $277 Million Budget

By SCOTT JACKSON

The City Council on Monday night gave final approval to Mayor Thomas Koch's proposed $277 million budget for the upcoming fiscal year and also set aside $2.17 million – the city's remaining free cash for the current fiscal year – for snow and ice removal costs for the previous winter.

The $276,971,870 budget for fiscal year 2016, which begins July 1, is an increase of $8.45 million (3.15 percent) over the budget for fiscal year 2015.

The final budget was approved unanimously Monday night after three sets of budget hearings over the past two months. During those budget hearings the council made one cut of $25,000 to the budget for the assistant wire inspector position in the Inspectional Services Department. Jay Duca, the department's director, recommended the cut, which corrected an accounting error.

The budget includes two new positions – a compliance officer in Inspectional Services, who will make sure contractors on public projects are following all labor laws, and a roofer for the Public Buildings Department.

Health insurance costs are up $2.68 million (6.18 percent) to $46.08 million; pension costs up $1.17 million (5.16 percent) to $23.84 million; and Medicare costs are up $290,000 or 15.68 percent to $2.14 million.

The general fund allocation to the Quincy Public Schools budget will increase $1.48 million (1.6 percent), from $94.1 million to $95.59 million. The school system will also receive $3.67 million in circuit breaker funding from the state for special education – $472,000 more than they did this year.

The School Committee on June 10 unanimously approved the school system's $99.26 million budget for the next fiscal year, which includes both the general fund allocation and circuit breaker funds.

The budget will allow for the hiring of five new teachers – two English language learners (ELL) instructors, a music teacher, a tech/engineering teacher for the middle schools and one teacher to be hired as needed to keep classroom size in an acceptable range.

The school budget also allows the system to keep 18 kindergarten aides at a cost of $320,300. Gov. Charlie Baker cut funding earlier this year for a grant that paid for those positions. Twenty special education aides, many of who are already working as long-term substitutes, will be brought on as full-time employees.

Also approved Monday in unanimous votes was the $24.75 million sewer enterprise fund budget and the $18.19 million water enterprise budget. Those departments are funded separately from the general fund.

The $2.17 million in remaining free cash for fiscal year 2015, which ends June 30, was unanimously appropriated to the city's inclement weather fund. James Fatseas, the chief of staff to Mayor Thomas Koch, said the money from the inclement weather fund could then be appropriated to cover the snow and ice deficit from this winter with council approval at a later date.

Quincy spent $13.52 million on snow and ice removal during a record-breaking winter; $1.76 million had been included in the fiscal 2015 budget for those expenses, leaving the city with an $11.76 million deficit in that account. Under state law, cities and towns can deficit spend on snow and ice removal. After this winter, state lawmakers gave municipalities the ability to amortize, or spread out, payments to make up the deficit for three years.

The city still has to pay back an additional $9.59 million from the snow and ice deficit, after the $2.17 million is accounted for.

The mayor also expects to receive reimbursement from the Federal Emergency Management Agency for snow removal costs. FEMA previously said it would reimburse some costs associated with the blizzard that struck in late January, but not expenses from other storms; state officials have appealed that decision to seek additional federal aid.

Fatseas on Monday said Koch will not introduce a plan to pay off the remaining deficit until the issue of FEMA reimbursement is settled.

The council approved several community preservation projects in a unanimous vote Monday. They include $310,000 to the Planning Department for restoring Hancock Cemetery; $25,000 to the DPW for preserving the city atlas; $10,000 to the DPW for preserving water, sewer and drain records; $55,000 to DPW for an engineering drainage/dredging study at Butler's Pond; and $8,000 to the Park Department for removing Japanese knotweed on Newport Avenue.

Those projects were previously approved by the city's Community Preservation Committee. In April, $300,000 in CPA money was allocated by the council for restoring the Quincy Point and Wollaston firehouses and $595,000 to the Park Department for several projects.

The council on Monday also approved appropriations of $40,000 to the Quincy Historical Society and $200,000 to Discover Quincy/Quincy Chamber of Commerce in a pair of 8-0 votes with Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest not voting. Those appropriations were charged to hotel/motel tax receipts and are for tourism.

The council additionally set a $300,000 limit on the amount that can be spent from the Recreation Department revolving account during the new fiscal year and a $100,000 limit on expenditures from the DPW revolving account. Both were approved unanimously.

Ceremony June 24 Marks Opening Of Passaganeset Knoll

Mayor Thomas P. Koch, the Quincy Park Department, and the History Girls of Broad Meadows Middle School announce the ceremonial opening of the Passanageset Knoll at Broad Meadows Marsh.

The ceremony schedules for Wednesday, June 24th will commemorate the collaborative effort of the History Girls, City of Quincy, and the Army Corps of Engineers. The ceremony will begin at the entry way to the marsh off of the Broad Meadows Middle School parking lot at 6 p.m.

This multi-year project between the City of Quincy and Army Corps of Engineers restored more than 40 acres of coastal marsh land, giving our city a first class passive recreational space. Over the past two years, the History Girls of Broad Meadows Middle School have researched and created signage for the park explaining its historic significance to our city.

"Passanageset Knoll is an important piece of Quincy's history," says Mayor Thomas Koch. "The dedication and passion that the History Girls showed during their research has been vital to the final steps of completing this wonderful project."

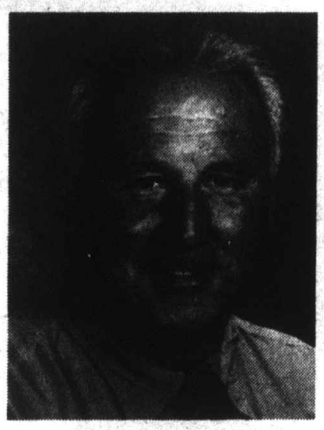
Paul Bregoli Seeking Re-Election On School Committee

School Committeeman Paul Bregoli announces he is a candidate for re-election in this fall's municipal election.

Bregoli, who spent 34 years in the Quincy Public Schools system as a teacher and guidance counselor, is planning his kick-off fundraiser Wednesday, June 24 at the Commonwealth Restaurant in Quincy from 6 to 8 p.m.

A donation of $25, $50 or $100 at the door is appreciated.

"I feel I have accomplished some of the goals I set out to address in my first term, but there are several more issues I would like to bring forward and address in my second term" Bregoli said in a press release announcing his re-election plans.



PAUL BREGOLI

Bregoli, who is also the girls varsity soccer coach at North Quincy High School, was elected in 2012 receiving the second most votes behind Dave McCarthy. It was Bregoli's first bid for public office after having served as the late Paul Harold's campaign treasurer for over 20 years.

Connor Flynn Receives Hamilton College Award

Connor J. Flynn, son of Loredana Nicolar of Quincy, was named the recipient of The Kneeland Prize at Hamilton College's annual Class & Charter Day.

The Kneeland Prize, established by the Rev. Martin Dwelle Kneeland, Class of 1869, is awarded to the student who has the best record when the grades in two courses on the Bible and in an essay competition on an assigned biblical subject are combined.

Flynn, a senior majoring in religious studies, is a graduate of North Quincy High School. Hamilton, a liberal arts college, is located in Clinton, N.Y.

Quincy Choral Society To Sing In NYC

Concert Saturday In Famed Carnegie Hall

Members of the Quincy Choral Society will perform Mozart's Requiem in Carnegie Hall in New York City on Saturday, June 20.

After submitting a sample recording to Manhattan Concert Productions (MCP), the Quincy Choral Society was chosen to perform along with choruses from Kansas, Texas, and Virginia as part of MCP's Masterworks Series. The combined chorus will perform with the New York City Chamber Orchestra under the direction of Dr. Joe Miller from Westminster Choir College, Princeton, NJ.

Manhattan Concert Productions creates performance opportunities at famous venues across the country for choruses, concert bands, and orchestras, and hosts two professional ensembles-in-residence, the Manhattan Chorale and the New York City Chamber Orchestra. Previous performances in 2015 Masterworks Series include Vivaldi's Gloria, Faure's Requiem, and Haydn's Lord Nelson Mass.

Joe Miller is Professor of Conducting; Director of Choral Activities; and Chair of Conducting, Organ, and Sacred Music at Westminster Choir College. In addition, Dr. Miller is artistic director for choral activities for the renowned Spoleto Festival USA. His 2014 debut performance, a staged production of John Adams El Niño with the Spoleto Festival Orchestra, the Westminster Choir, and an international cast, earned critical acclaim. The New York Times described the performance as "superb. Meticulously prepared... the chorus was remarkable for its precision, unanimity and power." His 2014-2015 season with the Westminster Choir includes a concert tour of California, several national radio broadcasts, and their annual residency at the Spoleto Festival USA.

For over a century, Carnegie Hall has been the place where renowned artists have come to perform in New York City. This tradition of excellence has made Carnegie Hall an essential part of the city's cultural fabric and the world's most famous concert hall.

The Quincy Choral Society was founded in 1981 for the purpose of bringing musical excellence to the South Shore and the world. Members sing with music in their hearts, performing diverse, professional quality programs designed to entertain, enlighten, and enrich the human spirit. The chorus regularly performs locally, has performed in music festivals in Washington, D.C., and in Europe.

Maestro John Nichols was named music director of the Quincy Choral Society in 1988. Nichols has been involved with the musical life of Greater Boston for more than 35 years as a conductor, composer, arranger, performer, adjudicator, and educator.

Virginia "Gingy" Grimes has been the accompanist for the Quincy Choral Society since 1993. Grimes received her piano accompaniment degree from Duke University and accompanies various ensembles and soloists throughout the Boston area.

Farewell Open House Cook Out For Pastor Nathan Pipho Sunday

Good Shepherd Lutheran Church, 308 West Squantum St., North Quincy, will host a Farewell Open House Cook Out for Pastor Nathan Pipho Sunday, June 21 from 4 to 8 p.m. at 40 Sealund Rd., North Quincy.

After nearly 13 years of ministry, Pastor Pipho recently announced that he will preach and preside for the final time as the congregation's pastor on Sunday, July 12 and that he will be continuing his education as a student at the John F. Kennedy School of Government at Harvard University in the Mid-Career Master in Public Administration program. In his studies he will be exploring the call to responsible Christian leadership in response to the reality of growing wealth and income inequality in the United States and around the world.

Pastor Pipho graduated from the Lutheran Theological Seminary at Philadelphia in May 2002 and was ordained in September 2002 upon accepting the Call to serve as the pastor of Good Shepherd.

In addition to the regular tasks of ministry, he was responsible for many of the humorous and inspirational messages on the church sign on the corner of West Squantum and Harvard Streets and helped lay the groundwork for Pastor Ryan Lun and the development of the Chinese outreach ministry of Good Neighbor Lutheran Church in North Quincy.

In the community, he participated in the Montclair Wollaston Neighborhood Association, was a founding member and first president of Quincycles, and served as President of the Interchurch Council of North Quincy and Wollaston. He has also held various leadership roles in the New England Synod of the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America (ELCA).

The congregation invites those attending Sunday's Open House Cook Out to celebrate Pastor Pipho's ministry by bringing donations of canned goods to support Interfaith Social Services.

For more information, call the Church Office at 617-328-8348 or email GoodShepherdQuincy@gmail.com.

Concern Over Affordable Housing, Public Space In Downtown

teresting in the downtown makes people want to go there. The buildings look beautiful. The way they're being marketed is very impressive. The way they're sized, and priced all looks like it's right on. But why are people going to move to Quincy?" Dye said.

"To me, it should be because there is an active civic life. Not just big box stores to shop in or restaurants to go to, but to have more of a downtown life. You need public space to do it."

Also speaking at Monday's hearing were several union workers who said the council should play a strong role in overseeing the development of Quincy Center. Among those union workers was Barry Keady, a business agent for Plumbers & Gasfitters Local 12.

"I would urge the council to keep their oversight of the downtown. The downtown is vital to the city, as everyone knows and to just do something, even if it's wrong, is a bad policy. A deliberate course is the way to go – build the city up deliberately," Keady said.

"If you look at Boston's downtown in the '70s, they just wanted to build and they came up with the ugliest buildings in the city of Boston. They ceded power and just built and built and built without a solid plan."

The Planning Board approved the amendment to the URDP on June 10. The council will begin reviewing the amendment next Monday, June 22, at 6:30 p.m. during a meeting of the downtown and economic growth committee.

Councillor Doug Gutro, the committee's chairman who previously asked for community meetings on the URDP amendment, said the proposal deserves a "major discussion throughout the city."

"This is a major change and I think it deserves a major discussion throughout the city. I know this body and the committee will review the risk, because there is more risk. We will review the cost, because it will be costly. And we will review the content and that will be open for discussion and debate," said Gutro, who is also running for mayor in this year's municipal election.

"But I think it's healthy and important and critical as we move forward here and try to do it in a timely and thorough way that we have a very public and transparent process and we take into consideration the input of those that testified tonight and others we hear along the way."

Council President Joseph Finn thanked those who spoke at the meeting and promised the council would vet the plan in its entirety.

"We plan to fully vet this," he said. "It's been said that this is very different – it is very different. But contained within that plan as well perhaps are the opportunities of shaping this, as it moves forward, in a positive way."

Funding for the $145 million in public improvements would come from three main sources: District Improvement Financing (DIF) bonds, general obligation (GO) bonds, and the state's Infrastructure Investment Incentive Program (I-Cubed). DIF bonds, which are paid for using new tax growth in the downtown, would account for $73 million of the needed money; that's in addition to the $37 million previously borrowed using DIF bonds. General obligation bonds totaling $46 million would cover the cost of new municipal parking garages and would be covered by parking revenue. I-Cubed money would go towards the construction of the Adams Green Park.

Under the previous agreement with Street-Works, the developer had agreed to pay for $289 million in infrastructure up front, which the city would later pay back once revenue targets were hit. The $289 million did not include $50 million for relocating Town Brook and constructing Adams Green and a new bridge near Cliveden Street; the city was obligated to undertake those.

In April, Koch announced two projects set for the Hancock Lot: Peter's O'Connell's 15-story, 122-unit luxury high-rise tower and LBC Boston's 116-room hotel. The hotel would be located at the 1500 block of Hancock Street, but the mayor indicated a small portion of the hotel may be situated on the lot.

The council would need to approve land disposition agreements for those projects if public land is used. Koch, when he announced the projects in April, said he wanted the LDAs approved this spring but they have yet to be introduced to the council.

The URDP amendment envisions two other residential projects and a city-owned parking garage on the Hancock Lot, as well as new public ways to access the developments. The plan also calls for commercial development in the vicinity of the Ross Parking Garage, as well as new city-owned parking facilities.

The amended URDP has been expanded to include the Quincy Center MBTA station, which the city plans to redevelop. The Planning Department has applied for a $20 million federal grant for that project.

One project – West of Chestnut – has already begun in the URDP district. That development, being undertaken by Quincy Mutual and Gate Residential, includes 169 apartments and 12,000 square feet of ground floor retail and is being built on privately owned land in the 1400 block of Hancock St.

Galvcon Development has unveiled plans for another project in the downtown at 1545 Hancock St. on privately owned land. The Quincy-based company plans to construct two buildings with a total of 48 condos and 8,000 square feet of retail space.

QEA Endorses Koch For Re-Election

Calling his leadership "strong, even-handed, and forward thinking," Quincy Education Association President Allison G. Cox Tuesday announced QEA's endorsement of Mayor Thomas P. Koch for re-election in this year's City election.

"With an unbridled passion for this city and for the people who live and work here, an unlimited vision of Quincy's future, a solid no-nonsense approach to government, and a genuine interest in tackling problems through collaboration, Mayor Koch has proven he is the leader who will continue to move Quincy forward to a strong, bright future," Cox said.

The 930 members of the Quincy Education Association include the PreK to 12 educators and assistant principals of the Quincy Public Schools, as well as faculty and professional support staff of Quincy College. The decision to endorse Mayor Koch was made by a unanimous vote of the QEA Executive Board.

Cox said Mayor Koch's commitment to the issues QEA members care about was an important factor in the decision, and she also pointed to a lengthy track record of positive and productive experiences in working with him these past seven years as mayor and chairman of the School Committee.

"Quite frankly, the QEA has enjoyed seven years of a highly collaborative relationship in which problems, concerns, or issues are dealt with honestly and respectfully. We don't always agree, but we begin and end every meeting with a handshake and a promise to keep the lines of communication open," Cox said.

Cox said the QEA and Mayor Koch share its goal of high quality public education, in which Quincy's children receive a first-rate classroom experience, along with ample opportunities to explore any number of academic or enrichment topics, and in which they can achieve success and grow in knowledge, skills, and confidence.

"Mayor Koch respects the tremendous work our members do in helping to foster a love of learning and love of community among our students," Cox said.

The union also highlighted Mayor Koch's commitment to the infrastructure of the Quincy Public Schools as a key aspect of its endorsements. Two state-of-the-art new schools, a vast majority funded by state grants, have opened in just the last few years and designs for a third is underway. The City has also embarked on a broader maintenance and restoration effort in existing school building, including a window and door replacement program that is also paid for primarily by state grants.

Education has remained a budgetary priority for Mayor Koch throughout his tenure, with classroom spending increasing by 22 percent since he took office. He also leveraged money outside of the City's operational budget to make substantial technology upgrades in a number of schools.

"Since 2008, when the city needed a bold, new Mayor to step up and provide inspiring leadership for Quincy, the QEA has consistently recognized Mayor Thomas P. Koch as true to his word and to his commitment to Quincy," Cox said. "We are happily endorsing Mayor Thomas P. Koch once again for Mayor of Quincy."

Changes To Stormwater Ordinances

Council Votes To Establish Revolving Account To Review, Inspect Private Stormwater Maintenance Systems; Fee Schedule

By SCOTT JACKSON

The City Council on Monday approved several amendments to the city's stormwater ordinances to help bring Quincy into compliance with potential changes to federal stormwater requirements.

The council approved the changes in a series of votes that passed by a 7-1 margin; Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee voted against the changes and Councillor Doug Gutro, an EPA employee, recused himself.

The changes approved Monday include amendments to the city's Illicit Discharge and Stormwater Connection Ordinance, the Stormwater Management and Land Disturbance Ordinance, establishing a revolving account to review and inspect private stormwater maintenance systems and setting up a fee schedule to fund the revolving account.

Public Works Commissioner Daniel Raymondi said those steps were needed because the EPA's draft Municipal Separate Storm Sewer System (MS4) permit for the city would impose stricter regulation on stormwater discharge.

"This is important work," Raymondi said. "We believe that if and when this permit is implemented within the city of Quincy we will be in compliance. This is one of those steps we feel obviously is critical and necessary in order to position us to do that."

Engineering firm Woodard & Curran was brought on by the city to help draft the proposed changes.

"Increasingly the federal government, through the EPA, is asking local communities to take on some of the burden of management of the Clean Water Act. That includes tracking, administration, enforcement and that's what is represented in these ordinances," Zach Henderson, a stormwater management specialist with the firm, explained.

"These revisions reflect both the current regulatory obligation under the MS4 permit as existing and also prepare Quincy to proactively address these items moving forward."

The Illicit Discharge and Stormwater Connection Ordinance prohibits dumping or connecting non-stormwater into the city's stormwater drainage system and requires property owners to fix illicit connections. Henderson said the only change to the ordinance made Monday night is a prohibition on sediment from construction site entering the drain system.

"If construction activities mechanically move sediment into the streets and into the storm drains, that can be construed as an illicit discharge," he said. "We've brought that in as a prohibited activity."

Exemptions to the ordinance remain in place. Those include water line and fire hydrant flushing, residential vehicle and watercraft washing, de-chlorinated swimming pool water, and landscape irrigation.

The Stormwater Management and Land Disturbance Ordinance will now require a permit from the Engineering Department for almost any new connection into the drainage system.

"The drain permit will likely be necessary for most development or redevelopment," Henderson said.

City Engineer Shawn Hardy noted his office is currently asked to review stormwater systems as part of permitting process, but doesn't have the ability to issue any orders during the process.

"Ultimately DPW is responsible for the maintenance of the system so we should have a little more say on how it happens," Hardy said.

All projects that include one or more acres of disturbed land will be required to obtain a permit. Exceptions include cemetery management, maintenance of existing landscaping, agriculture, non-drain utility construction projects, and maintenance and reconstruction of roadways. Projects that require approval from the city's Conservation Commission will also be exempt from the drain permit.

The fee for the drain permit would be $300 per change or connection. Fees for the newly created stormwater management permit are $300 for a single-family residential lot and up to $1,500 for larger projects.

McNamee opposed the changes, saying he didn't want to add to the burden on taxpayers.

"You're trying to introduce the administrative infrastructure that's going to allow us to be more efficient policemen. Guess what – why don't we just tell the EPA go pound tar?" McNamee said.

"I'm not going to vote for it. I won't put another dollar burden on any taxpayer in the city of Quincy for this kind of action. The MWRA, which we pay through the nose for, they have an industries department that goes out there and test for stuff being introduced into the collection system. Let's stop there."

Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest voiced her support for the changes, noting stormwater compliance and water quality are critical for the neighborhoods she represents.

"I'm the complete opposite on this side of the well. Stormwater compliance, flood control and water quality are critical to the Ward 1 district I represent," Laforest said. "Absolutely critical."

Laforest later added that the changes to the ordinances would be considered by FEMA when it determines Quincy's rating on the agency's Community Rating System. Through that system, property owners in the city receive a 10 percent discount on flood insurance and officials are hoping to increase that to 15 percent.

Central School Condo Plan Approved

By SCOTT JACKSON

A plan to renovate the former Central Middle School into a 46-unit condominium complex was approved by the Planning Board.

Plainville-based Edgewood Development reached an agreement to purchase the 121-year old former school at 1022 Hancock St. from the city for $3 million last summer after submitting the highest bid for the site. The company plans to preserve the building itself except for a small, one-story addition in the rear that would be demolished and replaced by a terrace overlooking the pond.

The Planning Board approved the project during its June 10 meeting. The Zoning Board of Appeals and Conservation Commission both approved the proposal in recent weeks as well.

The developer first pitched its project to the Planning Board on May 13. No vote was taken at the meeting as Edgewood was given time to revise stormwater treatment plans because of concerns over adjacent Butler's Pond. At the June 10 meeting, Mark Bartlett, the peer reviewer for the project with engineering firm Fay, Spofford & Thorndike, outlined changes made to the proposal over the previous month.

"It's a vastly better project in our view. The stormwater that's in place now has integrated with landscaping. There are five rain gardens dispersed throughout the site. There is what we call a tree box filter that is integrated into the front. All the roof runoff is being recharged whereas before it was all running off, most of it to the pond," Bartlett said.

"There is an order of magnitude reduction of stormwater going into Butler's Pond and likewise going into the city system. The city system is getting more capacity in stormwater because of these improvements. The credit goes to the applicant for working hard on that."

The Rev. Sheldon Bennett, who resides on Merrymount Road across the pond from the former school and a is member of the Friends of Butler's Pond, had raised concerns about the proposed stormwater system at the May 13 meeting while supporting the plan to renovate the building into condos. At the June 10 meeting, he commended Edgewood for those changes they made to

Officeholders Sign Up For Solar Assessments

"My wife and I were pleased to hear that our home and garage may provide a good platform for a solar energy installation," said Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin.

Four officeholders, including Coughlin, Sen. John Keenan, Mayor Thomas Koch, and School Committeewoman Anne Mahoney, have signed up for an assessment from Solarize Quincy, a state- and city-sponsored program that provides discounted solar panels to Quincy residents and businesses, but Coughlin is the first to have his property assessed.

The assessment, including satellite imaging and a site visit, determined that Coughlin "has a southern-facing roof, limited shading, and enough room on the roof" for an 18-panel system, said Brian Hession, a residential sales associate with Solar Flair, the exclusive installer for Solarize Quincy. The system would supply 82 percent of Coughlin's household electricity, according to documents provided by Hession, and with discounts and incentives, it would pay for itself in about three years and yield almost $70,000 in savings over its 25-year expected lifetime. By replacing electricity from fossil-fuel-fired generators, the system would also result in 3.8 fewer tons of carbon dioxide, a greenhouse gas, emitted into the atmosphere yearly.

In explaining his interest in solar panels, Coughlin cited the environment as well as the potential savings. "I am a supporter of alternative energy both as a resident homeowner and as a local elected official," he said, pointing out that he has supported the installation of solar panels on city property and introduced environmental laws and resolutions as a city councillor.

Rebecca McWilliams, lead volunteer with Solarize Quincy and past chair of the Quincy Climate Action Network, praised Coughlin for "showing leadership on energy and environmental issues by participating in the Solarize Quincy program and getting a free solar assessment."

Residents have until June 30 to sign up for solar panels through Solarize Quincy. The program will hold an educational event for home- and business owners on Monday, June 22 at 6:30 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington Street.

For more information or to sign up for an assessment, go to solarizequincy.weebly.com.

Planning Board OKs 21 N.Q. Apartments

By SCOTT JACKSON

The Planning Board gave the go-ahead to a developer's planned conversion of a one-floor commercial building on Hancock Street in North Quincy into a 21-unit, four-story apartment building.

Paul Adamson had proposed converting the commercial building at 133-135 Hancock St into a four-story apartment building and the Planning Board approved the project at its June 10 meeting. The project site is about a half-mile from the North Quincy MBTA station and a short distance from the Neponset Bridge.

The brick structure of the first floor of the existing building will be retained and serve as a parking garage with three floors of apartments above. Each apartment will be roughly 1,200 square feet with two bedrooms and two bathrooms and high-end appliances, according to William Keener, an attorney for the applicant.

As part of the proposal, the developer will reconstruct sidewalks adjacent to the property on Hancock, Walnut and Myrtle Streets. The curb cutouts on the latter two streets will be redesigned to comply with Americans with Disability Act standards. The developer will also work with the Department of Public Works on trees and other plantings on Hancock Street in front of the building.

The developer's initial plan included 25 parking spaces in the first floor garage, with additional space for trash and recycling storage and bike racks. The Planning Department, however, recommended the number of spaces be reduced to improve traffic flow inside the garage and provide more room for the trash and recycling storage and bike racks.

"We would not suggest any less than 21 spaces, but we think at 25 it's too tight," Planning Director Dennis Harrington said. "The applicant has promised that they would take a hard look at that."

The garage will be accessible only through Walnut Street.

The Zoning Board of Appeals will need to approve the layout of parking spaces in the building, but no zoning relief is needed for construction of the three new floors. The building as it currently stands is non-compliant with modern zoning codes; the building was constructed before zoning codes were instituted.

Steven Kosilla, a resident of abutting 14 Walnut St., told the board during a public hearing on the proposal that he believed it would need to conform to modern zoning codes, or receive zoning relief, based on his interpretation of Quincy's zoning ordinance.

"Basically you have a business use in a non-conforming component and you're bringing in the residential," he said. "So my understanding is you should comply with these requirments detailed on this table."

Among other issues, Kosilla noted the zoning ordinance established minimum setbacks for front and rear yards, which the building does not comply with. Further, he said the project would add to traffic and parking woes in the area and expressed concern about the massing of the proposal.

"We would love to see a building built here, residential coming in, but we don't want to overburden our small community," Kosilla said.

Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin noted this is the third time a developer has come forward with plans for the lot during his 14 years representing the neighborhood; another proposal was introduced before he began serving on the council. He said those three proposals failed because zoning relief was needed, adding that he was "befuddled" that similar relief wasn't needed in this instance.

"The three prior iterations of proposals for this site, the reason why they failed, I was told, was because there was zoning relief that was necessary. I'm still befuddled as to why I'm now told the only thing we need from the Zoning Board is a finding on parking," Coughlin said.

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On June 5, 2015 at approximately 8:08 a.m., Officer Robert Sweetland and other units were dispatched to Fallon Ambulance on Brook Road on a report that a female driver in a green van just threw a rock through the window of their garage door.

Upon arrival, the Officer spoke with Fallon Ambulance employees who showed the Officer a large glass window on the garage door that had been shattered. One employee said he saw a female get out of the van and walk up to the garage and then throw a rock through the window. She then ran to her van and drove off. Moments later, Fallon EMTs operating an ambulance on Hancock Street in Quincy Square reported that a mint green van operated by a female suspect drove on the wrong side of the road, pulled along side of the ambulance and threw a glass bottle out from the passenger side window of the van. The bottle smashed off the side of the ambulance, which had it's windows down, narrowly missing the EMTs. The suspect van then stayed on the wrong side of the road on Hancock Street and took a left turn onto Hannon Parkway. Officers familiar with this van from past incidents stated that the female driver may be homeless and staying at Father Bill's shelter in Quincy.

Officer Dan Clark spotted the van in the parking lot of the Citizen's Bank on Quincy Avenue. Additional Quincy Police units were dispatched to the location to assist. Officer Clark approached the van in an attempt to speak with the operator. The female operator refused to open the window or door after numerous requests. Officer William Lanergan, now on scene, attempted to talk the operator into opening the window but she refused. Concerned that she may drive away, Officer Lanergan broke the passenger window with his department issued baton and then reached inside to open the door, but the operator immediately put the vehicle into gear and drove forward in an attempt to get away. This caused a laceration to Officer Lanergan's left forearm due to the broken glass.

The vehicle then fled the parking lot and drove to Hyde Street, then to Forum Street, where she struck a marked Quincy Police cruiser in the right rear quarter panel. She then drove back into the bank parking lot and drove onto Quincy Avenue, where she drove on the wrong side of the road towards oncoming traffic. Officer Clark and Officer Lanergan were behind her with their cruiser's blue emergency lights and sirens activated. The operator of the vehicle would not stop, continuing up Quincy Avenue, crossing over the double solid yellow line numerous times. There was a large amount of traffic on both sides of Quincy Avenue.

Due to the congestion in the gas station lot, the van was boxed in by parked cars. Officer Clark pulled in behind the van to block it from taking off again. He approached the operator's window and ordered the driver to get out, but she refused. Fearing that the operator may try to forcefully drive through the cars and the gas pumps, Officer Clark breached the driver's side window with his department issued baton, reached in and opened the door.

The operator was removed from the vehicle and placed into handcuffs. Detective Ann Marie Riley started to pat down the operator for weapons when the operator spit on her. The operator, a 48 year old homeless woman was charged with, "Assault by means of a Dangerous Weapon to wit glass bottle, Malicious destruction of property over $250, Resisting Arrest, Failure to Stop for Police, Marked lanes violations, Reckless operation of a Motor Vehicle, Assault and Battery by mean of a dangerous weapon to wit motor vehicle, Assault and Battery on a Police Officer and Leaving the scene of a motor vehicle crash with property damage." Nice Work!

SCAMS: A citizen got a call from a scammer claiming he was a Police Officer, stating that his granddaughter was involved in an incident out of state and would need bail money to be released. This scammer even put a female on the phone and the victim said that the voice sounded just like his granddaughter. He was instructed to take $8,000.00 to the Bank of America and create a new account, with additional instructions to follow.

*No Police Officer is going to give you these instructions.

*Ask questions. What is my grand daughter's name? Where does she go to school, etc.?

*Call your granddaughter directly, or reach out to other family members to track her down to be sure she is safe.

*Call the Police.

DIRECT ENERGY: There have been numerous complaints to me about the door to door sales tactics of this company. Residents have said that the representatives are rude, forceful and use high pressure tactics to get you to sign over to their company. There have been complaints that the representatives just walk into your home! A search online shows similar complaints and many have stated that the rate plan is a scam. Attempts to contact Direct Energy resulted in one dead telephone line and the second number in Holden, MA. being disconnected. According to city records, this company has not applied to go door to door and does not have city I.D.s The Department of Public Utilities stated that they have had complaints against Direct Energy about their tactics, but added that they have received calls against all the door to door energy companies.

Numerous calls were made to Direct Energy and results varied from being disconnected, the line no longer in service, not being forwarded to a manager to "We can't help you – try this number." I will be following up on Direct Energy.

RECOMMENDED ACTIONS: do not open the door to strangers at any time. Inquire through your closed door what the person wants. Give the Quincy Police a call and let us check out who is going door to door and what they want.

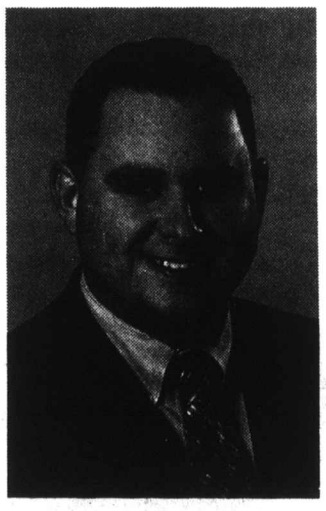
Daniel Mullin Bank Of Canton Regional Lending Manager

Daniel Mullin has been named Regional Lending Manager at Bank of Canton, working out of the bank's Quincy branch at 60 McGrath Highway.

With a decade of residential lending experience, he will provide home financing solutions to residents of Quincy and the South Shore.

"I've long admired Bank of Canton and respected its high rank among local lenders," Mullin said. "The bank has a great lending program – its combination of in-house portfolio products and correspondent lending relationships is rare. It puts a lot of different tools in my tool belt. I can offer buyers extremely competitive rates, and usually a lot of flexibility with timing and terms as well. I'm excited to be able to offer so many options."

Prior to joining Bank of Canton, Mullin worked for



DANIEL MULLIN

10 years at New England Moves Mortgage LLC, covering the Canton and Dedham area as a Senior Loan Officer. He also worked at United Guaranty.

"Dan is a strong producer and a great fit for the Bank of Canton team," said George DeMello, Senior Vice President of Residential Lending at Bank of Canton. "The bank has developed strong ties in Quincy and the surrounding area over many years, and I know that Dan is looking forward to building on those relationships. I'm confident that he'll seize this opportunity and help a lot of South Shore residents with their home financing."

A graduate of Saint Anselm College with a B.A. in Political Science, Mullin lives with his wife, Michelle, and three children in Canton. He is active with the St. John the Evangelist School in Canton, which two of his children attend.

O'Donnell Promotes Registry's Social Media

Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell reminds consumers about the various social media applications made available to them through the Registry.

"Our mission is to make important information readily available on a 24/7 basis to our consumers," O'Donnell said. "After all, just because our doors close at the end of the business day doesn't mean the Registry has to stop working. Our website www.norfolkdeeds.org is a valuable resource to review scanned images of up to 5 million land documents dating back to 1793, as well as to learn about the latest consumer protection programs."

For example, the register noted that residents can print out an application of the popular Homestead Act on the website, a law which provides a homeowner with limited protection against the forced sale of their primary residence up to $500,000, or sign-up directly on-line for its Consumer Notification System that will alert a person anytime a land document has been recorded or amended against their name in Norfolk County.

"There is valuable county real estate information that can be researched and tracked on the website based on the monthly and quarterly real estate statistical reports done by the Registry of Deeds, such as the number of mortgage discharges, homestead applications, homes sold, average prices of property sold and much, much more," O'Donnell said.

Other forms of social media utilized by the Registry of Deeds include Facebook, facebook.com/NorfolkDeeds, and Twitter, twitter.com @ NorfolkDeeds. "Both Facebook and Twitter are great ways for residents and institutional users to be kept up-to- date on Registry events and initiatives. Among events publicized via these platforms are annual office hours held in each community in Norfolk County by the Registry, computer seminars held bi-annually, and events geared specifically to real estate professionals," said Register O'Donnell.

The Registry has also filmed multiple public service announcements (PSA's) which are available on the Registry's website and Youtube. These PSA's have touched on a variety of issues such as deed scams - where a consumer pays an outrageous cost to a direct mail solicitor for a copy of their deed as compared to purchasing it at the Registry for a few dollars - and also a video on foreclosure assistance for residents who have received a Notice of Foreclose Mortgage from a lender. Videos highlighting the Registry's various philanthropic initiatives, such as its Annual Holiday Food Drive or its Suits for Success program, which helps people who are attempting to re-enter the workforce, can also be viewed.

"When it comes to hi-tech and reaching out to the public, there will be more initiatives on the way," O'Donnell said. "We hope by early Fall 2015 to make our website easier to access for users of tablets and mobile phone devices."

To learn more about these and other Registry of Deeds events and initiatives, like us at facebook.com/NorfolkDeeds or follow us on twitter.com @ NorfolkDeeds.

The Norfolk County Registry of Deeds, located at 649 High St., Dedham is the principal office for real property in Norfolk County. The Registry is a resource for homeowners, title examiners, mortgage lenders, municipalities and others with a need for secure, accurate, accessible land record information. Concludes Historic High School Career With 5th Place Finish At N.E. Track Championships

Emily Bryson's Next Step: College, Running At Brandeis

By JOE REARDON

In her defense, Emily Bryson's main focus late in this track season was to put together a strong 2 mile performance in the All-State meet a week ago at Fitchburg State University.

The race was a true classic as Bryson wrestled the lead away from indoor state champion Margie Cullen of Needham on the final lap before the Rockets' star regained first place and held off Bryson with an epic straightaway finish to win by two seconds.

For her troubles, Bryson earned a startling new personal best record of 10:43.52, more than 15 seconds faster than her previous mark. She had accomplished what she set out to do.

Bryson went into Saturday's New England Interscholastic Track Championships on the campus of Thornton Academy in Saco, ME with no expectations, despite being the second seed behind No. 1 ranked Hannah DeBalsi of Staples, CT.

Racing in hot, breezy conditions in the mid afternoon, Bryson was never able to find her rhythm and battled her way to a fifth-place finish of 11:13.24 for 3200 meters.

North Quincy head coach Geoff Hennessy said Bryson found herself in a tough spot as the race progressed. "Last week was the meet we really focused on," said Hennessy. "Emily went out at a pace that she thought was fast enough and let them get a little too far ahead. It's tough running behind like that because you're by yourself and you have to deal with the wind with no one to pace off of."

Bryson just shrugged the race off as one of those days where she didn't feel 100 percent. "It was the last race of my high school career and I was just going to go out and have fun," said Bryson. "There really wasn't as much pressure as there was last week."

Despite falling behind early, Bryson was still running a decent race, passing the mile in a respectable 5:29 while having to battle the wind. She believed a better start could have made the difference. "It wasn't the race I wanted today," Bryson said. "They definitely went out fast. The start was tough and I got shuffled to the back so I really didn't have contact with the front pack and it's hard when there's no one to pull you along. It was hard because it was such a big gap.

"The heat was definitely a factor. If I had been able to keep contact with them the first couple of laps I might have been there. It was a very tough race. It was hard having to push myself. I was so far back."

The race was in direct contrast to the All-Stat meet where she was with pack before moving up and challenging the talented Cullen. "She definitely pulled me along and I had a chance to win it," she said. "I didn't but I got a fast time. Last week was surprising. I didn't expect to get the time I got so it was really great. I was right up there trying to chase Cullen."

Even if she had felt strong at New Englands, Bryson had no illusions of challenging DeBalsi, who built a huge lead and won easily in 10:35.03. "I knew she was going to take off and do her own thing. I didn't go with her because she's just so talented. She's almost in a different league right now."

With her historic high school career now in the books, Bryson will be turning her attention to her first cross country season at Brandeis University in the fall. She plans to take a couple of weeks off before packing in 45-50 mile weeks with her twin sister Julia, who will also be attending Brandeis. She'd love to help the squad to return to the Div. 3 NCAA Championships, which it qualfied for in 2013. "We love the coach there a lot and she has a lot of experience," said Bryson. "I'm excited. Cross country is always my favorite season. It'll be interesting to go up to the 6K, but I know I'm ready."

And moving on from Hennessy, the only coach she has ever had, will be tough for Bryson. "I'm going to miss track the most because I've known Geoff since I was 5-year-old," she said. "It's definitely going to be weird moving on to a new coach. We'll definitely come back and visit and run with the team during break."

An off day at New Englands couldn't damper the huge season Quincy's Curtis Calley put together for himself this spring.

The Presidents' talent got off a soaring heave of 52-4-1/2 to finish a strong second to Fitchburg's Leonardo Ramirez in an All-State field that had nine athletes breaking the 50-foot mark. At the New England meet, the Patriot League All-Star got off a toss of 48-3-1/2 to finish 17th.

Jimmy Kennedy Run Raises $40,000 For ALS

Annual Event Draws 235 Runners, 320 Walkers

By BILL GRIFFIN

There was more than one story to the 18th annual Jimmy Kennedy Memorial Run for ALS last Saturday at Pageant Field.

First, there was what is most important. Over $40,000 was raised to benefit ALS in memory of Jimmy Kennedy who died of ALS, commonly known as Lou Gehrig's disease, in 1997 at the age of 31.

"All of the proceeds, every thing we raised today, every nickel will go to research to find a cure for ALS," said Rich Kennedy, Jimmy's brother.

Seven years before Jimmy was diagnosed with ALS, his father Chris, a former member of the Quincy school committee, died of the disease.

"We found out that it ran in families. We decided we wanted to fight back, to do something about it, so we thought of the road race," said Kennedy "When I was a kid, my father brought me to the marathon every year. I knew I'd run it someday. We were a family of runners. We met people who had ALS in their families. We formed a bond. The road race seemed like a good idea."

Some 235 runners and 320 walkers finished the race. The entire community has embraced the day and its cause, but it is also a family affair. Kennedy's daughters, Lindsey Kennedy (age 28 of Washington D.C.) and Taylor Donovan (age 20 of Charlotsville, North Carolina) enjoyed their run on the sun-spackled morning.

"It gives us a chance to stand up and do something, to get involved and I like that," said Donovan.

"It means so much to us. It's a great event, an event which draws the whole community together," said Lindsey Kennedy who has run two Boston Marathons and countless five-milers.

It is also a day of memories.

"I remember my uncle Jimmy had a lake house in Salem, New Hampshire," said Lindsey Kennedy. "He used to throw me the ball. I was at bat. One in a awhile, he'd lob one just to see if I could hit it. I'm a Kennedy. I crushed it."

Rich Kennedy loves the route. For the first 10 years of the event, it was held at the stadium. The start was moved to Pageant Field and the route became one which showed better the feel and the goodwill of the city.

"It's more Quincy now. The runners see more of Quincy and that's good," said Kennedy.

The runners started down the driveway from Pageant Field. They took a right. They ran up the artery to Central Middle School. They turned right and wove their way through the tree-lined streets of Wollaston. People and their children walked from their yards to cheer.

They turned onto the boulevard and the beach where there was a bit a breeze. A bit. Mostly, there was sun and more sun.

"It was hot," smiled Lindsey Kennedy. "Little kids a came out and cheered. That helped. But it was hot."

Bagpipes played as the runners made their way through the sun. Flags rippled weakly along the edge of the water. The smell of salt air filtered through the air. The sky tumbled between deep blue and mounds of white. It was a Quincy day for a Quincy race.

The runners turned right to the welcome relief of the shade and trees of Furnace Brook Parkway and made their way back to Pageant for drinks and fun and family and good friends.

Bobbi Gibb was the starter for the race. She is 72 years old. She was the first woman to finish the Boston Marathon. As healthy young women ran easily and freely though the streets of the city, it was impossible to wonder if they knew that in Gibbs' time, they would not have been allowed to run the race.

"Battling ALS is a cause that Bobbi has made near and dear to her heart. She has done so much for ALS over the years," said Kennedy

Gibb's time was 1966. It was thought that women were physiologically incapable of running over 1 ½ miles. Some felt they would "expire." Not only couldn't women handle a marathon, they couldn't run a five-miler. Saturday, Bobbi Gibb started a race she would have been forbidden to run in 50 years ago.

"That seems like 150 years ago, not 50 years ago," said Taylor Davenport.

There were no running shoes made for women because women had no need for them. Gibbs trained in nursing shoes. She ran around her home in Massachusetts and he she ran back and forth to work. Then she got serious. She put her dog in a Volkswagen bus and headed west.

She ran along the Mississippi, over the Great Plains, through the Rocky Mountains to the Pacific Ocean. She ran and drove across the country. She could run 40 miles in a day. Wearing nursing shoes.

She submitted an application to the BAA. It was rejected. She was not physiologically prepared. She might expire. On race day in April 1966, her mother drove her to the starting line in Hopkinton.

She wore a great sweatshirt over a bathing suit. She hid in a crowd of men who were running the race. She ran in good form, but she grew warm. She wanted

Bill Dunn Jr. Memorial Race June 27

The Bill Dunn Jr. Memorial Road Race will be held Saturday, June 27 in Houghs Neck.

The event is a great time for friends and family of Bill Dunn Jr. to gather in honor of his life and share memories with each other. Registration for the annual event will begin at 7 a.m. at the St. Thomas Aquinas Hall on Darrow Street in Quincy. Those interested can participate in a 5-mile run or 2-mile walk beginning at 9 a.m.

Prizes will be awarded for 1st Place Male/Female Runner and 1st Houghs Neck Resident Male/Female Runner. The first 300 people to register will receive a free race T-shirt.

Proceeds from the event benefit the Bill Dunn Jr. Memorial Scholarship which has provided scholarships to Quincy High School students, donations to Children's Hospital, Manets Youth Football and other local organizations.

The registration fee is $30 for runners; however for those who sign up before June 10th, the registration fee is $25.

The registration fee is $20 for walkers prior to race day and the day of race. Registration forms are available on line at www.RememberB.com and can be mailed to: Bill Dunn Jr. Memorial Road Race, 105 Edgewater Dr., Quincy, MA 02169.

You can also register online at www.active.com or www.coolrunning.com. For more information contact Margaret Dunn at 617-471-9075.

Morrisette Starts Season With Bats Ablazing

25 Runs, 36 Hits In First Two Games

By BILL GRIFFIN

They can hit.

Morrisette can do much more than that, but they surely do hit. In Post 294's first two games, they put up 25 runs, 36 hits, a pair of impressive victories and they had opposing outfielders chasing long fly balls the way little children chase jet planes.

Catcher Andrew Jaehnig had five hits, including a triple and a double, drove in four runs and scored two as defending Zone 6 East champ Morrisette pounded out 26 hits in six innings – honest, it's true – en route to an 18-6 victory over Holbrook in its home opener at Adams Field Sunday night.

In other action last week, Josh Helfrich, who hit safely in his first six at-bats of the season, had four hits and three RBI to back the pitching of Dave Suslowicz as Morrisette rolled past Weymouth, 7-1.

"With the way last year ended, with getting shut out in the playoffs, our focus has been on hitting," said coach Steve Maze whose team finished 18-2 last season. "It was a great start with a lot of hitting. In the past, we might have been more patient. This year, if we a see a pitch we like, we're going to go after it."

Jaehnig made his decision to return for his final legion season late in the spring, and it could make all the difference for Morrisette. He made the all-rookie team at Assumption College in the tough Northeast 10 Conference. He is a powerful presence in the middle of the linuep. Most teams simply do not pitch to him. He eliminates the running game with his arm. He receives the ball flawlessly, and he knows and handles well his pitching staff.

And Sunday night against Holbrook he may have hit the longest single in the history of the world. With runners on first and second in the third, he lofted a moonshot to dead center. The runners had to hold in case the ball was caught. The only way the ball was going to be caught was if the center fielder climbed a tree. It fell safely. In most parks with a fence in the same county, it's home run. At Adams, it was a single.

"Andrew is a game-changer behind the plate and and at bat. He's the difference between making the playoffs and advancing in the playoffs," said Maze.

Holbrook is a decent team who entered with a 2-0 record. Seven of Morrisette's first nine batters hit safely. By the third inning, Morrisette had 13 hits and everybody in the lineup with exception of Nick Valencenti had hit safely. Valencenti had a sacrifice fly. In the Weymouth game, eight of nine starters had a hit. Up and down the lineup, with nine returning veterans starting, Morrisette hits the ball hard.

"We may not be able to bunt and play small ball like some teams, but I feel every one we put up there has the potential to hit a double," said Maze.

Let the count begin.

Troy Shepherd had four hits, a walk, scored four runs and had an RBI. Bobby Salvucci had four hits, two RBI, and two runs scored. Robbie Munroe added two singles, a triple, scored twice and had an RBI while Eddie Riley had a double, two singles, scored twice and drove in two runs.

There' more. Helfrich and Aaron Clancy each had a single, a triple and three RBI. Tyler Beach had double, single, an RBI and scored twice. Joe Brady added a double and scored a run. It was 5-0 after one, 8-0 after two, 10-0 after three 13-0 after four and 17-0 after five. It was a show.

"I like the balance in both games," said Maze.

And there was more than hitting. Righty Kenny Sorensen went six innings for the win, giving seven hits, two runs, while striking out four and walking one. He is a fascinating story. He starred for Quincy High and the legion a year ago. He didn't pitch this year at Eastern Nazarene. It has been a year between starts. For a pitcher, that is a lifetime.

He is a pitcher who relies on touch, control and intelligence. He must be just right. His curveball was his out pitch against Holbrook. As he blends in his other pitches and tosses in all those baffling arm angles, he could be a huge factor for Post 294.

"We wanted five innings and Kenny gave us six which was a bonus. What he's doing is not easy. He has to get the right spin and rotation back on his ball. I liked his curveball tonight," said Maze.

Munroe is another story to watch. Last year he was the best pure hitter in the Patriot League and crushed the ball for the legion. He didn't play this spring and is just starting to find his stroke again. He hit three frozen ropes against Holbrook. Put him in the middle of the lineup with Jaehnig, Clancy and Helfrich behind Beach and Shepherd setting the table, and the legion will an offense which will challenge most pitching.

"It will take time with Robbie, but you can see him starting to come around. If he does, we could have quite a lineup," said Maze.

Morrisette made one harmless error. Beach made a couple of difficult plays at short. He and Shepherd make quite a left side of the infield. The defense was more steady than spectacular which is exactly what Maze wants.

"We want 21 routine outs. Just make the basic plays and we'll be OK," he said.

Suslowicz went six innings against Weymouth giving no earned runs, five hits while striking out three and walking one. Morrisette walked a total of two batters in its first two games. Valencenti had two hits and stole a base.

"Suslowicz not only throws strikes, he throws strikes with all three pitches," said Maze.

Morrisette hosts Cohasset in a doubleheader Saturday with the first game starting at 3:30 p.m.

U.S. Figure Skating Association Honors QHS Senior Nicole Lee

Nicole Lee, a 2015 graduate of Quincy High School, was recently honored by the U.S. Figure Skating Association with a Platinum Level certificate of success.

The certificate represents the highest possible honor a high school figure skater can achieve. The honor is in recognition of Nicole's achievement and dedication to the sport of figure skating as well as her academic success during high school.

During her career, Nicole competed in many national and international championships, including a prestigious international event in Paris.

In addition to being a competitive figure skater, Nicole is also a varsity Lacrosse player at Quincy High. She played the attack position and served as a team captain this past season.

She will attend Fitchburg State University in the fall and play lacrosse for FSU in spring 2016.

13 Graduate Bridgewater State University

Thirteen Quincy residents recently earned degrees from Bridgewater State University.

They are:

Kathleen Renee Arnold, Lauren F. Ayers, Jennifer A. Berfield, Elizabeth Emily Bloomer, Kathleen Brennan, Leah C. Callahan, Megan L. Ciesluk, Catherine A. Connolly, Katelyn Marion Deetz, Zachary W. Ennis, Dawn M. McCauley, Kristen Mcauliffe and Tara M. Whooley.

Kennedy Run Raises $40,000 For ALS to take sweatshirt off, but she was afraid she would be identified as a woman by those who thought she might expire.

Her fellow runners assured her that they would shield her. She took off the sweatshirt. There was a real live woman running and everyone could see her. Word spread along the route. People in Ashland phoned people in Natick. People in Natick phoned people in Newton. A woman was in the race. The alley at Wellesley College exploded in cheers when she passed by.

She ran in boys sneakers. Her feet were covered in blisters by the 20-mile mark. She finished in 3:21.40 ahead of two-thirds of the official 415 entrants. In one afternoon, she had run a race and she had changed the world. She was 23 years old.

"It's incredible when you think about it," said Lindsey Kennedy. "She is a hero to so many people. She made so many things possible for all of us. She was a pioneer who changed gender inequality, and she is one of the reasons so many of us are running today."

"I like to think I could do what she did, but it would have been hard to to bring myself to do it with the pressure of being the first one. I would have had my family with me for support and that would have helped. What she did was amazing," said Taylor Donovan.

Women became sanctioned runners in 1972. On the 100th anniversary of the marathon in 1996, Gibb's victories in 1966, 1967, and 1968 were recognized. Gibb received a medal for each victory. She ran five Boston Marathons.

She made her way to Quincy Saturday to help those with ALS. There is a picture online of Gibbs standing on the marathon finish line the year after the bombings. She has her hands on her hips, and she stares ahead with not a small measure of defiance. Part of the stripe which runs across Boylston Street belongs to her and nobody can ever take it away.

"There was a spot on that finish line that was all hers," said Rich Kennedy who has run 30 Boston Marathons. "She was saying you can come after us, but we're not giving in and we're coming back. That's like the battle against ALS. We keep coming back That's the same spirit Bobbi brought today to this fight against ALS."

VOICE FOR HEALTH

AN OVERALL APPROACH

In about 80 percent of cases, chronic back pain is "non-specific" and cannot be traced to a specific injury. It pays, therefore, to take a close look at lifestyle habits as part of a more holistic approach to treating chronic back pain. In this regard, poor bedtime habits may be culprits. Unfortunately, many people sleep with their cellphones near their beds, which can break sleep cycles. According to one Norwegian study, men and women with no previous back problems developed chronic neck, back, and/or shoulder pain as their trouble sleeping increased; however, physical exercise and weight control helped lower their pain. The chiropractor can help identify lifestyle factors that may be the cause of chronic back pain.

The practice of chiropractic focuses on the relationship between structure and function of the spine and how that relationship affects the preservation and restoration of health. At FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, it is our personal care that enables us to provide the best possible treatment for our patients. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy. Please call 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment. We offer computerized spinal scans. We are able to adjust patients sitting, standing, or lying down to accommodate any level of discomfort. If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

P.S. One theory has it that poor sleep may induce low-level systemic inflammation, which contributes to sensitizing the pain receptor system.

Fallon Files Grievance, Koch Sticking With Brewster

By SCOTT JACKSON

The mayor is standing by his decision to award the city's ambulance contract to a Boston-based company after Quincy's longtime ambulance service provider filed a grievance to protest that decision.

Mayor Thomas Koch on June 9 announced Brewster Ambulance had been awarded a five-year contract to serve as the city's EMS provider, beginning July 1. Brewster beat out two other companies who bid for the contract: Fallon Ambulance, the Quincy-based company that had been the city's EMS provider since 1997, and Action Ambulance of Waltham. Koch said his decision was based on the recommendation made by a committee of health and public safety officials tasked with reviewing the bids.

The following day, a Fallon official said the company would file a grievance with the city over the decision to award the contract to Brewster. On Monday, a spokesman for Koch defended the selection process and said the mayor will stick with his decision to award Brewster the contract.

"It's totally understandable and expected that Fallon would disagree with the committee's recommendations. But that doesn't change the fact that the committee's recommendation was based entirely on what was included in the proposals – not a highly selective postgame analysis of what the proposals would've, could've and should've said and how they should've been interpreted," mayoral spokesman Chris Walker said.

"Mayor Koch is thrilled that the residents of Quincy are going to see all new ambulances, more than twice the amount of coverage, new technology and a very innovative outreach program. This is the first time in almost 20 years that EMS was bid in the competitive market, something that doesn't happen in many places because the law doesn't require it and the result was an open, transparent, and fair process.

"The mayor's single goal in this exercise was to provide the best possible emergency response for our residents, and the committee reached the conclusion that Brewster's proposal was superior. He has no intention of reversing that recommendation."

Patrick "Sean" Tyler, the president of Fallon Emergency Medical Services, Inc., and executive vice president and COO of Fallon Ambulance Service, on June 9 said he was "bewildered and confused" by Quincy's choice and would file a grievance with the city.

"Fallon Ambulance Service is bewildered and confused by this seemingly opaque action. The reasons for displacing Fallon, an organization with a 93-year history of continuous operations with 18 years of dedicated ambulance service to the city of Quincy with a company that only has seven years of continuous operations and zero years of experience in the city of Quincy are inconsistent at best," Tyler said in a statement.

"The memo issued by the city's purchasing agent detailing said reasons does not align with the proposal Fallon put forth. Specifically, based on this memo and the details of our proposal, Fallon is ostensibly the better choice for the city. Due to these inconsistencies, Fallon is filing a grievance with the purchasing agent and is seeking a meeting with the mayor to review these irregularities."

In his June 9 announcement, Koch cited additional resources, a community outreach program, new technology and lower private-payer costs for ambulance trips outlined in Brewster's proposal among the reasons why the Boston-based company was chosen by the committee.

Under the city's current EMS contract, Fallon has two advanced life support (ALS) ambulances and one basic life support (BLS) ambulance in the city 24 hours a day. The mayor said Brewster's bid called for five ALS ambulances and two BLS ones; the company's bid was the only one to include a fifth ALS ambulance.

Brewster plans to implement its "Smart 911" program for Quincy residents at no charge, according to Koch. The program allows residents to sign-up for the program and provide basic medical information first responders will see when they are dispatched to an address.

The committee also cited Brewster's plans for upgraded technology in ambulances, communications, training for city first responders, and translation services as among the other factors in recommending Brewster, the mayor said.

The company's contract runs for five years, with two two-year options to renew it. The city does not pay for emergency ambulance service. Costs are passed on to insurance companies and patients. The committee found that Brewster offered the most beneficial rate package for customers, who are either private-payer or pay a deductible to their insurance, according to Koch.

The eight-member committee tasked with reviewing the three bids included Fire Chief Joseph Barron, Deputy Chief Joseph Jackson and Capt. Richard Bryan; Police Chief Paul Keenan, Capt. Anthony DiBona and Sgt. Greg Goyette; city Health Commissioner Drew Scheele; and Mary Jo Brogna, the associate chief nurse at Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center.

Mark Brewster, the CEO of Brewster Ambulance, said his company would have to purchase six new ambulances and hire 40 EMTs and other personnel before the contract came into effect; qualified Fallon paramedics, he added, would be offered jobs with Brewster. The company also plans to operate three garages in the city; Brewster had operated a garage on Washington Street in Quincy Point even prior to being awarded the EMS contract.

Brewster was awarded Braintree's ambulance contract last fall and will begin serving as Brockton's provider on July 1.

"I want to take the opportunity to commend the applicant for working diligently with the Planning Department and the city consultant – Fay, Spofford & Thorndike – to make significant improvements over and above what might be minimally required by regulations to the stormwater management systems," Bennett said, adding the steps taken were a "major improvement and go a long way towards addressing our original concerns we had set forth...recharging the groundwater with most of the stormwater runoff will certainly benefit the pond."

Bennett did express concerns over issues he said were not addressed. Outfall pipes into Butler's Pond, for instance, should be designed to minimize their appearance and new catch basins on Butler Road should be designed according to best environmental management practices.

Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest said the developer has committed to interpretive signage, benches and other public amenities for the pond, as had been requested by the Friends of Butler's Pond.

The parking lot on site in front of the building will be able to accommodate 85 vehicles. The lot will be lowered by two feet and plantings placed along Hancock Street to stop vehicles in the lot from shining headlights onto passing traffic.

The Central project is one of three residential developments in a quarter-mile stretch of Hancock Street on the northern boundary of Quincy Center. The largest of the three is a 53-unit development at the site of the former Temple Beth El at 1003 Hancock St. The other is the planned conversion of a commercial building at 10 Merrymount Rd. into 23 townhouse condo units. Boston Property Development, headquartered on Greenleaf Street in Quincy, is the developer behind both those projects.

"If there is a reason why they don't today, I'm happy to be educated on that."

Coughlin later called the current building an "eyesore" and said he would be supportive of rehabilitating it.

"I am very supportive of rehabilitating this site. I think we just need to address some of the neighborhood concerns vis-a-vis parking and traffic and I think there is a way to do that," Coughlin said. "I think through this process, the planning process and if there is some relief that's necessary from the Zoning Board as well, that we can make this a good project for that location."

James Sullivan, who has run a business at 151 Hancock St. since 1968, spoke in support of the project.

"The neighborhood is a blight, let's face it. It's been a blight for years and it's the entrance to Quincy. It should be absolutely impressive when you come over that bridge; you should see something quite handsome there. This will look quite handsome there," Sullivan said.

"The argument about traffic is perpetual; we're going to be talking about this for years. There is more and more cars registered everyday in all the municipalities in the state. There is nothing we can do about traffic population and there is no reason to take an opportunity like this and to dismiss it."

The Planning Department, Harrington said, supported the project. On the issue of zoning, he noted the Adamson's plan entails adding three stories to the current building, which he said was different from previous proposals. The building on site was also built 14 years before zoning codes were introduced.

"This is a proposal before you to add three stories to the existing building, which is wholly different than the earlier proposals," Harrington said. "The gentlemen made a long argument about dimensional requirements. Those are wonderful requirements for all new buildings. For a building built in 1924, before zoning came into the city of Quincy or into Massachusetts in 1938, it's a little ridiculous to try to impose 2015 requirments on it."

Board Chairman William Geary said the project would neither add to nor subtract from traffic problems in the city. The proposed development, he added, could jumpstart the process of improving the surrounding neighborhood.

"As long-term Quincy residents we've always struggled with the traffic, as Mr. Sullivan in his testimony said. That has been a problem since I have lived in Quincy – for nearly 50 years – and so I don't see that being either abated in the near term or exacerbated by the addition of 21 vehicles in this new complex that will hopefully provide some critical mass for the revitalization of the gateway to Quincy," Geary said.

"It is blighted and I think we have an opportunity to start the process of revitalizing that critical entrance to the city."

2-Alarm Fire Causes $200,000 Damage To NQ Apartment

By SCOTT JACKSON

Quincy firefighters were able to extinguish a two-alarm fire at a North Quincy apartment building last Friday after ordering residents to evacuate the building.

The fire in a fourth floor apartment at the Hamilton Bay apartment complex, 185 Quincy Shore Drive, was reported shortly before 10 a.m. June 12. Five engine companies and all three of the city's ladders reported to the scene and began to evacuate residents out of the building's fourth and fifth floors.

The first companies on scene, Ladder 5 and Engine 2 from the North Quincy firehouse, attacked the fire while the remaining companies evacuated residents and checked to make sure the fire had not spread to additional apartments, according to Deputy Fire Chief Jack Cadegan.

Firefighters put the fire out within 15 minutes, at which point only the fourth floor had been fully evacuated. None of the building's residents reported injuries from the fire; Cadegan said the resident of the fourth floor apartment was not home at the time. One firefighter complained of back pain but remained on scene and did not require treatment.

Fire and smoke damage was limited to the fourth floor unit where the fire began, Cadegan said, and water damage was reported on the floor below. Cadegan estimated the fire caused more than $200,000 in damage.

The cause of the fire is under investigation. Fire officials believe it may have started on a large sofa in the fourth floor apartment.

'YOU Define Who You Are No Matter Where You Go'

NQHS Valedictorian Deanna Leung's Message

By JOE REARDON

Addressing North Quincy High School's 82nd graduating class on a perfect, breezy evening June 8, Valedictorian Deanna Leung shared her initital disappointment of being accepted to just one of the eight colleges she applied to. But just as quickly, Leung said that was not nearly enough to keep her from realizing the dreams she has for her life.

"But after I let the shock and sadness subside, I knew there was no way I was going to hold myself back because a school told me I wasn't good enough for them," said the Bentley College-bound Leung during her moving speech at Veterans Memorial Stadium. "I realized I was good enough and I didn't need an acceptance letter to tell me my worth. The truth is, where you go does not define who you are. YOU define who you are no matter where you go. So I may not have been able to choose my college after all; but within what I perceived as zero degrees of freedom there was actually an infinite degree of options."

Leung admitted she was numbed by the rejection notices she received earlier this spring that ranged from "This year we had a record breaking number of applications" to "Once again we are sorry that we cannot offer you admission."

"In April I felt like I was left with zero degrees of freedom," said Leung. "As class valedictorian I was so embarrassed. I did not want to face my peers, my parents, my teachers, not even myself. I had spent all of these past years working for those moments when I would see congratulations in big bold letters."

Leung told the graduates that they had to find their passion for learning and that could only begin with a "predetermined point."

"It's like an unsharpened pencil hiding its potential to write," said Leung. "There's no point to it until you take the initiative to sharpen it and then you unleash and enormous capacity of potential to write whatever you want to write. And like life sometimes, it gets weary as the pencil is overused but if you want to keep at it, you have to take the time to re-sharpen the pencil. Don't throw away opportunities like deciding not to write anymore just because your pencil is dull. You have been given a chance to live your life and although not every little thing will work out as you want it to, at least you have the chance to go find more opportunities. Write until there is no more pencil left to write with and never look back and regret what you wrote. This graduation

Valedictorian Kun Yi Li's Message To Fellow QHS Graduates:

'Classes Prepared Us To Embark On Our Life's Path On Our Own'

By JOE REARDON

High school gives students an array of opportunities that can help them find their true passion to follow in life.

That was one of the themes Valedictorian Kun Yi Li addressed to the Quincy High Class of 2015 last Wednesday evening during graduation exercises at Veterans' Memorial Stadium.

Speaking to the graduates sporting blue and white robes, and an overflowing crowd on a warm evening in picture-perfect conditions, Li shared with her classmates how intrigued and fascinated she was by the possible applications of computational biology at a scholars program at Northeastern University.

"Even though these self-defining moments did not happen within the walls of Quincy High, they would not have been possible if I didn't discover the opportunities through the school," said Li. "The real essence of high school cannot be contained in what happens during school hours. Classes provide us with the knowledge that we can hopefully employ in realistic situations in the future and teachers act as the packagers and deliverers of that information.

"We have the choice to absorb that information and use it to advance ourselves. However, the classes themselves do not necessarily guide us to the path that we have been searching for our entire lives; they prepare us to embark on that process on our own."

Li spoke of how much she and her classmates have changed over the course of four years. "Four years is almost a quarter of our entire lives so far and we all have changed so much over this period of time that we cannot imagine being our reckless younger selves again," she said. "I have accumulated so many invaluable memories during my stay at Quincy High that I wish I had kept a diary so I would never forget all the little things that happened and could laugh at how naive I was years from now."

Li went on to remind the graduating class that it may not find its true passion right away and it must be careful to explore all avenues life has to offer. "The harsh reality is that not everyone will find what they are looking for in their college classes," she said. "It is often in internships and other programs people get involved in through their schools that they decide on what they want to do for the rest of their lives.

"In the upcoming years, fully utilize the resources and opportunities that are available around you. The perpetuity of being undecided can be unsettling, but don't focus so narrowly on finding the one destination that you overlook all the possible paths that you is only a small chapter in our lives but I truly believe every senior here is capable of writing a best-selling novel and I will be waiting to hear all about it."

Leung closed by reminding her classmates that they don't have to "tackle the world alone."

"Everything I did, I wanted to do alone, my way, with no interference," she said. "It was as if I was looking through a key hole - small and narrow. The n some people came along and stuck a key in the hole and at the time I would get annoyed thinking they were in my way. But then they opened the door and let me see more, things I never would have seen looking through the key hole alone. So I want to give thanks to these people, my family, my friends, and my teachers for persisting with me and opening the door even when I tried slamming it shut. Everyone here should strive to be that type of person no matter where the future takes you. Always try to be someone else's key.

"So hopefully as we all take this big step forward, we remember the small things. Be grateful for what you have because that is what is given to you. Work hard for what you do not have because that is what you want. Learn from the past, live in the present, and look towards the future."

Principal Robert Shaw told the graduates that they will help "shape and define" the world and give others the tools to do the same through their talent and achievements.

"Now, like the 81 graduating classes before you, you have to keep it going," said Shaw.

Class President Michael Mullaney said the graduates had circled June 8 on their calendars long ago and that the day is more than just earning a diploma, but ending a journey that began when they were freshmen back in September 2011. "Today we celebrate every day between that first day and receiving a diploma today."

Mullaney recognized the wide range of talent in the class and its "daunting achievements" in academics, arts and athletics. "Twin can take. Opportunities are always there for those who take the initiative to look for them."

Li had one final message for her classmates. "Finally, thank you, fellow classmates for supporting each other for the past four years," she said. "Even though we may be parting ways now, we are all in this together."

Quincy High Principal Lawrence Taglieri emphasized several of the class' accomplishments including 80 students who received the Abigail Adams Scholarships and 55 who were members of the National Honor Society, the Skills USA students who competed within their technical majors, students earning state awards in technical math, criminal justice and parliamentary procedure and the 175 students in advanced programs and 85% who earned honor roll status, as well as the respect and responsibility they demonstrated in their four years.

Taglieri congratulated the robotics team and its excellence in engineering award it copped at the Northeastern University district event, as well as the History Bowl Team that competed in Washington D.C. The class also formed a high school Green Team that worked in conjunction with the Quincy Planning Department to promote environmental literacy and to reduce the carbon footprint. The class put in over 15,000 community service hours that included tutoring elementary school students and assisting the elderly. They also banded together to help fight hunger and support cancer research. Groups like SADD and the student council also thrived.

"It's really an amazing group," said Taglieri. "The overriding thing about this class is the culture and climate they've created at the school. The Class of 2015 really immersed themselves in what Quincy High School had to offer. They made this school a home. Their quest for knowledge extended beyond the school day.

"Class of 2015 you are truly remarkable. You are remarkable for your friendships and comraderie, remarkable for your academic achievements and talents, remarkable for your leadership and pride," said Taglieri. "There's no 'what ifs' with your class. You immersed yourself in everything Quincy High School has to offer and added to it. You have no regrets and you have left your impact on the history of Quincy High School."

Taglieri also recognized the school employees who were retiring including Marylou Curran (cafeteria), Jane Southwick (foreign language), Donna Sullivan (security), Lisa Tran (attendance) and Lorraine Walsh (fashion technology).

runners made track and cross country history," Mullaney said, referring to National Honor Society members Emily and Julia Bryson, just two of the graduates who acheived through hard work and tenaciousness.

Socially, too, the class has already begun to "better our society" by saving 144 lives with a blood drive. In closing, Mullaney shared a Japanese proverb that graduates could turn to in their lives. "Fall down seven times and get up eight," he said. "The whirlwind that has been our lives in high school has not been easy but we persevered."

Mayor Thomas Koch congratulated the graduates and said "It is an honor and pleasure to bring the greetings of the City of Quincy to you," and shared a famous saying from Mother Teresa.

"People are often unreasonable, illogical and self-centered; Forgive them anyway," said Koch. "If you are kind, people may accuse you of selfish ulterior motives; Be kind anyway.

"If you are successful, you will win some false friends and true enemies; Succeed anyway. If you are honest and frank, people may cheat you; Be honest anyway.

"What you spend years building, someone could destroy overnight; Build anyway. If you find serenity and happiness, they may be jealous; Be happy anyway.

"The good you do today, people will often forget tomorrow; Do good anyway. Give the world the best you have, and it may never be enough; Give the world the best you've got anyway."

Quincy Public Schools Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro reminded the graduates to dream high because nothing is impossible and to sustain their successful work ethic.

"You've worked so hard and deserve your place here this evening," said DeCristofaro.

Point Webster Middle School Got The Point; They'd Rather Drink Smoothies!

By BARBARA E. FENBY
Health Teacher at Point Webster Middle School

According to the 2011 Massachusetts Public Health Department's Youth Behavior Risk Survey 92 percent of middle school students in Massachusetts are alcohol free.

Point Webster Middle School (PWMS) students got the Point and would rather drink smoothies! Grades 5-8 are learning about alcohol, tobacco and other drugs (ATOD) prevention. And these skills are being taught by students! Select eighth grade peer advocates promoted the other following statistics: 97 percent of students do not do other drugs; we'd rather play sports, 96 percent of middle school students in Massachusetts are marijuana free; we'd rather be planking!

Substance Abuse Prevention grants provided a creative avenue for the students to receive training. PWMS was the fortunate recipient of the Beth Israel Deaconess (BID) – Milton Hospital and the Greater Boston Chapter on Alcoholism (GBCA) grants, both addressing substance abuse prevention. These grants breathed life into the school's comprehensive health curriculum.

PWMS kick-off, funded by GBCA, was a play performed by the improbable Players (IP), "End of the Line!" followed by smaller discussion break-out groups. The IP messages were authentic and powerful because the actors are in recovery from ATOD.

The BID-Milton Hospital mini-grant provided an IP actor, Dennis Staroselsky, to return as an "Artist in Residence." Staroselsky encouraged eighth grade peer advocates to author and perform in an original play for their classmates.

There were three scenes from various genres: A "Frozen" scene inspired by the hit Disney movie in which Elsa and Anna, both decided to make a pact together to get help for their substance abuse problems, a "Daily Risk" game show which depicted the fact that a shot of hard liquor, a five ounce glass of wine and a twelve ounce bottle of beer all contain the same amount of alcohol and a "Mickey Mouse" clubhouse scene in which Mickey taught Goofy and Pete refusal skills. Eighty-six percent of the students in the audience reported that the peer advocates performances were awesome or good. They also said the scenes were informative, a fun way to learn and couldn't wait to be in the scenes when they were in eighth grade.

The grant also provided funding for PWMS to view Camfel Production's three screen multi-media, character- building message video, "Quest for Respect." The students loved the presentation; it contained current excerpts from television, movies and songs relevant to their world.

Additional resources enabled the students to sign a drug-free pledge, participate in planking contests and drink smoothies. All eighth grade parents/guardians received a resource booklet entitled "Open Your Eyes." In addition, the peer advocates designed t-shirts continuing the positive social norms campaign regarding the statistics described in paragraph one.

At PWMS, peer advocates are spotted sporting black t-shirts displaying a green PWMS compass on the front with the word "Point" circling both cuffs; proudly promoting one of the three positive social norms statistics on the back. Peer Advocates not only get the Point, they teach their peers the Point! "Peers teaching Peers" is truly becoming a valuable and effective prevention tool for our schools and community!

John M. Venna, 83

A funeral Mass for John M. Venna, 83, of Weymouth and formerly Quincy was celebrated Monday in St. John the Baptist Church, Quincy.

Mr. Venna died peacefully June 9 at home surrounded by his loving family.

He was born in Quincy, raised and educated in Quincy schools and was a graduate of Quincy High School, Class of 1950. He was also a graduate of Northeastern University. He had lived in Weymouth for ten years and previously in Quincy.

Mr. Venna was the former owner and operator of NU Security in Quincy for many years. He began his career as an assistant manager for the former Lincoln Stores in Quincy during which time, while travelling for the company, he met his future wife, Marion, in Newport, R.I. He later worked as a sales representative for the Grossman Company and then for the Ahern Corporation in Rhode Island. He had been retired for many years.

Mr. Venna was proud to have served in the U.S. Army during the Korean War. He was an avid, lifelong football fan. He was an outstanding former player at Quincy High School, Northeastern University and in the U.S. Army and was offered a tryout with the former Baltimore Colts. Over the years, he became an impassioned USC football fan and enjoyed travelling to many games and stadiums throughout the country.

Mr. Venna loved being with his family and friends and was well-known for his humor and teasing.

Beloved husband of 54 years of Marion E. (Alvernaz) Venna. Devoted father of Patricia A. Venna of Weymouth, Michael F. Venna and his wife Colleen of Halifax. Loving grandfather of John and Annabella. Cherished son of the late Michael E. and Olga (DiBona) Venna. Survived by many nieces and nephews and his buddy Charlie.

Funeral arrangements were made by Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals, 1 Independence Ave., Quincy.

Interment with Military Honors at Blue Hill Cemetery, Braintree.

Memorial donations may be made to Celtic Angels, Inc., 231 Washington St., Weymouth, MA 02188.

Patricia A. Wirtz

Services for Patricia A. "Be-Doll" (O'Neill) Wirtz, 66, of Quincy were privately held.

Mrs. Wirtz died June 8.

She was a loving, devoted woman who took extreme pride in caring for her home and her family. One of her greatest joys was cooking meals for those she loved. Mrs. Wirtz had a passion for music that she often shared with her family. She will be remembered for her infectious sense of humor and her ability to make everyone around her laugh. Mrs. Wirtz will be sadly missed by all those who had the pleasure of knowing her.

Beloved wife of George J. Wirtz of Quincy. Devoted mother of John Downey and his girlfriend Alysia Roberts of Weymouth. Daughter of the late William "Brother" and Gertrude "Sis" (Kerrigan) O'Neill. Caring sister of Peter O'Neill, Esq. of Quincy, Ellie Matranga of Weymouth, Michael O'Neill and his wife Debra of Weymouth, Christina O'Neill of Brockton and the late Paul O'Neill, William O'Neill, Nancy Duff, Evelyn Walsh and Brian O'Neill. Loving grandmother to Tommy and Ryan Wirtz and Jackson Halpin. Caring aunt of Lisa Campbell, Jean, Jacquelyn and Elizabeth Lanahan and many other nieces and nephews.

PATRICIA A. WIRTZ

Funeral arrangements were made by Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to the Home For Little Wanderers at 10 Guest St., Boston MA 02135.

Elizabeth C. McDevitt, 95

Memorial graveside services with Military Honors and celebration of life for Elizabeth C. (Ward) McDevitt, 95, of Weymouth and formerly Quincy will be held at a date and time to be announced in Mount Wollaston Cemetery, Quincy.

Mrs. McDevitt died peacefully June 8 at South Shore Hospital, Weymouth.

She was born in East Milton, raised and educated in Quincy. Mrs. McDevitt graduated from Quincy High School, Class of 1938, and from Quincy City Hospital School of Nursing in 1941. She lived in Weymouth for ten years, previously living in Quincy for most of her life.

Mrs. McDevitt worked as a registered nurse at the former Quincy City Hospital for 25 years. She was also a devoted homemaker. She served as a second lieutenant in the United States Army Nurse Corps during World War II and was stationed in Texas. Mrs. McDevitt enjoyed traveling throughout the world having visited Ireland, England, Iceland, China, Australia as well as Canada and the United States.

Beloved mother of Sheila Ann Harvey and her husband Neal of CA, John S. McDevitt and his wife Mary Ann of West Bridgewater, Stephen McDevitt and his wife Carol of NC and Denise A. White of ID. Loving grandmother "Bippy" of Bryan and Kimberly Harvey, Bradley McDevitt, and Chelsea, Connor, and Chloe White. Loving great-grandmother "GiGi" of Tallulah and Evie McDevitt and Bayla and Caelyn Harvey. She was predeceased by her siblings, Lillian Mahoney, Mary Dwyer, Josephine Ferrazzi, and Patricia Fischer. Sister-in-law of Cleo McDevitt of IA. Also survived by many nieces and nephews.

Arrangements by Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals, 1 Independence Ave., Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to the Salvation Army, 6 Baxter St., Quincy, MA 02169 or to the Durham Habitat for Humanity, 215 North Church St., Durham, NC 27701.

Maureen A. Shea, 77

A funeral Mass for Maureen Ann Shea, 77, of Quincywas celebrated June 13 in St. Agatha Church, Milton.

Ms. Shea died peacefully June 8 at the Weymouth Health Care Center surrounded by her loving family.

She was born in Boston, raised in South Boston and was a graduate of the former Holy Trinity High School in Roxbury. She had lived in Quincy for 46 years.

Ms. Shea was employed for more than 30 years with State Street Bank in Quincy. She also worked as a sales associate at the former Filene's and later for Macy's at the South Shore Plaza in Braintree. She was devoted to her Catholic faith and was a longtime parishioner at St. Agatha Parish in Milton.

Beloved daughter of the late John T. and Dorothy J. (O'Rourke) Shea. One of six siblings, she was the devoted sister of John T. Shea, Jr. of Milton, Paul F. Shea of Mattapoisett, Dorothy J. Davis and her husband Peter of Quincy and predeceased by Thomas A. Shea and Richard J. Shea. Sister-in-law of Joanne Shea of Scituate and is also survived by many nieces, nephews, grandnieces and grandnephews.

MAUREEN A. SHEA

Funeral arrangements were made by Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals, 1 Independence Ave., Quincy.

Private interment.

Marjorie P. Lynch, 83

A funeral Mass for Marjorie P. (Picard) Lynch, 83, of Del Ray Beach, Fla., and formerly Milton was celebrated June 12 in St. Ann's Church, Quincy.

Mrs. Lynch died June 2.

She was a member of the Wollaston Golf Club and she absolutely loved working. She would always tell those she knew that working kept her young and she planned to work until her last days! Mrs. Lynch worked as an administrative assistant for Carney Hospital before moving to Florida in 1984. There she enjoyed spending time with her many friends and her job as a property manager for Boca Bayou in Boca Raton.

The true joy in her life though came from the love she shared with her husband Joe and her dogs Merry, Scruffie and Sammie.

Margaret Murray

A funeral Mass for Margaret "Peg" (Glavin) Murray of Squantum will be celebrated at 10:30 a.m. tomorrow (Friday) in Sacred Heart Church, Quincy.

Mrs. Murray died Sunday.

She worked for more than 30 years with her husband Frederick at Prime America as their office manager. Mrs. Murray was a longtime member of the Sacred Heart Catholic Women's Club and member and past president of the AWHS Mother's Guild. She loved to swim in the ocean, especially Cape Cod, and was an avid Red Sox fan.

Mrs. Murray was a sharing, caring, and loving independent woman who had great wisdom and was always a good listener. Her family was most important to her, especially her grandchildren. She was the life of the party and would host a gathering every Christmas at her house and organize family reunions each summer. Mrs. Murray will be greatly missed by all that knew her.

Daughter of the late Cornelius and Margaret (Buttimer) Glavin. Beloved wife of the late Frederick W. Murray. Devoted mother of Susan Gray and her husband Michael of Squantum, Frederick Murray and his wife Marie of Braintree, and Nancy McCuen of Squantum. Loving sister of Katherine White of Savin Hill, Susan McAleney of Mashpee, Mary Costello and her husband Larry of Mashpee, Michael Glavin and his wife Penny of Quincy, and the late Cornelius Glavin Jr., William Glavin and his surviving wife Jackie of Quincy, Imelda Mieggs, and Walter Glavin. Doting Nana of Jonathan and Alexander Gray, Luke and Michael Murray, and Maggie and Colin McCuen. Also survived by many beloved nieces and nephews.

Visiting hours are 4-8 p.m. today (Thursday) in Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy. A celebration of life service will be held there at 9:30 a.m. today, prior to the Mass.

Interment at Pine Hill Cemetery, Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to the National Federation for the Blind, 200 East Wells St. at Jernigan Place, Baltimore, MD 21230.

Esther Halpin, 82

A funeral Mass for Esther Halpin, 82, of Quincy was celebrated Monday in St. John the Baptist Church, Quincy.

Mrs. Halpin died June 9.

She was a longtime member of Local 25 and worked many years at the Sheraton Boston Hotel. She lived in Town Brook House in Quincy for more than 25 years.

Survived by her six children: Candy Dolan-Kelley, William Penwarden Jr., Mary Sharkus, Laura Penwarden-Smith, Dawn Devereaux, Darlene Reardon and their spouses. She had 13 grandchildren and eight great-grandchildren.

Funeral arrangements were made by Lydon Chapel for Funerals, 644 Hancock St., Quincy.

Interment at Mount Pleasant Cemetery, Arlington.

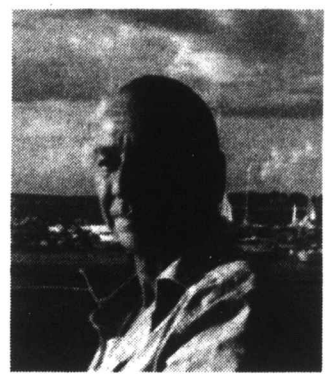
George H. Sharpe, 59

A memorial service for George H. Sharpe, 59, of Randolph and formerly Quincy was held June 13 in All Saints Church, Dorchester.

Mr. Sharpe died June 5.

He worked as a flooring installer and was a member of the Floor Covering Union, Local 2168 in Boston. In his free time, Mr. Sharpe enjoyed traveling, the beach and taking walks along Wollaston and Nantasket Beaches.

Loving father of Christopher Sharpe of Randolph, Stacey Littlefield of Taunton, Scott Sharpe of Middleborough and his beloved cat Missy. Son of the late Arthur Sharpe and Katherine Pitts. Loving brother of Arthur Sharpe of Attleboro, Valerie Ferragamo of Quincy, Laura Mace of Berkley, Gregory Sharpe of Randolph, Linda Dares of Rockland, Michael Pitts of Braintree and the late Richard Sharpe. Also survived by several nieces and nephews.



GEORGE H. SHARPE

Arrangements were made by Cartwright Funeral Homes.

Private interment.

Rene Lumaghini, 87

A funeral Mass for Rene Lumaghini, 87, of Quincy will be celebrated at 10 a.m. today (Thursday) in St. John the Baptist Church, Quincy.

Mr. Lumaghini died unexpectedly at home on June 13.

He was born in Paris, France, and was raised and educated there. During World War II, he served in the French military and immigrated to the United States at the age of 25 in 1953. He had lived in Quincy for 62 years.

Mr. Lumaghini was a bricklayer and a former member of the bricklayers union, Local 52. He later worked for the city of Quincy for more than 30 years in the planning department as a senior construction specialist with the Housing and Urban Development program, HUD. He retired in 2009. Mr. Lumaghini enjoyed gardening and was a hard-working man, devoted to his family.

Beloved husband of the late Odette S. (Degen) Lumaghini. Devoted father of Lionel A. Lumaghini and his wife Marilyn of Quincy, Jessica M. Baldino and her husband George of Quincy, the late Rene Lumaghini, Jr. and his wife Marie of Quincy. Loving grandfather of Jason, Christopher and Melissa Lumaghini, Lauren Bolton, Rene Michael and Corey Lumaghini, Olivia and Sophia Baldino and cherished great-grandfather of eight. He was pre-deceased by his two sisters, Lucienne Vignali and Ida Boire. Also survived by several nieces and nephews.

Visiting hours were 4-7 p.m. yesterday (Wednesday) at Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals, 1 Independence Ave., Quincy. Funeral from the funeral home at 9 a.m. today, prior to the Mass.

James L. Anderson, 72

A Mass of Christian Burial for James L. Anderson, 72, a 50-year Quincy resident, recently retired to Chatham, will be celebrated today (Thursday) at 10 a.m. in St. Mary's Church, Quincy.

Mr. Anderson died June 11 surrounded by his family.

He is survived by his devoted wife of 52 years Rita Anderson. Mr. Anderson also leaves his children Brian Anderson and his wife Nolisha of Hanover, Donny Anderson and his wife Heather McCullogh of VA, Karen Colitti and her husband John of Abington and Sue Kennedy and her husband Scott of Quincy. He is also survived by his brother Richard Anderson and his wife Roberta and their son Keith of CA, his brother-in-law Wally Eason and his late wife Diane of Weymouth along with his eight cherished grandchildren. Predeceased by his brother Paul Anderson.

Visiting hours were 4-8 p.m. yesterday (Wednesday) at Dolan Funeral Home, East Milton.

Memorial donations may be made to Circle of Hope, 24 Myrtle St., Norwood, MA 02062.

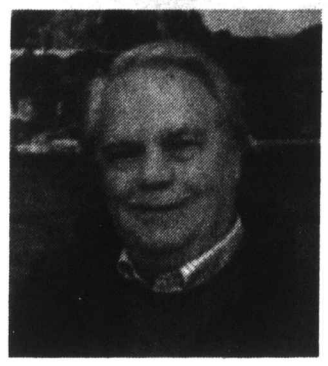
Robert D. MacDonald, 67

A celebration of life service for Robert D. "Bob" MacDonald, 67, of Quincy will be held at 9:30 a.m. today (Thursday) in Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy.

Mr. MacDonald died peacefully Sunday.

He was employed as a mechanical engineer for Teradyne, Inc., for 30 years. He was equally proud to serve his country in the U.S. Air Force during the Vietnam era. Mr. MacDonald's passions were his family and friends. As an accomplished artist, he enjoyed drawing, photography and painting unique birdhouses for South Shore Habitat for Humanity's annual fundraising charity.

Mr. MacDonald also had a passion for the arts including season tickets to the ballet and show of the month. He was a wine connoisseur and treasured the glasses he shared with his closest family and friends. He also had a love for traveling, especially to Scotland and Ireland. He enjoyed discovering unique bed and breakfast establishments along many of their journeys.



ROBERT D. MACDONALD

His other love was his Corvettes, spending time detailing and driving in "ONELUV." Mr. MacDonald enjoyed spoiling those around him and focused his thoughtfulness on the individuals' passions. He will be sadly missed by all those who had the pleasure of knowing him.

Beloved husband of Mary MacDonald (McDonald) of Quincy. Loving son of Stella MacDonald (DiGiovanni) of West Roxbury and the late William MacDonald. Cherished brother of Janice Lagasse and her husband Bill of Randolph. Devoted godfather of his nephew Derek Lagasse of Randolph. Also survived by many faithful cousins, brothers/sisters-in-law, their spouses, nieces, and nephews.

Visiting hours were 4-8 p.m. yesterday (Wednesday) at the funeral home.

Interment at Massachusetts National Cemetery, Bourne, at 2 p.m. today.

In memory of Mr. MacDonald, his loved ones request that you show kindness to someone in need or to make a donation in his memory to Dana-Farber Cancer Institute, P.O. Box 849168, Boston, MA 02284-9168 or a charity of your choice. "The point is not to pay back kindness, but to pass it on. The cost is little, but the reward is rich."

Constance Barrett Corson, 94

Funeral services for Constance Barrett Corson, 94, of North Quincy were held June 13 at St. Michael's Episcopal Parish, Milton.

Mrs. Corson died June 3 after a brief illness.

She was born on Sept. 9, 1920 in Winnipeg. After growing up in Montreal and Upper Darby, Pa., she graduated from Wellesley College in 1942. Her husband, Robert William Corson, preceded her in death in 1980, as did her parents, Anthony and Anna Barrett. She is survived by two sons and three grandsons: Marshall Ayer Corson and wife Lauren Riker of WA, Dana Barrett Corson of Amherst, and grandsons, Joshua Corson and wife Arielle of WA Michael Corson of WA, and Benjamin Corson of DC, as well as more than 30 extended Canadian family members across four generations.

Mrs. Corson lived in the Boston area for more than half a century, relocating from Milton in 1988 to Marina Bay. She was adventurous, with spirit for life and she enjoyed boating, fishing and sightseeing around Boston Harbor in her earlier years, as well as reflecting on her harbor views later on.

She had a passion for philanthropic and community efforts, volunteering in the Boston Public Schools and providing expertise as an advocate for students with learning disabilities. In her many years as a member of St. Michael's Parish in Milton she served on the Vestry and as a board member for the Episcopal Diocese of Massachusetts.

Mrs. Corson had a passion for the arts, sang in choirs and loved spending Saturday afternoons listening to the Metropolitan Opera or strolling through the galleries of the Boston Museum of Fine Arts. She was active on the Wellesley College Foundation Board.

One of her recent wishes was to spend a Christmas with her two sons. In December 2014, that wish came true – a wonderful memory for the three of them.

Funeral arrangements were made by Dolan & Chapman Funeral Home, Milton Village.

Memorial donations may be made to the Macular Degeneration Research Fund of Dr. Johanna Seddon at Tufts University School of Medicine.

State Breast Cancer Coalition Against The Tide Fundraising Events

The Massachusetts Breast Cancer Coalition (MBCC) will hold its annual, statewide Against the Tide swim, kayak, walk, and/or run fundraising events again this year.

Proceeds benefit MBCC, which is the state's leading breast cancer organization that seeks to understand the causes of breast cancer in order to find ways to prevent the disease.

ESTHER EARL and EVANGELINE EARL

Quincy resident and Senior Intern Evangeline Earl has had a very difficult and life-changing experience with cancer. In November of 2006, Evangeline's youngest sister, Esther, was diagnosed with thyroid cancer at age 12. At the time, Evangeline remembers thinking, "I could not fathom a world in which Esther could not exist, a world where my closest confidante would no longer be sitting in the next room or talking late into the night with me."

Esther sadly passed away in 2010 after a four-year battle with thyroid cancer. She left in her wake a grief-stricken family and a lasting legacy reminding her family to love deeply and to never take their lives for granted. Although it took several years for Evangeline to move past her grief, Evangeline said she was given the gift and a chance to live, share her sister's message with others, and to love abundantly.

MBCC Executive Director Cheryl Osimo said, "I knew from the very first time I communicated with Evangeline I knew that she would have a drive and dedication towards supporting MBCC's goal of breast cancer prevention. We are honored to be working with Evangeline."

Currently, Evangeline studies Sustainable Business and Agriculture at Green Mountain College in Vermont. She wants to educate and nurture others with the tools needed to promote lifestyle choices to ensure a healthy and sustainable future. "My experience has molded and shaped my future in a most positive direction, and for that I have gratitude. I also know that MBCC's work towards breast cancer prevention will also aid in the prevention of other cancers such as thyroid cancer," Evangeline said.

"We are very fortunate to have such tremendous support from the citizens of Massachusetts demanding greater protection of their children's future health in an effort to stop breast cancer before it starts," Cheryl said. "MBCC is often overshadowed by larger, national breast cancer organizations and messages of early detection, treatment, and finding a cure. We depend on our generous media and supporters to continue our unique goal of breast cancer prevention."

The Statewide Metro-Boston Against the Tide will be held for the 23rd year at DCR's Hopkinton State Park (30 miles from Boston, 20 miles from Worcester) on Saturday, June 20. The statewide Cape Cod Against the Tide will be held for the 16th year DCR's Nickerson State Park (Brewster) on Saturday, Aug. 15.

The family-friendly and inspirational events bring people from all demographics together with one goal in mind: breast cancer prevention. Both events consist of several components: competitive and recreational swims, recreational kayak, recreational walk, and competitive and recreational runs.

Participants of all ages and abilities can choose 1, 2, or 3 of these exciting activities. The event also offers an Aquathon "Splash and Dash" component, where participants "splash" in the competitive 1-mile swim and immediately "dash" in the competitive 5K or 10K run (chosen by the participant).

MBCC is inviting people throughout Massachusetts to register for one or both of the events at www.mbcc.org/swim or by calling 617-376-MBCC (6222).

Those who cannot attend are invited to make a pledge to a registered participant or existing team. Participants may register as an individual or as part of a team, and are encouraged to fundraise $175 ($100, if a team member). All proceeds support the Massachusetts Breast Cancer Coalition.

Chickie Abdallah Recognized For Dedicated Volunteer Service

Quincy resident Chickie Abdallah was one of three individuals and several organizations recently honored by the Massachusetts Service Alliance for demonstrating the impact of service and volunteerism in the state.

Abdallah received the "Getting Things Done in Massachusetts" award for her service as a Norfolk County RSVP volunteer. The award recognizes an exceptional AmeriCorps, Commonwealth Corps, or Senior Corps member (including RSVP) who demonstrates outstanding commitment and service over and above their routine volunteer assignment.

Abdallah is a veteran of the Navy WAVES division, or US Naval Reserve for Women. Throughout her life she has served Quincy: cleaning beaches and helping neighbors informally, coaching softball and leading scouts, and serving with St. Joseph's Parish, Youth Activities Commission, Ward 2 Civic Association, MBTA Rider Oversight Committee, and Quincy's Beaches and Coastal Commission.

Abdallah joined Norfolk County RSVP when she began volunteering at Interfaith Social Services in 2006. Interfaith helps over 7,500 families annually with programs focused on hunger, mental health and emergency assistance. Chickie served at the front desk, checked in clients for the food pantry, sat one-on-one with families, and staffed the Bureau Drawer thrift shop.

In 2007, she combined her passions for Interfaith and Quincy's public beaches by co-founding the John Hancock Polar Plunge fundraiser with Leo Kelly of the Beaches and Coastal Commission. This event brought attention to Quincy's beaches and to the needs of vulnerable families. It also inspired daring outdoor-lovers to participate in service. Participation ranged from toe-dunking to full plunges into the cold January Wollaston Beach water. Over seven years the event raised $30,000 for Interfaith Social Services, thanks to Chickie's organizing work.

Abdallah was nominated for the "Getting Things Done" award by Bettyanne Lang, retired Interfaith Social Services volunteer coordinator and Claire Howsberger, both leaders of the RSVP Advisory Committee. Her nomination was supported by Interfaith Executive Director Rick Doane, Mayor Thomas Koch, Norfolk County Commissioner John Gillis, state Rep. Ron Mariano, and friends from around Quincy.

Mayor Proclaims June 14 Children's Day In Quincy

Mayor Thomas Koch proclaimed June 14 as Children's Day in the city of Quincy for a second year in a row.

The declaration came at the request of 7-year-old Mya Mooney of Quincy, who is trying to make Children's Day as widely recognized as Mother's Day and Father's Day.

Her parents have started an organization on Mya's behalf called The Children's Chariot, which is dedicated to nurturing innovative and creative young leaders. In honor of the holiday, Mya is partnering with several other youth organizations including the Quincy Girls Scouts and YMCA to promote the day and host events with, for and/or in honor of children. Events so far have included organizing a group of 70 children and families to attend the Big Apple Circus Metamorphosis for a night of laughter and fun by getting the circus to donate tickets; a live butterfly release ceremony performed with the Quincy Girl Scouts in honor of families affected by cancer at Granite Day in Quincy; marching in the Quincy Flag Day parade and planning for a family fun day at the local Quincy YMCA where Mya volunteers with teachers at the children's play and activity center.

Sunday, June 14 was selected to be Children's Day in Quincy because there's a push in other parts of the country to make the second Sunday in June a holiday dedicated to children.

For more information on the group, visit orgsites.com/ma/thechildrenschariot. To learn more about the push to recognize Children's Day nationally, visit nationalchildrensday.us.

PRAYER TO THE BLESSED VIRGIN
"Oh, most beautiful flower of Mt. Carmel, Fruitful vine, splendor of heaven, Blessed Mother of the Son of God, Immaculate Virgin, assist me in my necessity. Oh, Star of the Sea, help me and show me, herein you are my Mother. Oh, Holy Mary, Mother of God, Queen of Heaven and Earth! I humbly beseech you from the bottom of my heart to succor me in this necessity. There are none that can withstand your power. Oh, Mary, conceived without sin, pray for us who have recourse to thee (three times). Holy Mother, I place this cause in your hands (three times). Say this prayer 3 consecutive days, and then you must publish and it will be granted to you. Thanks to St. Anthony & St. Joseph. St. Jude NS 6/18

(Never Known To Fail)
O, most beautiful flower of Mt. Carmel, Fruitful Vine, splendour of Heaven. Blessed mother of the son of God, immaculate Virgin, assist me in this necessity. O, Star of the Sea, help me and show me herein you are my Mother. O Holy Mary, Mother of God, Queen of Heaven and Earth, I humbly beseech thee from the bottom of my heart to succor me in this my necessity (make request). There are none that can withstand your power. O, Mary, conceived without sin, pray for us who have recourse to thee (3 times). Holy Mary, I place this cause in your hands (3 times). Thank you for your mercy to me and mine. Amen. The prayer must be said for three consecutive days and after that the request will be granted. The prayer must be published. P.J. 6/18

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Making things more complicated than they need to be can be a problem for the typically orderly Lamb. Try to look for a less intricate way to accomplish the same goals.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Avoiding personal involvement in a troubling situation might be advisable at this time, especially since you probably don't have all the facts. The weekend brings a surprise.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A problem with a colleague you thought had been resolved could recur. However, this time you'll be able to rely on your record to get a quick resolution in your favor. Good luck.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Giving your self-esteem a boost could be a good idea for the Moon Child, who might feel a bit daunted by the week's occurrences. Just focus on all your positive accomplishments.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) The "mane" attraction for the Lovable Lion this week is -- what else? -- love. New relationships move to new levels, while long-standing partnerships are strengthened.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A recent workplace problem will prove to be one of miscommunication, and once the matter is settled, you should have a better chance of getting your proposals approved.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Good news! After dealing pretty much in the dark with a matter that seemed to be taking forever to resolve, you should soon be seeing the light at the end of the tunnel.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A positive message should help lift that energy-draining sense of anxiety, and you should soon be able to deal with even the peskiest matter, whether at work or personal.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Try to control that heated Sagittarian temperament while dealing with what you believe to be an unfair matter. A cool approach is the best way to handle things.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Nursing hurt feelings could keep you from learning what went wrong. Ask your partner, a family member or a trusted friend to help you reassess your actions in the matter.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Nature is dominant this week. Try to spend time outdoors with someone special. An act of kindness in the past might be recalled by a person you believed was out of your life.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) An upcoming career decision could be based on how well you might be able to apply your artistic talents. Be sure to use the finest samples of your work to make a strong impression.

BORN THIS WEEK: Doing good things for others comes easily to you. You are considered a good friend, even by those you might hardly know.

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Quincy Credit Union Awards Scholarships To Student Members

Quincy Credit Union announces four student members have been selected as recipients of 2015 Scholarship Lottery Awards.

Timothy Nazzaro, Catherine Manning, Sofia Lee and Jennifer Dunn were each awarded a $1,000 QCU scholarship for secondary education expenses.

Nazzaro is currently attending Fitchburg State University with a major in film journalism. Manning, a Weymouth High School graduate, will attend the University of Rhode Island and study merchandising. Lee, a North Quincy High School graduate, will attend Wentworth Institute of Technology in the fall and major in computer science. Dunn, a Notre Dame Academy graduate, will be attending Fordham University in New York with a major in business.

Scholarships are available to high school seniors of the current year's graduating class and for enrolled college students for each of the years they are enrolled in a two or four year accredited college or university are eligible to apply.

Applicants must be members of QCU. Non-selected applicants are encouraged to apply each year they meet the scholarship criteria. Applications are available online at www.qcu.org or at any QCU location starting in January of each year.

City Council Seeks More Downtown Oversight

By SCOTT JACKSON

City councillors on Monday night voted to give the Planning Board oversight of agreements reached between the mayor and developers of privately owned parcels in Quincy Center.

The City Council, sitting as the downtown committee, met for more than three-and-half hours Monday night to review a proposed amendment to the city's Urban Revitalization and Development Plan for Quincy Center. The URDP was originally approved in 2007 and subsequently amended in 2009 and 2010, as Street-Works became the master developer for the downtown. The pending amendment is needed because Street-Works is out as master developer and the city will now be taking a phased approach with multiple developers.

At Monday's meeting, Ward 4 Councillor Brian

By SCOTT JACKSON

The Solarize Quincy initiative has received a "stellar response" from the community, according to its lead organizer, as the June 30 deadline to participate approaches.

Quincy is one of five Bay State municipalities that participated in this year's Solarize Massachusetts program. The Solarize Quincy initiative, which began in March, provides discounts to homeowners looking to install photovoltaic (PV) systems through tiered pricing based on the total capacity of systems installed.

As of June 18, 41 homeowners signed contracts for installations totaling 226.5 kilowatts and more than 100 other homeowners had received proposals from SolarFlair, the Ashland-based company doing the installations for Solarize Quincy.

City Council Seeks More Downtown Oversight

By SCOTT JACKSON

City councillors on Monday night voted to give the Planning Board oversight of agreements reached between the mayor and developers of privately owned parcels in Quincy Center.

The City Council, sitting as the downtown committee, met for more than three-and-half hours Monday night to review a proposed amendment to the city's Urban Revitalization and Development Plan for Quincy Center. The URDP was originally approved in 2007 and subsequently amended in 2009 and 2010, as Street-Works became the master developer for the downtown. The pending amendment is needed because Street-Works is out as master developer and the city will now be taking a phased approach with multiple developers.

At Monday's meeting, Ward 4 Councillor Brian

Public Meeting On Olympic Volleyball Plan July 9

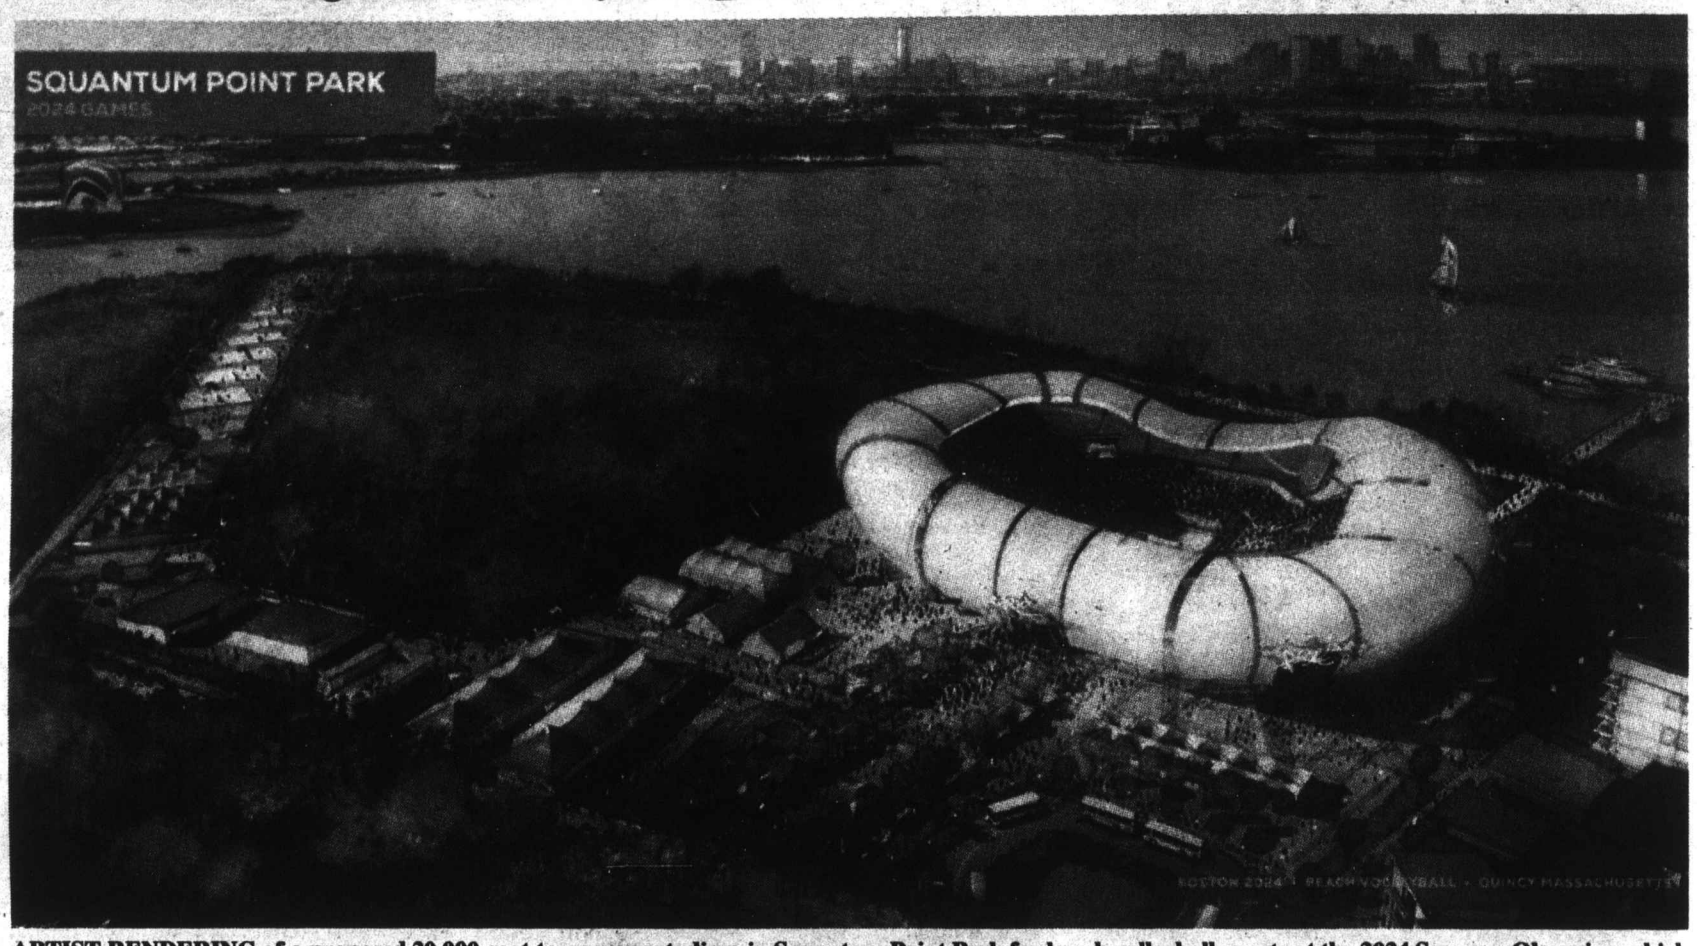
2024 Summer Games Organizers Eye Squantum Point Park As Event Venue

By SCOTT JACKSON

The organizing committee hoping to bring the 2024 Summer Olympics to Boston will hold a community meeting July 9 on a plan to host beach volleyball events at Squantum Point Park. That meeting, and others to follow, will be used to gauge the community's support for the proposal.

The July 9 community meeting will begin at 6:30 p.m. at the Marina Bay community room, 500 Victory Rd.

Boston 2024 on June 17 announced plans to host beach volleyball events at Squantum Point Park. As part of the proposal, Boston 2024 would build a 20,000-seat temporary stadium in the portion of the park closest to Marina Bay in what is now a parking lot; the stadium could be constructed in 16 weeks and broken down in seven, according to organizers. Several training courts and other facilities would be housed along a disused runway that cuts through the park.



ARTIST RENDERING of a proposed 20,000-seat temporary stadium in Squantum Point Park for beach volleyball events at the 2024 Summer Olympics, which Boston is bidding to host, was unveiled June 17. The stadium and improvements to the park would cost between $23 million to $28.5 million, which organizers say would be paid for with private funds. A community meeting on the plan will be held July 9 at the Marina Bay community room, 500 Victory Rd.

Rendering Courtesy Boston 2024

Boston 2024 also promised a number of upgrades to the park, which is operated by the Massachusetts Department of Conservation and Recreation. They include seawall/shoreline restoration, recreation and playing fields, new playground areas and upgrades to the pier on site, which could be used to accommodate ferry service after the games.

The cost for the stadium and other upgrades would be between $23 million and $28.5 million, which Boston 2024 said would be privately financed. Competition would take place over 13 days – July 20 to Aug. 3 – during the 2024 games.

Chris Walker, a spokesman for Mayor Thomas Koch, said the multiple community meetings will be held on the proposal, starting on the July 9 meeting. If the community doesn't back the plan, Walker stated, Koch won't either.

"He supports the opportunity to host the events but ultimately it only exists if the community is on board," Walker said. "This is the first step in the process."

A statewide referendum is planned for 2016 to determine if Boston should apply to host the games. Walker said he does not believe Quincy would hold its own referendum independent of that one.

Walker said there are no other plans to host Olympic events in Quincy.

Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee, whose district includes all of Squantum and parts of North Quincy, said it should be up to neighborhood residents to decide if beach volleyball events should be held at Squantum Point Park.

"What I think is irrelevant," McNamee responded when asked if he supported the plan.

"The abutters will decide. I have to represent the abutters who will be dealing with the impacts."

McNamee said he heard a mixed response from constituents in the days after the announcement was made.

"I have received some calls and some emails. It's been a mixed response. It's early in the feedback process and breaking 50-50. That's why we need time to vet this," McNamee said. "This will require two public meetings. People need to focus in on this and read about the proposal. It will take some time for it to settle in."

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci introduced a resolution at the June 15 City Council meeting asking the mayor or someone from Boston 2024 to discuss any impacts the games would have on Quincy. Palmucci's resolution also sought information on any communications between Quincy officials and Boston 2024 or the city of Boston relative to the games.

After the announcement, Palmucci said there should have been a public process

Mixed Reviews For Quarry Hills Proposal

Opponents Cite Traffic Concerns, Others Voice Support For Project

By SCOTT JACKSON

Ricciuti Drive residents said they are opposed to plan to build a 269-unit residential complex at Quarry Hills citing traffic concerns, while other community members voiced their support for the project at a public hearing.

Developer William Locke has proposed constructing two six-story buildings with 269 one- and two-bedroom market-rate apartments between them off Quarry Hills Drive. The City Council, acting as Quincy's Special Permit Granting Authority, held a public hearing on the plan June 16. The council will meet again to review the proposal on Sept. 8 at 6:30 p.m. The Conservation Commission held a hearing on the project June 3, which was continued to July 1. The project must also go before the Zoning Board of Appeals.

The top five floors of each building would be wood-framed, with a podium parking structure on the first floor. Keith Boyle, an architect with Cube 3 Studio, said the grading of the site would allow the parking level to remain hidden from view from the front of the buildings and accessible from the backside. The project includes 430 spaces, both inside the buildings and on the surface; the city's zoning code would only require 337 spaces on site.

A bridge over a small stream and wetlands would connect the two buildings.

The eight-acre project site – identified as 00 Ricciuti Drive Rear on the city assessor's maps – is off Quarry Hills Drive near the Milton line in a densely wooded area. Because a number of trees are being removed, the developer will have to comply with the city's Tree Protection Ordinance and has agreed to make a payment to the tree replacement fund, according to attorney Edward Fleming.

Marian Manor previously received permission from the city to construct an assisted and independent living complex on site in 2007, but was unable to follow through on construction. Locke, through Quarry Hills Development LLC, has reached an agreement to purchase the site. Fleming

THE HALO EFFECT

Diamond halo engagement rings initially owed their vast popularity to the fact that they offered budget-conscious consumers a way to make the biggest impression for their dollars. By encircling a moderate-sized diamond with a collection of smaller pavé diamonds, it is possible to focus attention back on the center stone and make it look larger and more interesting. However, there is more to the beautiful look of a diamond halo engagement ring than that. After all, it is doubtful that Scarlett Johansson's millionaire boyfriend was thinking about a budget when he gave his bride-to-be a gorgeous Art Deco halo engagement ring. The fact is that halo rings have risen above the trend status to become classics.

The diamond collection at our store at 1402 Hancock St. in Quincy Center contains virtually any shape and size imaginable. We maintain, along with three other jewelers, a permanent presence in the diamond centers of the world. This established relationship affords us the ability to bring you all the qualities, sizes, and shapes at value prices. If we don't have it in stock we will get it, usually within 72 hours with no obligation on the customer's part. For more information, please call 617-773-3636.

A better way to get money from your house

You have a house with lots of equity. Good cash flow. Investments you don't want to touch right now. And you have something you want money for. What's the best way to get it? How about a 15-Year refinance from Colonial Federal? With fixed monthly payments, it's more predictable than an adjustable-rate home equity line. Way less expensive than credit cards. And you'll have it all paid off in 15 short years ... quicker if you make extra payments along the way. Sound good? Saluting Sam And The '65 Twins

Fifty years ago this fall, Quincy's Sam Mele accomplished a feat that hadn't happened in 32 years.

As the manager of the Minnesota Twins, Sam guided the team to its first pennant since 1933 when the club was formerly the Washington Senators. The 1965 Twins also won 102 games that season – at the time a club record – and came within a game of a world championship.

The Twins boasted some great ballplayers in their lineup. Slugger and future Hall of Famer Harmon Killebrew, American League MVP Zoilo Versalles and AL batting champion Tony Oliva. Their rotation was fronted by Mudcat Grant and Jim Kaat who won 21 and 18 games respectively that year.

But Manager Walter Alston's Dodgers were stacked with future Hall of Famers Sandy Koufax and Don Drysdale and the speedy Maury Wills (94 stolen bases that season). They were World Series tested, too, having won baseball's championship two years earlier in 1963.

Minnesota won the first two games of the Series but lost the seventh and deciding game 2-0 to Koufax - arguably the greatest lefty in baseball history – who hurled a three-hitter on two days rest. The title may have belonged to L.A. but Sam and the Twins had put baseball on the map in Minnesota. More than 1.4 million fans attended Twins' home games that season, the highest total in the majors.

A half century later, Sam and his Twins squad will be honored at Target Field before the Minnesota-Seattle Mariners game Aug. 1. Sam, who is 93, is unable to attend the festivities but he will be able to share some of his thoughts about that pennant-winning season to the Twins' fans.

A few weeks ago, the Red Sox - whom Sam broke into the big leagues as an outfielder in 1947 and served many years as a scout - arranged a film crew to visit him at his Quincy home. His message was recorded and will be shown on the big screen at Target Field.

"I wanted to thank the fans especially for being so great to me, my family, and the ball club," Sam said during a recent interview in his home. "The fans in Minnesota are the greatest in the world. To me, they're the best."

Sam remembers getting to the ball park before home games and the parking area was full of fans tailgating and cooking with hibachi grills. "They were cooking hamburgers, steaks, you name it. I felt like I wanted to stay there myself."

He also recalls one specific fan who sat near the dugout. Whenever Sam popped out to go to the pitcher's mound, the fan would say, 'What mistake are you going to make now?' But he smiled at me," Sam said.

"When I got fired in 1967, I had to go to the ballpark. And as I'm coming off the field to go to the clubhouse and meet with the press, the fans were in the park." The same fan who sat near the dugout got Sam's attention and said, "I want to tell you something. I kidded you all the time. I was never serious about that."

The tribute to the 1965 Twins has been like a trip down memory lane for Sam. Many of his former players have called him to reminisce and congratulate him. And he's done the same.

"I thanked them for calling and told them how great they were on the club and thanked them for always backing me. I thanked them as much as I could. They were so nice to me."

Sam has many fond recollections - on and off the field – of that dream season, the highlight of his nearly 50-year professional career as a player, coach, manager and scout.

"We were a tight-knit group, absolutely. When I was in my office, I could hear them all laughing outside. I knew they were all getting along pretty damn well. And they would pick on one another. One day, I heard a big roar, 'Hooray, he's here.' All the pitchers were waiting for Harmon Killebrew to show up. They figured he's gonna get us some runs. We better be good to him. And sure enough, he did."

There were some funny moments, too.

He recalled Game 1 of the World Series when his mother and some other family and close friends flew to Minnesota to watch the opener at Metropolitan Stadium.

"My mother (Anna) leaves the dining room at the stadium and heads down the runway to the seats. Behind her is Hubert Humphrey, the Vice President of the United States. A friend asked my mom if she would like to meet the Vice President and they are introduced.

"I didn't know this. So after the game, I take my family and friends out to supper. And I say, 'Oh, by the way, I hear you met the Vice President.

"And my mother looks straight at me and says, 'No, he met me."

Sam was made the Twins manager by owner Calvin Griffin during the 1961 season – their first year in Minnesota after moving from Washington as the Senators. The team began winning and finished second to the vaunted Yankees in 1962. They followed up with third place in 1963 but slipped to sixth tied with Cleveland in 1964.

Did Mele feel any pressure to win entering the '65 season?

"No. I didn't care if they fired me," Sam says without hesitation. "(Twins owner) Calvin (Griffith) didn't make me feel any pressure and neither did the team."

In '65, the Twins battled the Orioles for first place until July 1 when Minnesota took first place for good. They won the Pennant by 7 games ahead of the Chicago White Sox. The Red Sox, by the way, finished 9th and 38 games under .500 - just three games ahead of the last place Royals.

During his video appearance, Sam also took the time to advocate for two of his former players who he believes belong in Baseball's Hall of Fame: Oliva and Kaat.

"Jim Kaat won 283 games and 16 Gold Gloves. He was a helluva bunter and I used him as a pinch runner and a pinch hitter. He should be in the Hall of Fame.

"So too should Tony Oliva. He was a .300 hitter,

American Forces Ordered To Aid Of South Korea

By FRANK McCAULEY

President Harry Truman today ordered United States planes and warships to the aid of South Korean forces. He laid down a policy of standing firm against Communist aggression in the far Pacific.

As part of the broader policy, Truman directed that the U.S. Seventh Fleet be prepared to prevent any Communist attack on Formosa, the island refuge of the Chinese Nationalistic government.

It was learned that President Truman's historic decisions were reached at a high policy meeting at the White House.

AIRPLANE CRASH OFF OKINAWA KILLS LT. WALTER DELLA CHIESA

First Lt. Walter A. Della Chiesa, only son of City Councillor Amelio Della Chiesa and Mrs. Della Chiesa, was killed Sunday, June 25 off the Pacific island of Okinawa when his aircraft crashed into the sea.

Lt. Della Chiesa's death occurred on the day that North Korea forces invaded South Korea. Lt. Della Chiesa was married to the former Jane H. Buckner of Braintree. The couple was married in June 1948 shortly after his graduation from West Point as the 12th highest graduate in his class.

Strengthen Elder Abuse Laws

World Elder Abuse Awareness Day (WEAAD) was June 15. Once a year, communities around our country and the world plan activities and programs to share information and spread awareness about abuse, neglect, and exploitation in later life.

Many elderly adults are abused in their own homes, in relatives' homes, at the hands of their guardians and in facilities responsible for their care. If you suspect that an elderly person is at risk from a neglectful or overwhelmed caregiver, or being preyed upon financially, it's important to speak up.

Over 10 years ago, a hearing before the Special Committee on Aging of the U.S. Senate reported that "one out of every four Americans will be a victim of elder abuse, neglect, or exploitation at some point. We know that somewhere between 500,000 to 5 million seniors are abused every year, and further, we also know that the reported abuse is only really the tip of the iceberg, since 84 percent is the estimate of elder abuse believed to go completely unreported. Clearly the Congress and the Nation must find some innovative solutions that will protect our greatest generation from abuse."

Not much has happened since.

We have made great strides in protecting children and animals from abuse, and strengthened the deterrents and punishments for those who break the law with impressive alacrity (think of justice for Puppy Doe), but our legislation has lagged on protecting our elderly.

It only took about a year after a huge public outcry under the Puppy Doe bill to increase a sentence for a first offense to seven years from five, and subsequent penalties up to 10 years. Fines also increased to $5,000 from $2,500 for a first offense and up to $10,000 for subsequent offenses. We need a similar public outcry for our seniors.

Elder abuse goes beyond physical mistreatment. It includes psychological and emotional abuse and neglect. The most prevalent form of abuse is financial exploitation. We need to support a comprehensive public health and law enforcement approach dedicated to fighting elder abuse with scare resources and fragmented systems.

State Rep. Bruce Ayers, who serves on the Joint Committee on Elder Affairs, has filed Bill 514 to increase penalties for unfair and deceptive actions against persons with disabilities and senior citizens to $2,500 and improve education about Elder Abuse. It is a laudable step in the right direction.

I implore The Quincy Sun readers to write their representatives and senators and urge them to support this bill, along with other legislation that takes additional steps to further strengthen our elder abuse laws. We might need them ourselves one day.

JDRF Kids' Walk To Cure Diabetes Raises $32,000

On Saturday, May 30, the Quincy public elementary schools, in partnership with the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation (JDRF), along with families, friends, teachers and coworkers of Quincy Public elementary schools, participated in the fifth annual "The JDRF Kids' Walk to Cure Diabetes."

Under warm and sunny skies, several hundred walkers turned out this year to once again walk for a cure. This capped off six weeks of collecting pledges and donations by the students which included some innovative fundraising such as lemonade stands, videos and student presentations to their schools, as well as Type 1 Diabetic (T1D) children and their families sharing their personal experiences.

While pledges and donations continue to be collected and counted, thus far this event has raised over $32,000. It also gave the children in our community an opportunity to learn about healthy living and healthy eating and living lifestyles.

Our wonderful sponsors and supporters, included Hon. Mayor Tom Koch, Supt. Rick DeCristofaro, Rep. Bruce Ayers, Sheriff Michael Bellotti, City Councillors Doug Gutro and Kirsten Hughes, and Neil McCole, who volunteered as DJ and brought the New York Life National Child ID program to the event. Food and other entertainment was provided generously by the City of Quincy Food Services department, Quincy High School Culinary Program, Sparkles The Clown and friends, The North Quincy High School ROTC volunteers, and face painters, all of whom generously donated their time and talents. This year our generous corporate sponsors included: Coffee Break Café, Graeber, Davis and Cantwell, Roche Bros., Panera Bread, Patriot Cinemas, Montilio's, Sweet Frogs, Olympia Sports and Stop and Shop.

The support of the principals at each participating school, as well as the school nurses who care for many of these children on a daily basis are also recognized. The JDRF is the largest organization that funds type 1 diabetes (T1D) research in the world. Their goal is to lessen or remove the impact of T1D from people's lives until we achieve a world without T1D. More than 80 percent of JDRF's expenditures directly support research and research-related education.

There was a marked increase in the turnout and participation for this years' walk, with this year only being only the second year -- and our goal is for that to continue to grow. There promises to be more fun and excitement for our sixth annual in the Spring of 2016.

Book Signing, Special Book Reading

Quincy author Wendy Francis will make an in-store appearance and sign copies of her new novel, The Summer of Good Intentions, Thursday July 9, at 7 p.m.at Barnes & Noble, 150 Granite St., Braintree.

Set on Cape Cod, the novel revolves around the three Herington sisters and their families during one summer in the family's old Cape Cod house.

In addition to The Summer of Good Intentions, Francis is also the author of Three Good Things, and is a former book editor whose work has appeared in the Huffington Post and The Improper Bostonian. She lives outside of Boston with her husband and son.

The event is free and open to the public.

Barnes & Noble will also host a To Kill a Mockingbird Read-A-Thon, Monday, July 13 from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Readers are sought for this special reading.

Throughout the day, participants will be invited to read a favorite chapter from this iconic, and timely, novel by Harper Lee, dealing with issues of social justice.

To participate or for more information, call 781-380-3655, or e-mail crm1989@bn.com to reserve a scheduled time slot for their reading. All ages are welcomed

The Read-A-Thon is in celebration of To Kill A Mockingbird, and the July 14 publication of Go Set A Watchman.

Originally written in the mid-1950s, Go Set a Watchman was the novel Harper Lee first submitted to her publishers before To Kill a Mockingbird.

The manuscript was discovered in late 2014. It was believed to have been lost or destroyed.

The event is free and open to the public.

Summer Fun At The Library

By JULIE RINES
Thomas Crane Public Library

Are you looking for ways to keep busy this summer?

Check out the dozens of programs available at the Thomas Crane Public Library beginning Friday, June 26th as we participate in the nationwide summer reading adventure, "Every Hero has a Story."

The Thomas Crane Public Library's summer library adventure is two full months of fun for children of all ages.

Learn about reptiles, train to be a Jedi Knight or Superhero, hear concerts, listen to the stories of Anansi and Davy Crockett, show your creativity with crafts, participate in pajama storytimes, play with bubbles, watch a magic show and movies and more all for free this summer at the library.

The library offers programs for children of all ages; details are available on the library's website thomascranelibrary.org.

The fun begins on Friday, June 26th with our first weekly storytime at the Quincy Farmer's Market in the Hancock Parking Lot (across from the courthouse) where we will be telling stories at noon, weather permitting. Look for us in a shady spots near the vendor tents. Stop by to say hello, pick up summer program information and hear a story or two.

Monday, June 29th brings the start of two more weekly programs. Every Monday afternoon stop by the North Quincy Branch Library at 2 p.m. for a movie matinee. We will begin the series with Toy Story. Join Woody Buzz Lightyear and all their friends for an action packed adventure. This movie is rated G and runs for 80 minutes.

Also beginning Monday, June 29th is the return of Art-to-go a 9 week series of drop in art activities that travel throughout Quincy.

Projects are open ended to accommodate a wide age range. They are easy enough for toddlers and preschoolers to do with an adult's help and free form enough for school age children to add their own personal touch.

Children up to age 8 are invited to drop in any time between 2 and 4 p.m. to make this week's craft. The weekly craft will be at the Main Library on Mondays, Adams Shore on Tuesdays, Wollaston on Wednesdays and North Quincy on Thursdays.

Our first craft will be a starry red, white and blue wreath to celebrate the Fourth of July.

For a complete listing of all summer programs and activities check out the Events Calendar and Summer Fun section of our website thomascranelibrary.org

These programs are supported in part by a grant from the Quincy Arts Council, a local agency which is supported by the Massachusetts Cultural Council, a state agency and the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Council On Aging Trip To Wells, Maine

The Quincy Council on Aging is coordinating a day-trip to Wells, ME on Monday, July 20th.

Start the trip with a visit to When Pigs Fly Bakery. Then on to the Coastal House for chowder, bake-steamers, rolls, potatoes, corn on the cob, as well as 2 drink tickets for beer, wine or soda to go along with a choice of either (1) 2-one pound lobsters or (2) a half chicken baked. Watermelon will be served for dessert and coffee will be available.

After dinner there will be a performance by Don Who, well-known singer, comedian and impersonator, as he croons old favorites.

Cost of the day trip is $89 which includes transportation, double lobster bake with beer, wine and soda, wait staff gratuities and taxes and live show.

Escort and coach driver's gratuities are not included.

To register for the trip visit the Kennedy Center, 440 East Squantum St., Quincy. For more information, call (617) 376-1246.

Olde Kids Swing Band Performs Aug. 7

Back by popular demand the Olde Kids Swing Band will return to the Kennedy Center on Friday, Aug. 7th from 1 to 3 p.m.

The "Olde Kids" is a dance band in the style of the big bands of the 1930's and 40's. The big band recreates the glamour and romance of an era that lasted 10 years.

Retired and semi-retired musicians are part of a resurgence of interests in live, glamorous and romantic music. The band was formed in 1991 and consists of six saxes, four trombones, four trumpets, four on rhythm and a vocalist.

Tickets are required for this event and can be purchased at the Kennedy Center, 440 East Squantum St., Quincy. Suggested donation is $6. Refreshments will be provided.

For more information, call the Kennedy Center at (617) 376-1506.

Quincy Farmers Market Opens Friday At Hancock Lot

The Quincy Farmers Market opens June 26 in the John Hancock Municipal Parking Lot in downtown Quincy across from the Francis X. Bellotti Quincy District Courthouse.

For 33 years the market has been run primarily as a "producer-only" market meaning that the most of the people selling products are the ones that produce it. The ability to speak directly with the farmers and business owners is what distinguishes a Farmers Market from many other shopping experiences.

This year there are two dozen vendors - all family-run small businesses. In any given year a quarter of the vendors are start-ups. The market is an incubator for cottage-industry businesses. Beyond shopping a visit to the market is a chance to engage entrepreneurs in development of their products and business.

The market will also feature music with local musicians singing original songs along with old favorites. Among the returning musicians are Mike Delaney, Jungko Ogawa, and Bronson Bofat. Also making an appearance will be Joe Bargar, local Quincy blues legend.

The market is run by two volunteers and its operating expenses are paid for solely by the vendors. If you would like to play a role in the market contact the Market Manager, Janet Little at 339-225-2607.

Follow weekly announcements and read about the background of these businesses at www.quincyfarmersmarket.com and facebook.com/quincyfarmersmarket

Bailey Brann Awarded Elsie Frank Scholarship

Greater Boston PFLAG (Parents, Families and Friends of Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual, Transgender and Queer people) announces Bailey Brann, a 2015 graduate of Quincy High School, is the recipient of the 2015 Elsie Frank Scholarship Award.

Since 1998, Greater Boston PFLAG has awarded scholarships to high school students who have improved their school climate for LGBTQ youth and their allies and whose actions have created greater support and acceptance of LGBTQ youth.

Active in the community and in school, Brann is a member of the National Honors Society and was the recipient of the Kwanis Junior Heroes Award. A volunteer with the Gender Management Service (GeMS) program at Boston Children's Hospital, Brann is a peer mentor for transgender and questioning youth.

"My goal, my dream, is that nobody ever feels alone again when it comes to their gender identity," said Brann. "I am proud to be a mentor to anybody who feels they may belong in the LGBTQ community, whether they're questioning their gender identity or sexual orientation."

"On behalf of Greater Boston PFLAG, we are honored to recognize Bailey for making a significant difference in the lives of LGBTQ students," said Greater Boston PFLAG President Tom Bourdon. "Bailey's dedication, motivation and passion are making it better now for LGBTQ youth and we commend Bailey for making LGBTQ causes a priority in school and in the community."

Brann was honored together with nine other scholarship recipients from around the state at Greater Boston PFLAG's Pride & Passion Benefit and Auction to support Greater Boston PFLAG's work in creating safe school and family environments for LGBTQ youth. Attracting over 600 attendees, the event also recognized Representative Joe Kennedy III and Jason Collins, the first openly gay NBA player, for their commitment to changing hearts and minds, and making environments safer for LGBTQ people.

The event, held recently at the Seaport World Trade Center, was co-chaired by Sarah C. Libbey, parent and Greater Boston PFLAG volunteer, Mark Mettler, Executive at Staples, and Holly Safford, Founder and President of The Catered Affair.

Julianne's Ham & Egg Strata

By MARIE

Today's recipe was given to me by my nephew Chuck one night as we were attending my brother – his dad's – birthday.

He was telling me about his wife Julianne's egg strata she had made at a recent brunch.

When she arrived later, I asked her for the recipe. I used half of today's recipe, so if you try it, keep that in mind.

HAM & EGG STRATA

1/2 cup scallions (cut in small pieces)
1/2 pound ham (2 slices 1/4 inch thick cut in 1/2 inch cubes
8 ounces cheddar cheese
10 eggs lightly beaten
3 cups milk
salt and pepper to taste
1/2 loaf Italian Scali bread (cut into 1/2 cubes)
1 cup red and green pepper (diced)
2 tablespoons vegetable oil

In the hot oil sauté the scallions, ham and peppers. Set aside. Mix the beaten eggs with the milk, salt and pepper.

In a casserole dish, place the ham mixture, some of the cheddar cheese and then the bread. Pour the egg and milk mixture over all, and then the rest of the cheese. Refrigerate for an hour or overnight - and then bake uncovered in a 350-degree preheated oven for 55-60 minutes or until top is slightly browned and bubbly.

Decadent Summer Shake

By SUZIE

Palm Springs is known for many things, one thing they are known for are their "date shakes" and date ice cream. They use vanilla ice cream and dates as the main ingredients for the shakes.

Medjool dates are the sweetest variety (and are the one ones that can be picked and eaten fresh) and as all dates, have been a staple food of the Middle East for thousands of years. They have been cultivated since ancient times possibly as early as 4000 BC! The Ancient Egyptians used them to make wine as well. These wrinkled unfortunate looking fruits are considered a "drupe" because they possess a stone in the center.

Dates are high in fiber (for colon health), iron (for blood health), and contain B vitamins (for a healthy nervous system), potassium (for your heart), Vitamins A (for your eyes) and K (aid in proper clotting of blood), magnesium (needed for more than 300 biochemical reactions in the body), and manganese (important for skin integrity and blood sugar control)

Here is a healthy recipe for a date shake not using vanilla ice cream. This version is healthy and delicious and can be enjoyed when you want something sweet.

TOTALLY DECADENT SUMMER SHAKE

- 1/2 cup unsweetened almond or other milk of choice
- 4 pitted dates
- 1 banana, frozen
- 1/8 teaspoon cinnamon
- 1/ 2 cup ice cubes
- ½ teaspoon vanilla extract

A sprinkling of fresh nutmeg

Blend everything together in high speed blender until smooth and creamy. You can "soak" the dates in the milk for 30 minutes to make them a bit softer.

Light & Easy Shrimp Dip

By MARIE

If you are looking at a cooking show these days, they are saying to get back to basics. And one of the basic dips among many was a shrimp dip which is simple to make and light – and goes with chips or any favorite cracker.

It's even better when it's made ahead given the chance to enhance the flavors.

SHRIMP DIP

8 ounces of cream cheese (I used whipped)
4 teaspoons fresh lemon juice
2 tablespoons mayonnaise
1/2 pound cooked shrimp (cut in small pieces)

Mix the sour cream with the cream cheese. Add the remaining ingredients blending well. Refrigerate for a couple of hours or overnight. Serve with any favorite chip dip.

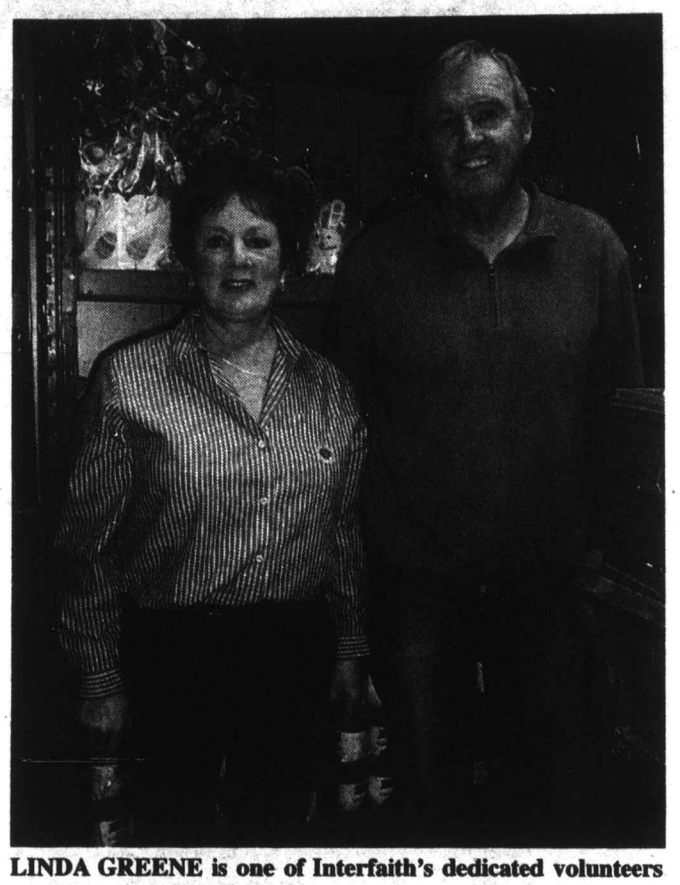
Linda Greene Interfaith Social Services Volunteer Of The Week



LINDA GREENE is one of Interfaith's dedicated volunteers serving in both the Food Pantry and Thrift Shop every week Here she is with her husband Steve as they served food pantry clients together this spring. Photo Courtesy ISS

Linda Greene of Quincy was recently selected as Interfaith Social Services' volunteer of the week. Each week over one hundred local volunteers serve at Interfaith's offices in Quincy. The comprehensive multiservice center provides assistance to families and individuals from the South Shore in need of food, clothing, housing assistance and counseling.

Greene has been volunteering at Interfaith Social Services for the past few months. She volunteers on Wednesday of each week in Interfaith's Food Pantry and their Bureau Drawer Thrift Shop. In the morning she assembles food orders for clients in the food pantry and in the afternoon she sorts, tags and displays donated items in the Thrift Shop. She also helped to assemble hundreds of Easter Baskets for Interfaith's clients this spring.

Greene began volunteering at Interfaith when she saw various newspaper articles detailing the work that the organization does for the community. She stopped by their office to ask if she could be of any service. Linda encourages people to volunteer because she believes that "...we all need to help out people in need." She loves volunteering so much that she has even brought her mom once or twice as well as her husband, Steve, who helped in the Food Pantry during the Easter season. Even as a first time volunteer Steve felt comfortable and said it was a great experience.

When asked what she likes most about volunteering at Interfaith, Greene responded, "I like to be able to help the community. It's a nice way to give back, and it's a comfortable place to be. My favorite experience has been seeing the appreciation of clients." When she's not volunteering or babysitting her two grandchildren, Linda enjoys teaching children as a literacy specialist and she loves to bowl.

With hundreds of individuals volunteering alongside civic, religious and corporate groups Interfaith Social Services has become one of the South Shore's most popular centers for volunteerism and community engagement. "Our volunteers are the heart and soul of the organization." said Interfaith's volunteer coordinator Paula Daniels. "Without their assistance our programs wouldn't be able to serve over 25,000 South Shore residents every year."

Interfaith's volunteers commit to at least one three-hour shift each week, some fulfill multiple time slots. Shifts are available between 9:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m. Volunteers work in the food pantry, thrift shop, front desk, or Career Closet. Serving in the food pantry includes assembling grocery orders for clients, restocking shelves and sorting food donations. Volunteering at the thrift shop is similar to working in a retail store. Volunteers sort through donations of clothing and household goods. They assist customers, fold clothes and organize merchandise for sale.

"Our biggest need for volunteers right now is during weekday afternoons in our food pantry," Daniels said. "We need help sorting donations and stocking the shelves to prepare for the next morning's influx of pantry clients." Interfaith operates one of the largest food pantries in Greater Boston. Last year volunteers distributed almost one million pounds of food to hungry local families.

Anyone interested in volunteering at Interfaith Social Services can contact volunteer coordinator Paula Daniels at 617-773-6203 ext. 28 or email pdaniels@interfaithsocialservices.org.

'Drug Court Taught Me How To Be A Better Person'

13 Graduate Quincy Court Program At 13th Commencement

By MIRIAM JOSEPH

So many have been impacted by drug-related crime. The Commonwealth of Massachusetts Drug Court program brings alternative methods of dealing with drug-using criminal offenders. As opposed to incarcerating them, the Drug Court program seeks to rehabilitate and guide them onto a new path in their lives.

The Quincy Division of the Trial Court Department of Massachusetts recently held its 13th commencement ceremony for graduates of the program – 13 reformed and grateful former drug users who otherwise would have been in jail.

Upwards of 150 people squeezed into the first session courtroom of the Francis X. Bellotti courthouse in support of the graduates and the program itself. Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti was there to congratulate the graduates.

The sheriff said: "My office is here not just in terms of punishment and deterrents and incarceration, but in any way we can support any creative program."

Bellotti referenced the many graduations now going on at Quincy College, UMass Boston, Harvard and BC. He told the graduates, "I see a lot of what can go wrong in terms of this process. I tell you, you got to take pride – in some ways what you've done is a lot more difficult."

Mayor Thomas Koch and Norfolk County District Attorney Michael Morrissey were also on hand to offer congratulations. The Mayor applauded the graduates for making the decision to change their lives, but reminded them all that they "were not alone in their journey."

The District Attorney said, "You took the road less traveled...this may be part of a long-term battle. It's a war and this is one big battle you have won."

The first Drug Court program in New England was initiated in 1995 in an effort to address the rise in criminal offenses, fatalities and substance abuse-related issues amongst probationers and would-be jail prisoners.

The Quincy Drug Court, established in 2001, is one of 22 which provide intensive substance abuse treatment with judicial supervision. Published statistics indicate that drug courts produce cost savings in the thousands of dollars reflecting prison costs, reduced revolving-door arrests and trials, and reduced victimization.

Keynote speaker for the ceremony was the Mass. Lt. Gov. Karyn Polito who represented Governor Charlie Baker in the day's events.

"Drug Court works.... whatever way you come to us, you should be understood and the cause of your problem should be analyzed so we can help."

Polito pointed to the city of Quincy's confrontation with a high amount of substance abuse and overdoses from opiates. "Addiction crosses every boundary...we want to help people get to a place faster so that they can get help."

Polito said, "With over 1,000 people who died in 2014 because of addiction, we know there is more work to do. There was a 46 percent increase in 2012, and that represented that year more deaths than in car accidents. When you look at numbers like that, we know that all of us need to continue to work together to make sure we reduce those numbers."

Justice MaryBeth Heffernan, now in charge of Quincy's Drug Court program replacing Associate Justice Diane Moriarty who sat on the bench at the ceremony, graciously introduced the graduates, each of whom expressed the common theme of gratitude to the court for helping turn their lives around.

Background stories included childhood drug-addiction, law-breaking, multiple arrests, abandonment of parental duties, living on the streets, and time spent in halfway houses and other treatment facilities.

Graduate Antonio Mina, who completed his program successfully in December, 2014 described himself as "broken" when he first entered the program, "kicking and screaming. I don't live my life perfect every single day, but I am trying. Drug Court taught me how to be a better employee, better father, how to be a better person. They help you be the person they know you can be."

David Devereaux said that a violation of probation brought him to drug court and that he had been battling addiction since he was 14 or 15 years old. Now 32, Devereaux said, "Negativity is just resistance. Success is completing something you set yourself up to do."

Tonya Moniz confessed, "The last time I put drugs in my body was Aug. 28, 2013. I thought the way I lived was normal. I thought people who got up every day and went to work were crazy. I just stole what I needed. I hadn't even spoken to my son in a year."

When arrested for another OUI and violating probation, graduate Paul MacEachern was facing jail time. "Dedham is a wonderful town, but not that section," he joked. "I didn't think anyone cared. I coped by drinking. Now I can call people."

Ann Margaret Forte praised the help she received at the Women's View Psychological Center of Lawrence. "Even though I was 39 years old when I entered, I was like 14...I wasn't an adult. I couldn't be trusted. I would steal your wallet and help you look for it."

Other elected officials in attendance included state Reps. Tackey Chan and John Rogers, state Sen. John Keenan, city councillors Margaret Laforest, Brian Palmucci and Kevin Coughlin, and a roomful of treatment center facilitators, law enforcement representatives, and current drug court program members.

Most of Quincy's Drug Court participants have either served or face time in jail. Each must have a surrender hearing before a judge, complete a standard inpatient program and spend time as a resident of a Half-Way, or Sober House.

Among many other requirements, these candidates are subjected to frequent drug and alcohol testing—including 'hair' tests, attendance at meetings, and participation in the Relapse Prevention and Relationships in Recovery groups.

Event organizer and probation officer Jo Rothman, referred to as "the Guru, or Drug Court Godmother," was recognized both by the court and by the graduates for her enormous contribution to the success of the program.

official visit to the country; while there, he visited the War Memorial of Korea, which includes both exhibits on the Korean War and a memorial to those who were killed during the war.

Before coming to the Consulate General of Boston, Ambassador Ohm was the ambassador for International Relations in the City of Incheon (2013). Besides his diplomatic duties, Ambassador Ohm served as director of Regional Cooperation at the MOFAT (1999), Secondment to the Preparatory Office for the APEC (2005), and professor of Korea National Diplomatic Academy (KNDA) at the MOFAT (2012.

Lawrence Norton, past commander of the Quincy Veterans Council; Veterans Council Commander Richard Keane; George Nicholson, the city's director of veterans services; and Sen. John Keenan are also scheduled to speak at the ceremony. The Rev. John Carl Swanson, chaplain for the Quincy Veterans Council, will give the invocation and benediction.

Past Commander Anthony Wolowitz will place a wreath in front of the memorial. Naseeb "Moe" Morad will sing the National Anthem and "God Bless America." Robert LaFleur will play "Taps."

Two Quincy Students Finalists In 'Genes In Space' Competition

AWHS Seniors Sarah Golden, Jacyln Shuttleworth

Two Archbishop Williams High School students from Quincy have been selected finalists in the "Genes in Space" competition.

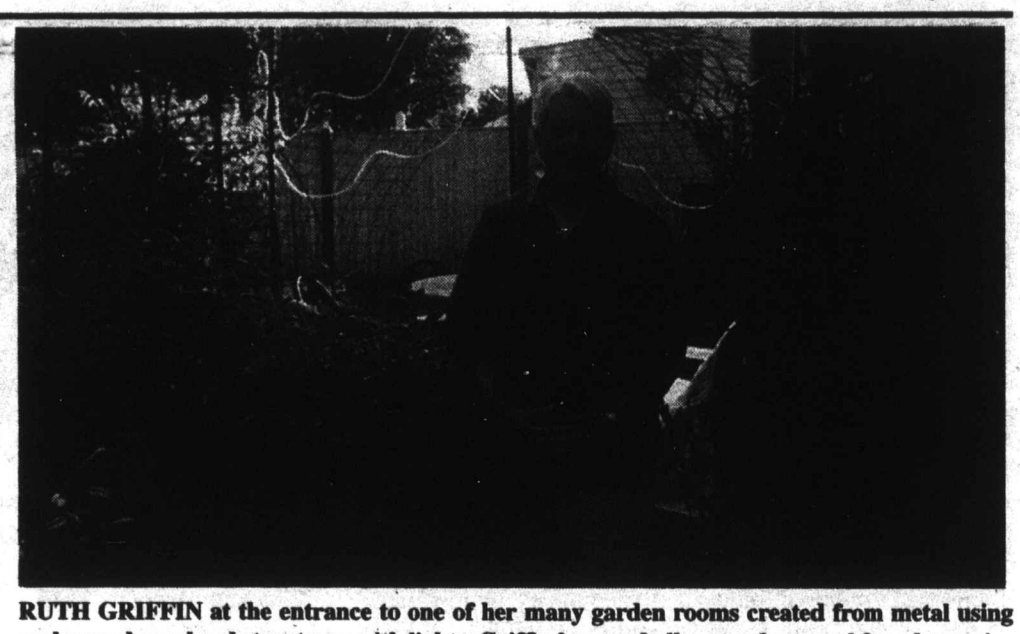
Sarah Golden and Jaclyn Shuttleworth, both members of the Class of 2016, along with classmate Jonathan Hamilton of East Bridgewater, are finalists for the competition. Their project, which focuses on the effects of radiation in space on a DNA sample, aims to find possible shielding mechanisms to protect against radiation damage. This project, which is highly advanced for high school science students, examines and tests how astronauts can survive and work aboard the International Space Station with the many radiation hazards in space that threaten them.

In the course of this research project the student researchers will have an opportunity to learn how to plan a complex scientific study using modern lab technology; how to do a statistical analysis of the DNA samples; and, how to develop the procedures that they will need to analyze the samples when they come back from Space.

The research project and proposal, coordinated by AWHS Project Manager and Science Dept. Chair, Mr. Ray Whitehouse and Lead Investigator Dr. Ralph Peteranderl, will receive mentoring from Research and Development scientists from Harvard University and Massachusetts Institute of Technology, who will help each research team finalist refine their experiments and make them feasible to test aboard the International Space Station.

Competitions like this one are meant to inspire and motivate the next generation of scientists. As finalists, the AWHS students will present their proposals to a group of top scientists at the ISS Research and Development Conference held in Boston this July. After the conclusion of the conference, the winning team will have their experiment performed aboard the International Space Station.

This competition, Genes in Space, sponsored by Boeing, The Center for the Advancement of Science in Space (CASIS), Math for America (MfA), and miniPCR seeks to foster creativity, collaboration and critical thinking among young innovators bridging the biological and physical sciences. The Archbishop Williams students were chosen from a competitive group of 330 project proposals across the country and will find out on July 7-9th if their proposal can get this Archbishop Williams High School experiment aboard the International Space Station.



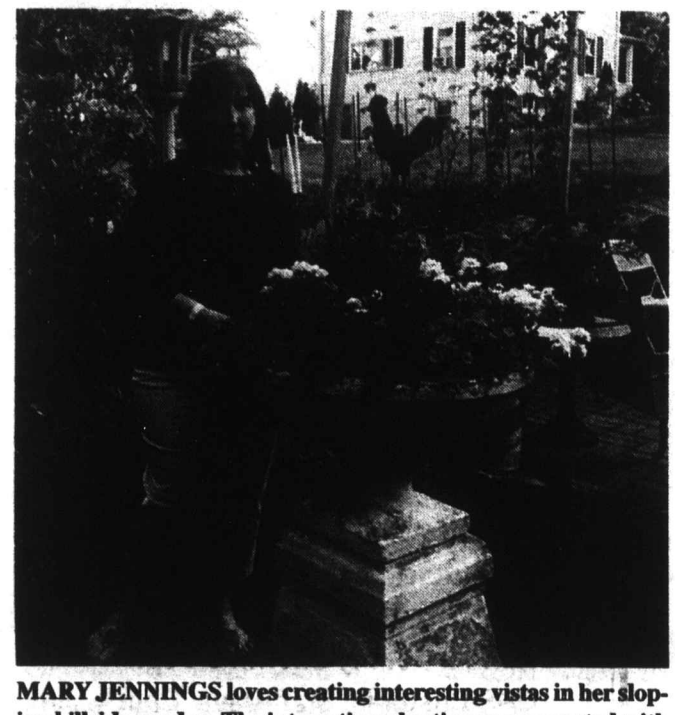
RUTH GRIFFIN at the entrance to one of her many garden rooms created from metal using arches and overhead structures with lights. Griffin has used all sorts of unusual found containers with colorful annuals and tropical plants to bring constant color to her garden. Her artistic flare can be found all over the garden and is a delight to explore.

Wollaston Garden Club Members Enjoy Annual Garden Tour

The Wollaston Garden Club, a member of the National Garden Club, Inc. and Garden Club Federation of Massachusetts founded in 1927, kicked off their annual Members' Garden Tour June 17th.

The tour focused on two beautiful gardens in the Penn's Hill section of Quincy. The tour is a social time for members to enjoy the company of other gardeners and share horticulture experiences while exploring fellow club members' gardens.

The tour began with tasty appetizers, and club members taking pleasure from the joy and quirkiness of past president Ruth Griffin's magical backyard garden. This garden has gone through dramatic change in the last ten years with the loss of a row of shade trees, leaving a new sunny planting site. Griffin's collection of unexpected antique objects and unusual natural items is carefully placed within a setting of colorful perennials and ferns. Griffin is using raised beds for plantings and uses metal structures and arbors to create entrances to interesting garden rooms. Her garden offers plenty of nesting places and water features for birds and other pollinators with a wonderful made-over garage with all the necessary supplies for creating floral arrangements and potting and planting.



MARY JENNINGS loves creating interesting vistas in her sloping hillside garden. The interesting plantings are accented with garden art. Jennings uses containers filled with lush colorful annuals to add drama and excitement. This garden is a haven for birds, its owners and lucky visitors as well.

At the second garden, members dined on sandwiches and desserts, while taking in Mary Jennings' lovely tranquil hillside garden. Located on a noisy busy main street, just stepping through the back garden gate one was transformed. This garden is relatively new (10 years) to the owners and is a work in progress. A large expanse of green grass is surrounded by lush garden beds of peonies, irises and hostas, divided by a pear tree, and a comfortable seating patio. Jennings collects antique garden art and ornamentation at yard sales and antique shops, which she has dispersed throughout her garden. Some of the varieties of plants are heirlooms from family members' gardens. This is another bird-friendly garden with its many bird houses and baths located throughout the garden.

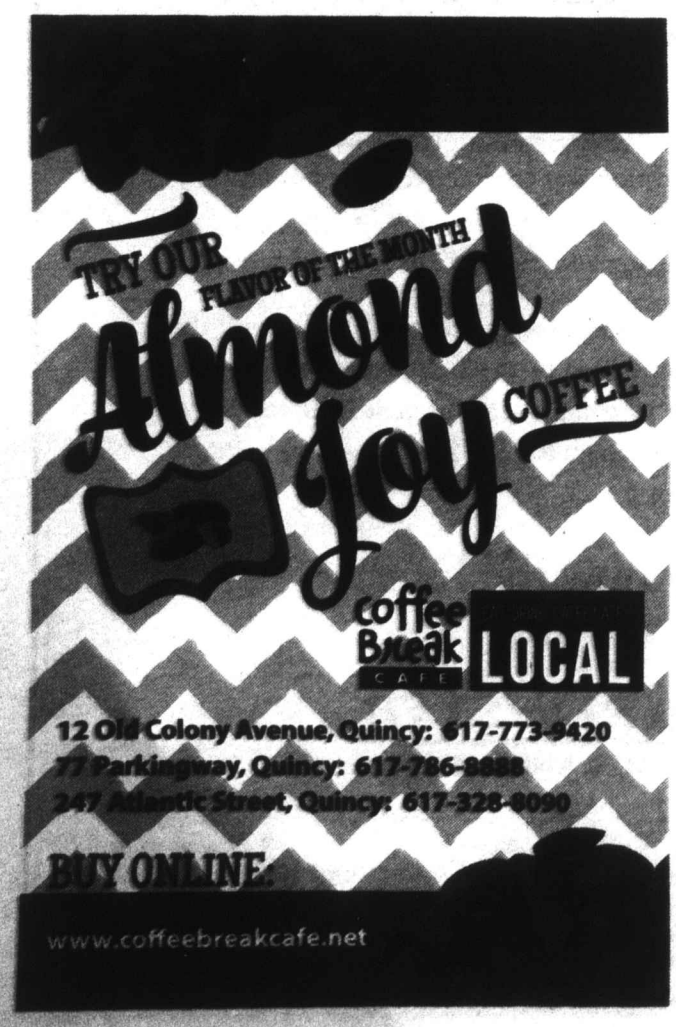
Members of the Wollaston Garden Club work in and enjoy their own private gardens during the summer. Many also work to maintain the club's many civic beautification sites throughout the city; sites such as at corner of Newport and Beale, the Thomas Crane Library Main Branch gardens, the Souther Tide Mill gardens, the Dorothy Quincy Homestead gardens, and the garden at the Josiah Quincy House.

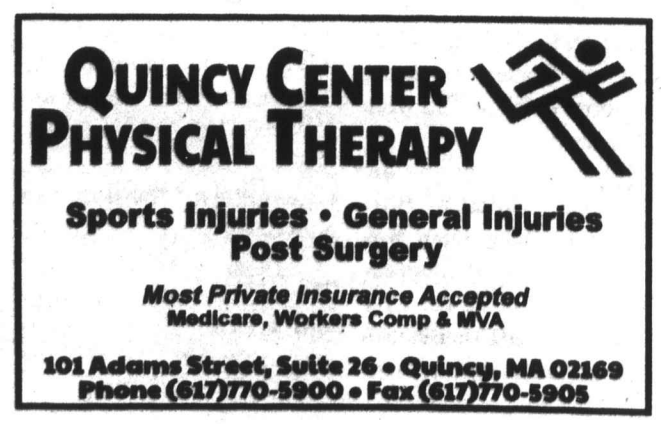
Stop & Shop Donates $770,000 To Public, Private Schools

Stop & Shop recently donated $770,000 to Massachusetts public and private schools through its school fundraising program, A+ School Rewards, for the 2014-15 school year.

Some 1,106 schools throughout Massachusetts will benefit from this fundraising program. Over $1.6 million was donated to schools in Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut this year.

Through Stop & Shop's A+ School Rewards program, participating schools earn cash for technology, scholarships, school programs, field trips, playgrounds and other educational needs. After customers designated the school(s) of their choice last fall, A+ School Rewards points were accrued with each purchase made using their Stop & Shop loyalty cards from October 5, 2014 through March 21, 2015. Customers can sign up and designate up to two local schools to participate in next year's A+ School Rewards starting this fall.





The members of the Quincy High School Senior Night Out Committee would like to thank all of the people and vendors listed below for their generous and continued support of this important event.
Over 300 of our seniors chose to attend this safe after prom party and the result was an incident free, fun filled party for our students.
We are so grateful that these people support our efforts to ensure a safe evening for our students.

City Council Seeks More Downtown Oversight

Palmucci said the URDP with the proposed amendment would no longer provide benefits to the city and its residents that were included in the land disposition agreement with Street-Works; the LDA was approved in 2011 and terminated last year after Street-Works failed to comply with its terms.

Among the benefits Palmucci said would be lacking were payments to the city's Affordable Housing Trust Fund; in the LDA Street-Works had agreed to pay $10,000 per residential unit to the fund, a total of $7 million. The developer would have also paid into a fund for the arts and agreed to hire local labor.

"There was a lot of money coming back into the city as well as benefits. The affordable housing I'd say is a benefit to the city. The art fund, benefit to the city. Using local labor, benefit to the city," Palmucci said.

"This was the policy this body – in consultation to the mayor and the residents of the city – that's the policy we reached. That's not the current policy anymore. That's not the vision for downtown anymore. It's changed because the LDA is gone.

"Those benefits are not included in this URDP. None of the policy benefits that I think we all agreed upon that were part and parcel to the redevelopment and reinvestment of downtown, I don't see them in this URDP."

Palmucci proposed adding language to the URDP that would require the City Council to approve urban redevelopment covenants, which are signed agreements between the mayor and developers relative to proposed urban redevelopment projects on privately held land. The council already has the authority to approve land disposition agreements for developments on city-owned land, such as the agreement between Street-Works and the city.

At the suggestion of Ward 5 Councillor Kirsten Hughes, Palmucci changed his proposal to give the Planning Board the ability to approve covenants. (Under the current URDP, the Planning Board approved certificate of consistency for projects in the urban redevelopment district.)

The five members of the downtown committee – Palmucci, Hughes, Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest, Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall and Councillor Doug Gutro, the committee's chairman – then voted to approve giving that authority to the Planning Board. Gutro later said he believed the council could have a role in the process but said having Planning Board approve covenants would be better than the status quo.

"I'm not sure the Planning Board is best positioned to be the public policy making body on those issues. I chose to cast that vote because it's a public place and an opportunity for that disclosure of the deal, essentially, to have a discussion," he explained. "Some teeth are better than no teeth. Transparency and public discussion I always think are beneficial."

The committee must still approve the entire URDP and then the full council must do the same. Gutro indicated he will hold at least one other meeting to review the amended URPD and will invite downtown business owners to attend.

Chris Walker, a spokesman for Mayor Thomas Koch, on Tuesday noted the proposed third amendment to the URDP as originally introduced did not expand the mayor's authority to sign covenants with developers. Nor did it alter the council's role in approving land disposition agreements with developers intending to build on publicly owned land.

The third amendment to the URDP lays out a framework for developing Quincy Center in phases over the next decade. The plan envisions 1,250 new residential units, 600,000 square feet of new office space, 125,000 square feet of retail space and 120 hotel rooms in the

Koch Sought No Changes To Permitting Process, Says Spokesman

By SCOTT JACKSON

A spokesman for Mayor Thomas Koch said the administration's proposed amendment to the Quincy Center Urban Revitalization and Development Plan would not give the administration any additional authority it did not already have under the original URDP, which was approved in 2007.

The City Council's downtown committee voted on Monday night to give the Planning Board authority to review covenants reached between the mayor and developers who plan to build on privately owned land in the URDP district. Chris Walker, Koch's director of policy and information, in a statement Tuesday said the mayor had not sought to change any regulatory process already in place. He also reiterated that the URDP itself does not include any appropriation of city funds; those appropriations would need to be approved by the council at future meetings.

"It's important to note that the administration is seeking no changes to any regulatory authority or permitting process that has existed for years under this change in the urban renewal plan, which simply sets a planning framework and administrative process for revitalization, and is not any kind of formal development proposal," Walker said.

"There is no appropriation request tied to the urban renewal plan, only a financial analysis; there are no permits being sought as part of the urban renewal plan; and there are no provisions for granting additional authority to anyone as part of the urban renewal plan. Any suggestion to the contrary is either deliberately misleading or grossly misinformed.

"The urban renewal plan is required to ensure that development proposals – when submitted – fit appropriately into a certain set of technical guidelines. It's required by the state to ensure that the city's planning strategy meets practical realities, and it needed to be changed following the departure of the original master developer [Street-Works].

"With the council's involvement, it will change again as we move forward. It doesn't change the council's extensive regulatory role for projects involving public property and it doesn't change the robust and fully open permitting process for any proposal that is ultimately submitted. The full council will need to deliberate on the committee's recommendation relative to the process for urban renewal covenants – where again no change in any authority is being sought.

"The bigger picture right now is that construction is underway on the first step of redevelopment in the West of Chestnut retail and residential project, and additional projects, including the 15-story tower in the Hancock parking lot, are currently in the design and negotiation phase prior to making a full proposal before the council. The council will have full approval authority over that project and its associated development agreement – a role it has always had."

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

MOUTH-WATERING FACTS

At first glance, the condition known as "dry mouth" (xerostomia) may seem to cause nothing more than a minor inconvenience. However, when you take into account all the important functions involving saliva, you realize how necessary it is to have dry mouth treated. To begin with, saliva contains protein molecules called "mucins" that act similarly to ball bearings to lubricate the mouth and thereby facilitate chewing, speaking, and swallowing. Saliva also helps regulate the acid balance in the mouth and provides the environment in which tooth minerals can be replaced. That is why chronic dry mouth can cause cavities and gum disease. Whenever prolonged periods of mouth dryness are experienced, a dental examination is warranted.

Saliva is also a very essential contributor to a person's ability to taste, as it acts as a solvent for the taste stimuli. We use the latest technology to help you understand all your dental options. Call us now at 617 479-6220 and schedule an appointment. We will do what is best for you, and we will not compromise. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. On average, the salivary glands produce about a quart of liquid per day.

downtown on city-owned land and privately held parcels.

The plan includes three residential developments on the city-owned Hancock Lot – a 15-story, 122-apartment high rise introduced by developer Peter O'Connell earlier this year and two other projects. A parking garage would also be built on the lot by the city.

A 116-room hotel introduced by LBC Boston for the 1500 block of Hancock Street could also be partially sited on the Hancock Lot.

New office space, and at least one other parking garage, would be built on the Ross Parking Garage.

Quincy Mutual and Gate Residential have already begun work on West of Chestnut, which includes 169 apartments and 12,000 square feet of ground floor retail and is being built on privately owned land in the 1400 block of Hancock St.

Galvcon Development has proposed for two buildings with 48 condos and 8,000 square feet of retail for 1545 Hancock St. on privately owned land.

To incentive development, the amendment to the URDP calls for $145 million in infrastructure upgrades over the next ten years. The council would need to approve those improvements individually in the future. Funding for the $145 million in public improvements would come from three main sources: District Improvement Financing (DIF) bonds, general obligation (GO) bonds, and the state's Infrastructure Investment Incentive Program (I-Cubed).

DIF bonds, which are paid for using new tax growth in the downtown, would account for $73 million of the needed money; that's in addition to the $37 million previously borrowed using DIF bonds. General obligation bonds totaling $46 million would cover the cost of new municipal parking garages and would be covered by parking revenue. I-Cubed money would go towards the construction of the Adams Green Park.

The city has brought on a consultant, DESMAN, to draw up plans for the new parking garage on the Hancock Lot, including how many vehicles it will need to accommodate. Croall said the new garage should be large enough to handle an overabundance of vehicles.

"In a downtown revitalization, isn't the goal to have an overabundance of commerce, which means probably an overabundance of vehicles?" Croall said. "I would think the taxpayers, especially those folks that are living on the periphery, they want new growth in downtown but they don't want a runoff of parking in their neighborhood."

Assistant City Solicitor Paul Hines said DESMAN's study is based on that idea.

"The study is based on that premise," Hines said. "They'll know what that number is and what the overbuild is and what the cost of the overbuild is and a policy decision will be made. All that information will be available going forward when the garage design is selected."

Gutro asked Planning Director Dennis Harrington about the importance of placemaking – designing spaces people want to go to – in urban redevelopment. The proposed amendment to the URPD includes Adams Green but not Market Square, which was Street-Works' planned public market in the vicinity of Cliveden Street.

"My estimation is simply housing does not create a vibrant downtown. It's about placemaking. This URDP is silent on placemaking from what I read," Gutro said.

"When all is said and done in five, 10 or 15 years, people are going to come here not because there is new residential buildings in downtown. It's because it's a place they want to take their family, they want to bring people to. [It has] public space, public art, whatever is necessary to attract them."

Harrington said the downtown needs open space for the public, as suggested in a serious charrettes, or community meetings, held a decade ago when plans for Quincy Center were put together.

"We do need to create a downtown that is a vibrant place that when one visits, they're reaction is 'I'm coming back.' If you don't create that reaction you don't have much of a place. A collection of six-story wooden apartment buildings is not going to be such a place," Harrington said.

"This urban development plan we have today is a phase one step. It's nothing more than an opportunity to get vertical with some new construction downtown and that's very, very important to start. But it is barebones and it doesn't present the type of plan the charrettes called for, the division plan called for, or what we hoped for with the master developer (Street-Works).

"We need to have much more robust development with mid- and high-rise buildings and we certainly don't need to eliminate proposed open space or public space in order to gain a few more wooden apartment buildings."

The Quincy Recreation Department continues the 2015 Summer Sports and More Clinics & Workshops.

The various sports clinics and instructional workshops will run throughout the summer and offer youngsters a variety of summer activities while they enjoy summer school vacation.

Enrollment is limited. Call the Recreation Office at 617-376-1394 or visit the Quincy Recreation web site, www.QuincyRec.com, for further information.

Limited openings exist for two clinics that will be conducted June 29-30 aned July 1-2.

The Sports & More Clinic #1 will be held at the Quincy Recreation Department, located at One Merrymount Parkway.

The clinic provides a week of traditional activities under supervision that will include group games and organized play like capture the flag, dodge ball, scavenger hunts, board games, arts & crafts, sports and more. This recreational experience will be planned and informal; spontaneous, and organized with plenty of fun. The clinic is open to boys and girls entering grades 3-9, and will run from 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. The cost for the clinic is $68 and includes a t-shirt for each participant.

The Girls Basketball clinic will be held at North Quincy High School. This is an instructional program with an emphasis on the fundamentals: passing, shooting, rebounding, dribbling, and defensive skills through a complete series of drills and scrimmages.

The clinic is open to girls entering grades 3–9 and will be run 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. The cost for the clinic is $68 and includes a t-shirt for each participant.

Registration can be done online at www.QuincyRec.com or in person at the Quincy Recreation Department, located at One Merrymount Parkway. For more information call 617-376-1394.

450 Participate In Quincy Public Schools Historical Walk

By SCOTT JACKSON

An estimated 450 students, parents, teachers and community members participated in a recent walking tour of 10 historic sites in Quincy Center.

The 1.5-mile Quincy Public School Historical Walk June 6 began at 9 a.m. at the new Central Middle School and included stops at the Old House at Peace field, Adams Academy, City Hall, the Hancock Cemetery, Thomas Crane Public Library, United First Parish Church, the Coddington Building, the old Central Middle School (which was also the city's first high school), and the Dorothy Quincy Homestead.

Similar historical walks had been held in the past, but those ended about ten years ago, according to John Fagerlund, coordinator of the Quincy School – Community Partnership. Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro brought back the walk this year as part of the school system's Beyond the Bell program, which included a number of other activities for students and parents over the course of May and early June after 11 days of classes were cancelled this winter.

"We used to do it and it stopped about ten years ago," Fagerlund said. "The superintendent felt it would be a great way to culminate the Beyond the Bell program and utilize many of our partners in the city."

Yellow Quincy Public Schools t-shirts, and bottles of water, were given out to those who took part in Saturday's walk, turning Hancock Street into a sea of yellow.

"At quarter of nine we were wondering where everyone was and ten minutes later we were wondering where everyone came from," Fagerlund said.

The event was such a resounding success that plans for next year's historical walk are already in the works.

"I guarantee it," Fagerlund responded when asked if the walk would be held again in the future.

"Due to the overwhelmingly positive response we're already planning next year's."

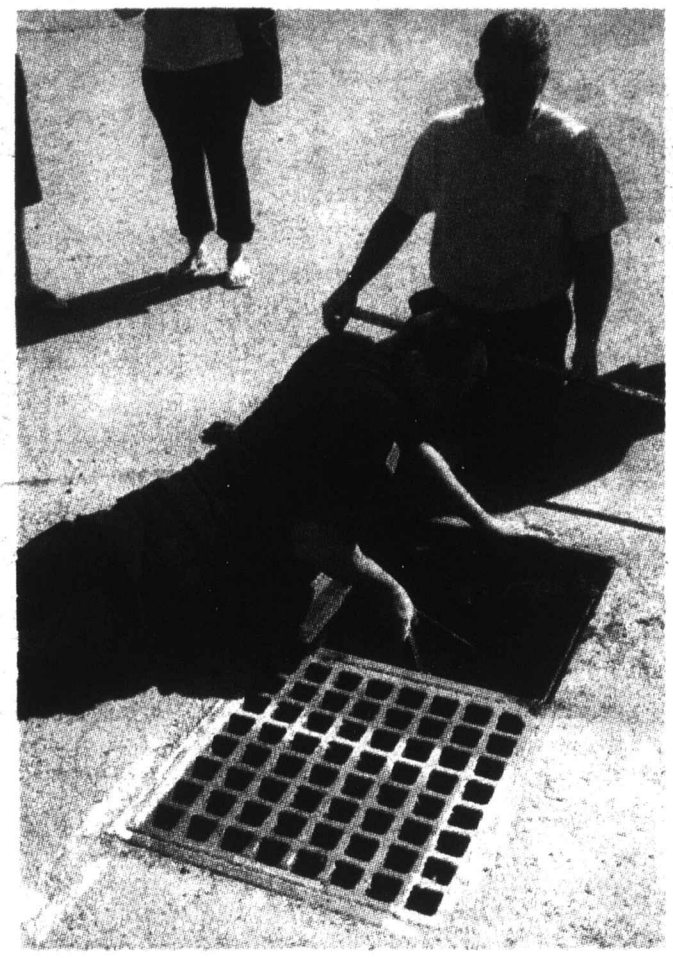
MOTHER DUCK and her ducklings before they fell into a storm drain behind the Stop and Shop Supermarket on Southern Artery.



QUINCY FIRE Lt. Paul Leonard removed the storm drain and with help from Firefighter Bill Eastwick safely removed the mother duck and her ducklings from the storm drain.

DUCKLINGS ARE SAFE inside a green plastic container after being rescued from a storm drain.

Not Your Typical Rescue For The Quincy Fire Department

The Quincy Fire Department has responded to over 4800 calls in Quincy since January 1st of this year.

Four hundred and eleven of these calls were fires and 2,715 of these calls were human rescue and emergency medical services incidents.

There was one unusual incident this year that was reported under the category of "other."

Recently, Quincy Fire Department's Ladder 1 crew responded to an unusual incident in which a mother duck and her ducklings fell into a storm drain behind the Stop and Shop building on Southern Artery in Quincy. Numerous caring citizens began to gather to observe the unusual rescue.

Ladder 1 crew quickly executed their plan. Fire Lt. Paul Leonard and Firefighter Nick Levins removed the storm drain cover and Firefighter Bill Eastwick safely and effectively removed the mother and her ducklings from the storm drain.

Following the rescue, the mother and her ducklings were brought over to the nearby town river where were they safely released.

The Quincy Fire Department is dedicated to protecting the safety of life and property for the City of Quincy, including a mother duck and her ducklings. If you should have any questions or concerns whatsoever, please do not hesitate to the Fire Prevention Bureau.

AAU 9 And Under Division

Red Stockings New England Champions

The Quincy Red Stocking Red team recently claimed the Amateur Athletic Union's 9 and under New England Championship.

This talented team, which is solely comprised of Quincy players, defeated the North Shore Tigers 7-6 in the semifinals. Down by two runs in the last of the 6th inning and down to their last out, the Quincy team showed their determination and heart by scoring three times to earn the walk-off win.

In the Championship game against the Black Stone Valley Spinners, the Red Stockings jumped to an early 8-1 lead and held on for a 9-7 victory thanks to great team defense and pitching.

On the season, the team finished with a 23-1 record and won their last 20 games. The team finished undefeated in divisional play and was awarded the number one seed in the playoffs.

This special group of players enjoyed the support of wonderful fans and families. Their coaches were proud to have the opportunity to work with these fine young individuals.

The Quincy Red Stockings were founded in 2002 by Mark Jaehnig.

Players on the championship are:

Brett Mulligan, Vinnie O'Leary, Joseph Bates, Aidan Bridges, Max Gaudiano, Keira Murphy, Ryan Messing, Zach Taylor, Seany Toland, Kyle DeBoer, John Toland, Cam Quigley and Andrew Novak

The team is coached by Tim Messing, Erik DeBoer, Sean Toland, Mark Mulligan and Fran Gaudiano.

Morrisette Downs Canton For Sixth Straight Victory

By BILL GRIFFIN

Morrisette strung together six straight victories to begin its season, but the record only tells a small part of the story.

Post 294 showed the balance between pitching, hitting and defense that good teams feature. They won games in different ways, showcasing different weapons which will serve them well throughout the summer.

They pitched. Five different pitchers started and won games. In five of its six wins, Morrisette gave a total of seven runs.

They hit. In their first three wins, they had 34 runs and 47 hits.

They made the plays. The defense was rock steady in all six games, and three exceptional plays made all the difference in Monday night's win against Canton.

Tyler Beach had three hits, stole a base and scored twice. Troy Shepherd added a clutch two-run double to back the pitching of Dave Suslowicz and Kenny Sorensen and lead Morrisette past Canton, 3-2 in a tight, well-played Zone 6 matchup at Adams Field.

"I told the players after the game that a mark of a good team is the ability to win games any way they have to. That's what we've been able to do so far this season," said coach Steve Maze.

In other action last week, Ethan Yau pitched five strong innings and Andrew Jaehnig had three hits, four RBI and scored three times in a 9-2 win over Milton. Jaehnig was 9-10 with eight RBI and six runs scored in his first two games.

Morrisette also swept a doubleheader from Cohasset. Robbie Munroe had two triples, an RBI and scored a run. Lefty Joe Cochrane allowed just three hits through five innings of work for a 5-1 win in the opener.

In the second game, Pat Keohane had a single, triple and an RBI, and Josh Helfrich gave one run and four hits through five innings in a 3-1 victory.

Against Canton, Suslowicz went the first 5 1/3, allowing four hits and one earned run while picking up his second win of the season. He controlled his fastball, curve and changeup, moving them up and down in the strike zone, changing sight lines which prevented Canton from locking in on any one pitch.

Sorensen threw his usual mixture of fastballs and breaking stuff from his usual selection of arm angles to work free from trouble in the sixth and seventh. Neither was overpowering, but each made good pitches in important situations and let the defense help him.

"We don't have a real No.1 or a real closer. What we have are a number of pitchers who throw strikes and let us make the plays behind them. The one thing I don't want is walks and so far, we've been good about that," said Maze.

Each was tough with men on base. In the first, Suslowicz ended a one-out, first-and-third threat with a pair of strikeouts. Sorensen left a runner at second in the sixth and another at first in the seventh. They are two veteran pitchers, and they know what to do when there is a threat.

"We've been able to make the big pitch when we've needed it," said Maze.

The offense came from the top of the order. Beach and Shepherd are a well-matched pair in the 1-2 spots in the order. Each can work a count, handle the bat and hit to all fields. Beach can steal a base and Shepherd can work the hit-and-run. It all works out nicely.

"The top of the order has been great all year. They complement each other. One is a lefty, one is a righty. They each spray the ball around, so they are tough to defend," said Maze.

Morrisette committed just one error, but more importantly, made three plays which helped decide the game. In the third, Munroe, Riley and Shepherd executed a perfect 9-4-5 relay which started in the bushes in deep right center to catch Joe Peccia trying for a triple after he put Canton up, 1-0.

In the fifth, catcher Aaron Clancy picked the tying run off second with two out. In the seventh, Beach put a great charge and one-motion flip on a soft tapper to short to keep the lead runner off base.

"We want to play solid, fundamental baseball. If you can get the first 21 outs of a game without giving anything away, you're usually in good shape," said Maze.

Shepherd's two-run double to left center put Morrisette up, 2-1 in the home half of the third. Nick Valencenti's bad-hop single brought home Beach in the fifth for a 3-1 lead. Canton finished the scoring with an unearned run in the sixth.

With four regulars (Jaehnig, Keohane, Greg Paulo and Adam MacCormack) missing, Morrisette went without a good deal of its thunder. Post 294 had to play a bit of small ball, scratching for runs and protecting the lead with solid defense and relief pitching. Good teams find a way.

"We had to play a little small ball. We had no choice with the players we were missing," said Maze.

Morrisette hosts Hyde Park Friday night at 7:30. The junior legion team, which started the season 4-0, hosts Canton at 5:15 p.m.

Nick Locken, Abraham Hoti Suit Up In Shriners All-Star Game

The Aleppo Shriners hosted their annual high school all-star football game, June 20, at Bentley University.

The South team scored first and maintained their lead until the final gun, winning the contest, 14-13 over the North team.

Quincy was represented by Nick Locken, captain, #65 (B.C. High) and Abraham Hoti, #66 (Quincy High).

The cost of the program is $140, which includes all books, supplies, and Red Cross fees.

Upon successful completion of the course, an American Red Cross Lifeguard Training Certificate, CPR for the Professional Rescuer and First Aid Skills will be issued.

Additional information is available on QuincyRec.com and by calling the Quincy Recreation Department, 617-376-1394.

VOICE FOR HEALTH

by Dr. Gabrielle Freedman

IMPINGED NERVE, LEG PAIN, AND WEAKNESS

"Sciatica" is generally defined as pain along one or both branches of the sciatic nerve that runs from the lower spine to the buttocks and down each leg. These nerves serve as pathways of sensation for the lower extremities. When a disc presses on a nerve root in the lumbar or sacral region, it results in pain and/or muscle weakness. Causes of "slipped discs" range from bad posture to repetitive heavy lifting. When causes of herniated discs such as tumors, infection, and spinal stenosis (narrowing of the spinal canal due to arthritis) have been ruled out, the chiropractor may work to eliminate the causes of future attacks by improving posture, strengthening back and abdominal muscles, and reviewing lifting techniques.

For some people, the pain from sciatica can be severe and debilitating. We believe stress, poor posture and accidents, including sports injuries and the like, can all stop the body machine from running smoothly. At FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we welcome you to call 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy. We offer computerized spinal scans. We are able to adjust patients sitting, standing, or lying down to accommodate any level of discomfort.

P.S. Sitting, prolonged standing, and movements involving flexing of the spine (such as knee-to-chest exercises) may worsen sciatic symptoms.

Saluting Sam Mele And The '65 Pennant-Winning Twins

could hit for power, was a helluva outfielder and had a strong, accurate arm. He had a way of looking toward second base when a runner rounded first but he would turn and throw behind him and get the out at first base. He's not in the Hall of Fame, either, but he should be."

Sam and his beloved late wife, Connie (Clemens) - a former Miss Merrymount – enjoyed Minnesota so much they briefly considered moving there. But the notoriously cold Midwestern winters put those plans on ice.

He remembers taking the plane trip to the Baseball Writers Dinner in Minnesota the winter following the 1965 season and Connie joined him. "As we're landing, she looks at me and says, 'I wouldn't mind living out here. Great restaurants, great shopping. The people are nice.

"After we landed, we got off the plane. There was no canopy to walk to the terminal. It was 22 degrees below and the wind is howling. Connie grabs my arm and we ran into the terminal.

"'You know what I said about living out here,' Connie tells Sam. "You can forget it."

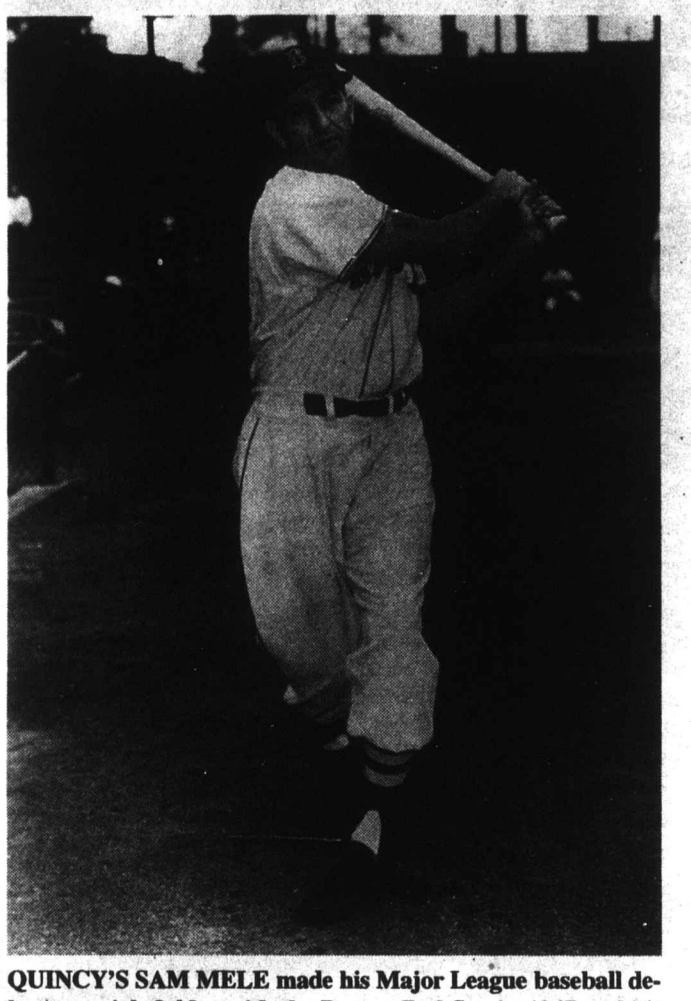
Griffin, the team owner, took them both to dinner that night. The restaurant was about a block from the hotel. "Calvin offered us a ride back to the hotel and I said, 'No, we'll walk.' That was the same night. We stopped in every doorway back to the hotel.

"The wind was blowing so cold. And Connie tells me 'remember, I'm not moving out here.'"

The Twins won the first two games of the 1965 World Series that is remembered by many because Sandy Koufax, the MVP of the 1963 World Series, refused to pitch Game One because it fell on a Jewish holiday.

Mudcat Grant won two games for the Twins that series. And you could say he got a big assist from Mele. He was wearing a pair of Sam's old spikes that season. Sam had seen the ones Mudcat was wearing and said they were too long.

"I told him, 'how can you pitch in those spikes. I gave him a pair of my spikes. He couldn't thank me enough. He won 21 regular season games that year."



QUINCY'S SAM MELE made his Major League baseball debut as a rightfielder with the Boston Red Sox in 1947 and hit .302 his rookie season. The lineup also featured outfielders Ted Williams, a future Hall of Famer, and Dominic DiMaggio. Mele also coached in the big leagues before being named manager of the Minnesota Twins in 1961. He led the Twins to the American League pennant 50 years ago in 1965.

Kaat outdueled Koufax in Game 2 winning 5-1 and contributed a two-run double in the eighth inning. But Koufax won Game 5 shutting out the Twins 7-0 and giving up only four hits. The Dodgers took a 3-2 Series lead and won Game 7 again behind Koufax

The 1965 World Series was not the only time Sam and Sandy had crossed paths.

Ten years earlier, Mele – playing for the Cincinnati Reds – faced a young Koufax who was trying to earn his first major league victory pitching for then Brooklyn Dodgers at Ebbets Field. Koufax won the game and gave up only two hits – one of them a double to Sam Mele.

After Game 5 in 1965, Sam was on his way from the clubhouse to the team bus that would take the Twins back to their hotel. He notices Koufax standing near the Dodgers' clubhouse, wrapped in a towel.

"I said, 'Nice game, Sandy.' And he points to me and says, "you got a hit off me.' This is 10 years later. He remembered.

"And I said to myself, if he remembered that, he must remember everybody that he faced, too. He threw four no hitters in 12 major league seasons.

"He's a helluva guy."

Sam says the Twins were disappointed when they got beat in the World Series. "But before everyone took off for home, I called the team together and I couldn't thank them enough. It was a great, great season."

In the den of Sam's house are baseball memorabilia. There's a photo of Sam and Ted Williams, a great friend and one of the greatest hitters who ever lived. The black and white glossy is from 1947 – Sam's rookie season. They played the outfield along with another great friend, Dominic DiMaggio.

There's also a portrait of Sam from his Twins' managerial days and his 1965 American League Manager of the Year Award. It's a special momento but Sam says there's something missing from it.

"What they should have done is put all the players' names on that award. I didn't do it. I just had to keep them happy and make certain moves. They did the pitching, they did the hitting, they did the fielding.

"Their names should be on that award."

Congratulations and a tip of the cap, Sam. Get ready to take another bow on Aug. 1. Nice guys do finish first.

Enough residents signed contracts to ensure those who participate will receive tier five pricing, the highest discount possible, according to Rebecca McWilliams, the lead organizer for Solarize Quincy.

"The response has been stellar. We are so excited," McWilliams said. "In general, communities tend to hit the tier five, lowest pricing, in the last week of the program. We're ahead of the schedule."

As a result of reaching tier five, which Solarize Quincy accomplished once residents signed up for installations totaling 200 kilowatts, all who participate will receive solar panels at a cost of $3.08 per watt. The tier five pricing applies to all who participate, regardless of when they signed their installation contract.

"That is the lowest possible pricing," McWilliams said. "You're not going to find that from any of the other vendors selling solar in Quincy. It is a real deal."

The next step is reaching tier six, which would require contracts for installation with a total of 400 kilowatts. If that tier were reached, SolarFlair would install solar panels for free at a non-profit in the city; the non-profit would be randomly selected from those who apply. McWilliams explained that for a non-profit to be eligible, it must own its own building, be registered as a 501(c)(3) organization, be in a location suitable for solar power, and a leader of the organization must apply for the installation.

"It's a good way to do outreach and talk to large organizations, like churches, and say 'if you haven't yet told your congregation this is an opportunity and if they get signed contracts it gets you closer to potentially winning a system,'" McWilliams said.

Those who wish to participate in the program can do so by signing up for a free assessment online at solarizequincy.weebly.com; McWilliams can be reached by email at solarizequincy@gmail.com.

SolarFlair completes the assessment using an overlay map to determine if the property is in a suitable location – not obstructed by trees or other buildings, for example. The company will also look at the orientation of the roof. A south-facing roof is best, but those facing east or west are also acceptable. North-facing roofs won't work because they don't get enough sunlight.

After the assessment, SolarFlair would then reach out to the property owner to schedule a site visit. A specialized camera is used to measure how much sunlight the roof receives,

After that, SolarFlair would draw up a proposal for an installation if the house were a suitable location. Residents have until June 30 to accept the proposal and sign a contract for the installation to be eligible for the Solarize Quincy pricing.

McWilliams said it's still not too late to sign up and begin the process.

"It's not too late, she stated. "We will make it work."

SolarFlair has begun installing the new PV systems and McWilliams said the company is aiming to complete all installations by the end of the year. SolarFlair has until June 30, 2016, to finish them all under terms of the Solarize initiative, which allows homeowners to complete any repairs they feel is necessary.

"In a complicated situation where the homeowner may say 'we're going to replace the roof first' and the roof is done being replaced in March of 2016 we still have until June 30, 2016, to do the solar," McWilliams explained.

"I'm one of those people who has signed a contract and I've asked them to bump it a little bit because I need to do some work on my house first."

Each homeowner has the option of purchasing the new panels outright or entering a power purchase agreement. Through a power purchase agreement, also before Boston 2024 put forward the plan to hold beach volleyball events at Squantum Point Park.

Public Meeting On Olympic Volleyball Plan July 9

"How can I support it or have an opinion on it? How can anyone form an opinion about this without knowing the details of the plan?" Palmucci said.

"There was not a very transparent process. I am hoping there is going to be one going forward...It all seems very odd to me, the speed of it."

Boston 2024 CEO Rich Davey, Koch, and Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti announced the venue proposal June 17.

"Our proposal to bring beach volleyball to Squantum Point Park demonstrates our commitment to strengthening the bid by collaborating closely with communities across the city and state," Davey said in a statement.

"The park provides a postcard-perfect backdrop for Olympic beach volleyball, and, through our proposed private investments to prepare for the games, provides an opportunity to enhance the park and open more ferry access to Quincy's waterfront. We are grateful to Mayor Koch for his partnership and eager to continue discussions with the community to share the long-term benefits of hosting the 2024 Games."

Koch said he was happy the July 9 community meeting had been scheduled.

"Boston 2024 represents a tremendous opportunity for our entire region, an opportunity we all know can only be captured with the active involvement and support of the community," Koch said. "And to that end I am pleased that one of the very first things Boston 2024 has done as part of its Quincy venue proposal is to schedule a community meeting to share its vision, answer questions and address any concerns our residents would have."

Bellotti, a resident of Squantum, said hosting the beach volleyball events would showcase Quincy to the world.

"Hosting an Olympic event in Quincy would give us a once-in-a-lifetime chance to showcase the city to the world," Bellotti said. "It will bring tourists and new investment and lead to new improvements in the park. I am so proud to support both Boston's Olympic bid and the choice of Squantum Point Park for beach volleyball."

Boston 2024 had originally planned to host beach volleyball events on the Boston Common, a plan that was met with criticism.

The organizing committee's initial plans included shooting events on Long Island in Boston Harbor. Last week, Boston 2024 announced they would be held in Billerica instead.

The United States Olympic Committee in January chose Boston as the American city to bid for the 2024 games, beating out Los Angeles, San Francisco, and Washington, D.C. The USOC's final application to host the games is due by Sept. 15.

The IOC will select a host in September 2017. Rome, Paris, Istanbul, and Johannesburg are among a number of international cities that may bid against Boston for the games.

refered to as a lease, a homeowner would agree to leave the solar installation in place for 20 years and receives a discounted rate for electricity.

McWilliams said all 41 homeowners that had signed contracts as of June 18 opted to purchase the panels instead of entering into a power purchase agreement.

"One of things were discovering is early adopters – people got solar two, three, five years ago – were really interested in being hands off, no maintence. They didn't want to own it," she said.

"As it's become mainstream, people are saying 'well the installer will still come out in ten years during the warranty period even if I own them.' That's just a comfort level thing as solar becomes more common."

McWilliams said solar panels add roughly $15,000 to a house's resale value, approximately the same as the cost to install the panels if purchased outright.

There are a number of financial benefits to having the panels installed, she added. Residential homeowners are eligible for a one-time federal tax credit equal to 30 percent of the installation cost and a $1,000 state rebate. Additionally, those who purchase solar panels can obtain a Solar Renewable Energy Certificate (SREC) for each kilowatt of electricity produced. SolarFlair has contracted with a company to file SRECs for homeowners.

Aside from tax credits, owners of solar panels can sell excess electricity to their utility provider and receive a credit for a future bill.

Solarize Quincy held seven community meetings throughout the city– the first took place March 17 and the final one on Monday – and hosted two solar open houses so residents could check out solar systems themselves. The organizers also attended numerous city events to provide information to interested residents. McWilliams said there was a lot of interest from the community.

"People tend to be interested. I think what we're finding is that people that solar is a good business decision," she said. "Because it's a city-sponsored program, people have been more open to it knowing we have volunteers that are community activists trying to encourage people to adopt renewable energy. It's not that we're sales people. We're actually trying to help reduce carbon emissions. I think that's gone over well."

said the new proposal would be less disruptive to the surrounding area.

"Unlike the Marian Manor proposal where the parking was all surface parking on site, this project will include structured parking underneath the buildings, which allows for the development not to utilize much of the mature growth and green space and therefore limit the disruption to the natural environment in that area," Fleming said.

Five Ricciuti Drive residents said they opposed the project because of traffic concerns on Ricciuti Drive and the intersection at the bottom of the hill where Ricciuti Drive, Willard Street and an off ramp from I-93 meet at the bottom of the hill.

"I don't really see how anybody sitting at this table can rationalize how one roadway coming down from that golf course is going to be able to accommodate, which it currently does not," Dan McLaughlin, a resident of 10 Ricciuti Dr., said. "It's not even close. Trust me, I live there."

Dahianna Lopez, who resides at 333 Ricciuti Dr., also opposed the project.

"I am against the development. I just feel there is way too much going up there," she said. "The way it's set up right now is convenient and really helps a lot of professionals, but the more you add to the space, the more problems you're going to have."

David Wahlgren – the park manager at Cunningham Park, a private residential development at 75 Edge Hill Road in Milton – opposed the project because of concern over stormwater runoff from the new complex.

"We're concerned about the water coming down out of this project," he said. "After Quarry Hills and what we had to deal with with Quarry Hills we're concerned about what it's going to do to Cunningham Park."

Among those who backed the project was former Mayor Walter Hannon, representing Granite Links.

"We are very satisfied with the project. We like it. We look forward to it," Hannon said. The former mayor also asked the council to include language in the permit limiting the height of the new buildings to what the applicant has proposed so the view of Boston from Granite Links wouldn't be impeded.

Al Bina of the Quincy Quarry and Granite Workers Museum, which is in the process of restoring the nearby Lyon's Turning Mill, said the proposal would be beneficial from his perspective.

"This will be a great benefit for the city of Quincy and also it will give us exposure up in that historic quarry area, which has really been neglected over the years. We're trying to bring it back; we're trying to save this history," Bina said. "I think this project here will bring people up to that area and only enhance our operation at the Lyon's Turning Mill."

Representatives from two labor unions – Sean Callaghan, business agent for Local 103 IBEW, and Mark Burns, business manager for Laborers Local 133 – both supported the project, noting their unions had reached agreements with the developer. Callaghan, a South Street resident, also explained that the increased traffic would slow vehicles down, which improves safety for children who play on the fields off Ricciuti Drive.

"I have two young boys that are active in the sporting community and they play up there – baseball and soccer – on those fields. One side effect people never talk about with traffic and cars is traffic actually slows people down. The slower cars are going, the happier I am when you're talking about those fields up there," Callaghan said.

"Keep that in mind when you're saying you're generating traffic. We are in an urban neighborhood and the slower people go, the better off we are."

One resident of Ricciuti Drive did speak in favor of the project, though he did acknowledge traffic problems in the area.

The applicant did not present information relative to traffic at the public hearing June 16; they will do so during the September meeting.

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci, whose district includes Ricciuti Drive and surrounding neighborhoods, said the concerns he had going into the meeting were the same ones raised by those who spoke at the hearing.

"I think what we have here is a half-formed plan – it might be close to being done but not quite there yet. I'm not going to ask any specific questions tonight; I think the concerns I have were more passionately raised by the folks who spoke during the public hearing. I know the proponent heard that and I trust they'll take that to heart, they'll review those comments and come back with a discussion on them and ready to answer the concerns raised," Palmucci said.

"Obviously the highest of import is the traffic impact."

Palmucci also requested several other pieces of information. Among them are a list of regulations for interstate off ramps, so he could see what the city could or could not do at the intersection at the bottom of the hill; previous traffic studies undertaken on Ricciuti Drive; information on police and fire response times for Quarry Hills; analysis of the safety of wood-framed buildings compared to steel-framed ones, because several residents identified that as an issue; and projections of how many school-aged children would be living on site, since about half the units will have two bedrooms, and an analysis of that impact from Quincy Public Schools officials.

Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest asked about the possibility of providing shuttle service to and from the new apartment complex. Fleming said the developer does not anticipate that being necessary, but if that were needed it would likely be done in cooperation with Granite Links and other residential complexes in the vicinity.

Sheriff's Office Earns Perfect Score In Audit

Norfolk County Sheriff Michael G. Bellotti and his staff at the Norfolk County Correctional Center recently earned a 100 percent score in an audit of their home confinement program by the American Correctional Association (ACA).

"It's an admirable program and I hope others around the country will adopt it," said Stephen Arnold, an ACA auditor and former corrections supervisor from Arkansas, about the Norfolk Sheriff's Office program.

Both Arnold and fellow auditor William Brand, a retired Mississippi Department of Correction supervisor, said they were impressed by the effectiveness of the program and also praised the professionalism of the Norfolk Sheriff's Office (NSO) staff and the cleanliness of the correctional facility.

"Sheriff Bellotti believes in accreditation. It starts at the top. And from the top to the bottom, everything is in place," Arnold said.

Brand added, "The people here take pride in where they work."

The recent audit marked the fourth time the NSO's Electronic Incarceration Program has earned a perfect score. The program uses electronic ankle bracelets for carefully chosen offenders, allowing them to work at a job during the day and then be confined to their homes at night. The bracelets carry a GPS chip that enables staff to closely monitor the whereabouts of the offender.

The program prepares the offenders for their return to society when their sentence is completed and enables them to have employment already in place when they are released.

"Rock Solid Security"

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Friday June 12, 2015, at approximately 6:45 p.m., Officers Gregg Hartnett and Mark Smith were dispatched to a West Quincy address for a reported domestic violence call. Communications advised responding Officers that there are prior incidents of domestic violence at the address.

Officer Hartnett arrived and approached the front door, where he could hear people arguing on the second floor. The front door was open so the Officer entered and announced that he was the Police. He made his way up the steps and found a 16-year-old male and an older female fighting in the bathroom. He ordered them to cease but when that didn't work, he attempted to separate the male and female.

Officer Hartnett then directed the female downstairs to speak with Officer Smith who was just arrived on scene. The female was enraged as she continued trying to attack the male. It took both Officers to get the female down the stairs as she continued yelling, screaming, banging things and trying to get back up the stairs. Officer Smith had to block the stairs so that she could not make her way back to the second floor.

The male, now in one of the second floor bedrooms, gave his name and said that the female was his mother. He said that his younger brother was sleeping downstairs. A third cruiser was requested to the scene because the mother had not calmed down. Officer Michael Howie was dispatched to the scene.

When asked what happened, the 16 year old son said that his mother arrived home and became very angry, yelling at him. He said that she sometimes drinks wine coolers and can not handle alcohol. He added that she was bi-polar but does not take any medication. After arguing with his mother, she told him that he had to leave the house. He started to gather his belongings but she stopped him and then went into his bedroom, where she began smashing all of his belongings, ripping pictures off the wall and pulling drawers from his dresser. He said she began hitting and scratching his face and also assaulted him with a four foot stick that was part of fishing net. The Officers noted the scratch on his face, neck and another near his right eye was bleeding. There was also a mark on his torso from where he said she struck him with the stick. (Photos were taken of his injuries, ransacked room and fishing net).

Fallon Ambulance responded to the scene to examine the victim's injuries and to evaluate the mother who was still upset. There were no visible injuries to the mother. Fallon EMTs advised the Officers that the mother would need to be transported to the hospital to be examined.

Once the mother was medically cleared, Officer Hartnett placed her under arrest for "Assault and Battery on a Family/Household Member and Assault and Battery with a Dangerous Weapon (stick of fishing net)." Officer Howie transported the 48-year-old Quincy resident to Quincy Police Headquarters, where she was booked in the usual manner by Sergeant Dennis Maloney. Both the victim and his younger brother were juveniles, so they were transported to South Shore Hospital by Fallon Ambulance because there were no other adults on scene to care for them. The mother did state that DCF was already involved in family matter due to past incidents.

Officer Smith followed the ambulance to the South Shore Hospital and then contacted the DCF emergency hotline. DCF advised that a team would be activated and sent to the hospital. The two children were eventually turned over to their older sister by DCF. Once the booking process was complete, the mother complained of chest pains and was transported to Quincy Medical Center for evaluation. Nice Work!

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Although you don't like to change plans once they're set, once again, you might find that doing so can make a big difference in your favor. Family matters dominate the weekend.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You continue to get encouragement for your proposals, including some support from unlikely sources. Use this positive flow to move forward with your plans. Good luck.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Family matters are dominant this week. It's a good time to be with those you love. It's also a good time to contact and reunite with loved ones with whom you've lost touch.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Be careful not to allow differences of opinion to create unpleasant feelings, especially in the workplace. A neutral observer could check out the situation and suggest a resolution.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) While the Lion's Den is the center of attention this week, with family matters dominating much of your time, workplace issues are also important. Try to find a balance between them.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) The future of a new relationship could depend on how much the usually impatient-to-get-things-done Virgo is willing to stop pushing and let things happen naturally.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Worry over a loved one's well-being is eased with good news from a sympathetic source. Your continued show of love and support is important. Stay with it.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) This is a good time to consider mending fences with someone you wish was back in your life. Forget about blame, and focus on the good things you once shared.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) This is a good week to start researching information regarding whatever changes you're considering, whether it involves a new home, a new location or a new job.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A long-anticipated job opportunity could turn out to be less than you expected. But appearances might be deceiving. Check it out before you decide it's not for you.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Good news: Adapting to a new situation might come more easily than you expected. You can look for continued support from colleagues who appreciate your contributions.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Someone you care for might need more reassurance from the typically "unemotional" Pisces. Go ahead. Open up, and you might be surprised at what you find when you do.

BORN THIS WEEK: You are a romantic at heart, although you can be amazingly practical when you need to be.

Mr. Bezanson died suddenly June 20.

He was the son of George (deceased) and Alberta Bezanson of Hanover, brother of Alex Bezanson and his wife, Lisa, of Abington, the late Linda Bezanson-Harmon of NH, and the late Steven Bezanson of GA. He is survived by his wife of 38 years, Marirose (Kelley) Bezanson, his son, George Kenneth Bezanson III, and daughter, Christina (Bezanson) Dunbar and her husband, Jason. He is also survived by sisters-in-law Cynthia (Locke) Shelton of LA, and Dr. Carolyn Kinzer-Bezanson of St., GA, and her children and his ex-daughter-in-law, Elizabeth Bezanson. He leaves behind his three grandchildren, Isabella Bezanson, Ella Dunbar and Jude Bezanson, who best knew him as "Pop Pop."

Mr. Bezanson was an accomplished builder and the owner of several businesses, including Compass Construction. For him, his family was everything, and he loved to spend time with them. If you had the pleasure of knowing them, you were already aware that he and his wife were the definition of true love. They spent 43 amazingly love-filled years together, and not a day goes by that he will not be truly missed. He was his family's rock, and with his guidance they will be able to find peace and strength to get through this difficult time.

Visiting hours are 4-8 p.m. today (Thursday) at the funeral.

Interment at Duxbury Cemetery.

Memorial donations may be made to the HUG Foundation of MA, 943 (R) Brockton Ave., Abington, MA 02351.

Discover Quincy Free Activities

By MARGARET LaFOREST
Executive Director, Discover Quincy

The Quincy Farmers Market opens for the season this Friday in the Hancock Parking Lot. One of the oldest farmers markets in Massachusetts, vendors work family farms, some over 100 years old. All produce is picked within 24 hours of sale.

More than a market, it's a true piece of Americana featuring local small businesses, family activities, and live music. Open Fridays, June 26 - Nov. 20, 11:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. SNAP, WIC, SFNMP, and credit cards accepted.

The Gallery, Quincy's Pop Up Art Gallery in the Old Woolworth's Building had a very successful opening night with over 500 in attendance. Featuring work of more than 70 local artists, exhibits featuring the work of students and members of the Quincy Art Association, this free event is family friendly and welcomes all generations.

Artwork is for sale and there is a cash bar. With DJ Stenny getting the entertainment started, the Maggy's Lounge Jazzworks Ensemble led by Rich Keneally will headline starting at 8 p.m.

Melvin R. Mallock

Funeral services for Melvin R. Mallock of Quincy were held yesterday (Wednesday) at 1:30 p.m. a Stanetsky Memorial Chapel, Brookline.

Mr. Mallock died June 20.

Beloved husband of Judith (Goldstein) Mallock. Devoted father of Alan Mallock and his wife Makiko Ishimochi of Japan, Daniel and his wife Kendra Mallock of TN, and Audrey Mallock of Weymouth. Cherished grandfather of Rachel and Ilana Mallock and Graeme and Madeline Goetz. Loving brother of Harold Mallock and his wife Marilyn of Chestnut Hill. Loving uncle of many nieces and nephews.

Interment at Beth El Cemetery, West Roxbury.

Memorial observance was held immediately following services at the home of Judith Mallock.

Memorial donations may be made to the Parkinson Disease Association, 72 East Concord Ave., Boston, MA 02218, or Brandeis University, C/O Judaic Studies Department, 415 South St., Waltham, MA 02453.

Janet E. Conley, 83

Funeral services for Janet E. (Bailey) Conley, 83, of Quincy and formerly Braintree will be private.

Mrs. Conley died suddenly June 19.

Born in Everett in 1932, she was the daughter of the late Andrew P. and Mary (Fitzgerald) Bailey. Mrs. Conley was the middle child of eight children. She was predeceased by her husband Timothy W. Conley, five sisters, and a brother.

She worked in retail sales for decades, notably selling cosmetics at Jordan Marsh in Boston and Remick's in Quincy before helping to manage Anderson Little Clothing Store in Quincy. She is survived by her daughter Mary Conley, son-in-law James Bidwell, and her two grandchildren Astrid and Eliza.

Visiting hours are 4-7 p.m. today (Thursday) at Hamel, Wickens & Troupe Funeral Home, 26 Adams St., Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to Interfaith Social Services, Quincy.

James J. Callahan

A funeral Mass for James J. Callahan of Quincy will be celebrated at 10 a.m. today (Thursday) in St. Ann's Church, Quincy.

Mr. Callahan died June 20.

Beloved husband of 45 years to Luz (Mayorga) Callahan of Quincy. Loving father of Sandra Callahan Merrick and her husband Brian Merrick of Quincy, Patrick J. Callahan and his fiancée Kalindi Doshi of NY, and Drisco Leyva of Fall River. Grandfather of Michael Callahan Merrick. Predeceased by two brothers and two sisters and several nieces and nephews.

Visiting hours were 4-8 p.m. yesterday (Wednesday) at Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy. A celebration of life service will be held there at 9:15 a.m. today, prior to the Mass.

Interment at Massachusetts National Cemetery, Bourne.

Memorial donations may be made to the Home For Little Wanders, 780 American Legion Highway, Roslindale, MA.

Ask John Paul: AAA's Car Doctor

My 12-year-old 2003 Kia Spectra will not start sometimes in park. When this happens if I force the shifter into neutral I can get the car to start. The repair shop replaced the range switch for $240.00 and it was okay for a week. Now the car is acting up again. A new mechanic checked the car and couldn't find anything wrong, now what?

I would have the garage that did the initial repair look at the neutral safety switch. The neutral safety switch will not allow the car to start unless the car is in park or neutral. This switch is located on top of the transmission.

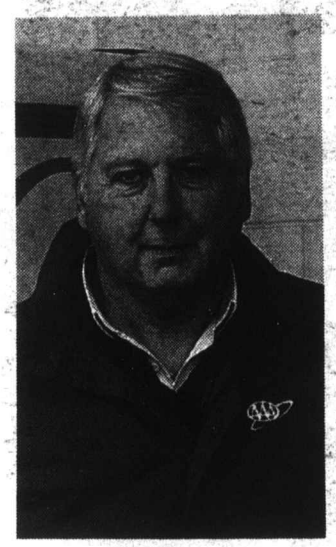
I just purchased a five year old Toyota Tacoma from a used car dealer on the other side of town. When it first starts it revs up to 1800 rpm, stays there for 30 seconds, goes to 1500 rpm for another 15 seconds. The thing is practically un-drivable and probably shouldn't have been sold in this condition, when I returned to the used car lot the manager said "they all do it". Is this a well-known problem?

I have driven several models of the Toyota pick-ups and don't remember the high idle issue you are experiencing with your vehicle. There is something wrong with this truck that needs repairing. Inconsistent idle can be caused by any number of reasons. The technician should take a look at the air intake system, air conditioning signal, electronic control module and possible vacuum leaks.

My son will be taking a car to college in Amherst this year is there something you can recommend in case of an emergency?

It is always a good idea to keep an emergency kit in the car with extra oil, coolant, washer fluid, jumper cable or "jump-box" and of course a AAA membership. The other thing you should consider is helping your son with driving emergencies. There is a great crash-prevention school called InControl (www.driveincontrol.com). I recently took this 4 and a half hour course with my wife and found both the classroom and behind the wheel drills very beneficial and potentially life-saving. .

When buying a new car where can I find out important information such as how much oil does the engine hold, if it has a timing belt, when that belt needs changing and other important information? Over the years I have found both the dealer and the owner's manuals to be wrong. In my last car the oil refill information was off by a full quart.



JOHN PAUL

The owner's manual is usually a good place to start, but like you, I have seen wrong information (misprints). Today, many vehicle manufacturers are putting the important information owners need online. Many professionals use AllData, as a technical database. What I like about this system as opposed to print material is it is internet based and if there is wrong information it can be corrected almost immediately. AllData (www.alldata.com) does have a consumer version which can be purchased for one make of car and is quite inexpensive.

By the way when it comes to oil changes, I always find the dipstick

I have a 2003 Buick that the power steering is very stiff. This was my mother's car and it spent its life in Pembroke Pines Florida. The problem started to show up as the weather has gotten warm. It seems to me it would be worse when the weather cools down not when it warmed up. The other issue is the steering wheel does not return when I turn a corner. Does the car need a new steering gear system?

The steering wheel not returning may be the clue. It is possible that one of the strut bearings or even a ball joint or tie rod has started to seize up. This could be both causing the hard steering and poor wheel return. In addition the hard steering could be a result of a worn power steering pump, loose belt or badly contaminated power steering fluid. As a start, with the car's front wheels off the ground it should be easy enough to check for a binding bearing or ball joint by moving the wheels left to right with the engine off.

St. Yves School Haiti Fundraiser Success

The third annual fundraiser to rebuild Saint Yves School in Haiti took place on Sunday, May 3 at the Knights of Columbus Hall in North Quincy.

The benefit was greatly successful thanks to the generosity of businesses and private citizens of Quincy who attended in large numbers to show their support for Saint Yves School.

The festivity was launched with a marvelous blessing given by the Rev. Karen Palmetier of the Quincy Covenant Church. Soon after, there were several exotic tunes from the Haitian music repertoire played to entertain the crowd. Then a lavish Haitian goulash with an American dinner was served with the help of Mr. and Mrs. Ann Morash and Mrs. Ly Szeti. The buffet included Italian gourmets tastefully prepared by Gennaro Eatery.

While the attendees were still dining there was an opportunity to buy chances among the wide range of gift certificates and baskets decorated by Gail MacDonald, Cindy Mullen, Christine Leblanc, Sandra Guttieres. The Vicar of Sacred Heart Collaborative Church in North Quincy, Father Joe came and blessed the crowd once more.

Soon after, Tufts Health Care presented a huge donation of back packs and school supplies for the students through its representative, Fedra Ferro. At 7 p.m. Velocity Dance Company under the direction of Miss Erica and Mr. Vince presented an outstanding show of dance before the guests. Velocity's performance kept everyone breathless.

The Atlantic Orchestra also offered a superb concert under the direction of Mrs. Susan Bill. The lyrics of La Dessalinniene, the National Anthem of Haiti, were sang eloquently in French by Grace L' Or and Kimi Valle accompanied by the orchestra. Finally came the time of distributing the gifts. Most everyone got a door prize, courtesy of many businesses of Quincy. Among the winners were John and Lucy Fair who won several prizes.

When it was time to close Domino Pizzeria and Papa Gino's treated the remaining attendees with a lavish distribution of tasty pizzas. Everyone went home smiling. The committee and Marie-Denise Fabien thank all sponsors.

The rebuilding takes place by adding each year a piece to the structure. The goal is to build a two-story anti-seismic structure for 500 children.

"The first step took place five years ago soon after the earthquake," said Marie-Denise Fabien. "We began by removing the rubble, burying the dead and placing the children under tent made of tarp and wood. Then we built a closed fence and placed columns and built a metal sheeting roof. We also built the benches paid for by the students of the North Quincy High School Inter-Ac Club.

"Today we have a temporary building," Fabien continued. "The funds collected each year are transferred to the school and are handled by the principal, Professor Jacques. The foundation pays Western Union $15 for every $1,000 transferred. There is no other administrative cost.

"This year will use part of the funds from the benefit build a cistern for the school, complete the toilets and ship the generous donations of backpacks pen pencils and notebooks. We will also make partial payments of teacher's salaries for the first second and third grades. The community of Quincy helps us send this academic year approximately 60 children to school free of charge.

"The Committee thanks each and everyone participating in this endeavor which is changing the lives of many and especially of the children of Haiti for several generations ahead. With God's help and your help we will rebuild. Thank you," added Fabien.
